FIRE SWEEPS BIG AREA IN FORT WORTH

Property Valued At Over Two Millions Destroyed.

One Man Killed and Many Families Homeless.

Burned Section Is Being Patrolled by Guards.

Many People Go To Dallas To Find Shelter.

BUSINESS DISTRICT SAVED.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 3.—Starting in a barn, presumably from a careless-ly thrown cigarette, fire this afternoon destroyed property in the southern portion of Fort Worth conservatively estimated in value to the extent of two and a half million dollars, caused the death of one person, J. J. Newton, of Krum, Tex., and rendered several thousand persons homeless.

The fire originated at Jennings avenue and Petersmith street, in the center of a fashionable residence district, and, fanned by a stiff wind, was beyond control within fifteen minutes after it was discovered.

* * *

Spread Over Many Blocks.

Spreading to the south, it burned its way through thirty-two blocks and continued until it had swept through the yards of the Texas and Pacific railroad, destroying the railroad buildings and a large amount of rolling stock, where the fire practically burned itself out when nothing further remained in the pathway of the flames.

Three church buildings, the Broadway Baptist and Presbyterian and the Swedish chapel, were among the buildings destroyed, as was the Presbyterian sanitarium. The patients of the latter institution were all removed in safety.

* * *

Railroad Shops Burned.

The Texas and Pacific railroad suffered the largest individual loss. Fourteen locomotives were reduced to twisted masses of steel and iron and several hundred box cars, beside the round house, shops and other buildings of the road were destroyed.

Texas and Pacific officials estimate the losses of the road at $165,000, while the damage to the church property is estimated at $200,000.

* * *

Aid From Dallas.

In answer to appeals for aid, special trains bearing fire fighting apparatus were dispatched from Dallas and Weatherford, Tex., but all efforts to check the progress of the flames were without result until the yards of the Texas and Pacific railroad were crossed and the "reservation," a vacant lot of ground on the east, was reached. On the south the Texas and Pacific depot, a stone and steel structure, proved a bulwark which saved the wholesale district.

* * *

Many Persons Homeless.

The fire-swept area to-night is being patrolled by armed guards to prevent looting, while the tired owners of the burned buildings are gathering what they can of their household effects and seeking shelter for the night wherever it can be secured.

The livestock building and auditorium at the fair grounds are furnishing the temporary abode for many, while others are sleeping in vacant houses and still others have accepted the hospitality of Dallas and other nearby cities.

BIG BLAZE IN DALLAS.

Sixty-four Residences and a Private Sanitarium Destroyed.

Dallas, Texas, April 3.—Sixty-four residences and a private sanitarium in Oak Cliff, a suburb of Dallas, were destroyed by fire late to-day, causing a property loss estimated at a quarter of a million dollars. The fire was fanned by a strong southwest wind and before it could be checked had swept through fourteen residence blocks and in the burned area, covers more than a quarter of a mile square of territory, only five buildings remained intact. All of the patients at the sanitarium were removed from the building in safety.

OFFENSES BARRED BY STATUTE OF LIMITATION.

Council Bluffs, Ia., April 3.—J. S. Swenson, post-office inspector, returned from New Orleans to-day. It is charged that J. C. Maybray and others accused of swindling by means of fake sporting events, made their quarters at New Orleans before coming to Council Bluffs, but Mr. Swenson states that all their operations in that city so far as he could learn were several years back and the statute of limitation prevents prosecution.

SON'S SUICIDE LEADS TO DR. POTTER'S DEATH.

Saginaw, Mich., April 3.—Word was received here late to-day of the death on the Ranch San Ysidro, near Santa Barbara, Cal., of Dr. H. C. Potter, founder and builder of the Pere Marquette railroad, banker, financier and manager. Dr. Potter's death was due to a general break-down which set in soon after the suicide of his son, H. C. Potter, Jr., in Detroit last winter.

REMARKABLE MONUMENT TO DAUGHTER, WIFE AND SELF ORDERED BY FARMER

Simple Objects of Everyday Life With Which Girl Was Associated Engraved Upon Shaft, Together With Epitaphs.

Bloomington, Ill., April 3.—[Special.]—In all the cemeteries of the world there probably exists no more fantastic conception than in the rural graveyard of Pleasant Ridge, in Flatt county, a short distance southeast of here. To the memory of a daughter whom he idolized, Hannibal Clark, a wealthy but simple-minded farmer, erected this remarkable shaft of granite, and it is attracting wide attention. He was so affected by her death that he survived but a short time after he had made provision for the erection of the strange monument.

Not only did he stipulate what he wished engraved concerning the daughter, but also concerning his wife and himself. The shaft therefore answers as a memorial for all three. Less interesting are the epitaphs concerning the farmer and his wife, than those relating to the daughter.

It was the freakish desire of the farmer to place upon the monument a replica of all that the girl loved on earth. He left instructions that no expense be spared to inscribe upon the stone a miniature reproduction of the objects upon which she lavished her affection. In obedience thereto the stonemasons chiseled in bold relief no less than fifty symbols. Nearly every inch of the space is taken up with these queer figures. They include a house; fence; plow, grain cradle, rooster; hen; turkey; cow; horse; side saddle; pair of scissors; thimble; violin; copies of love letters; owl; fish, etc. Everything that appertained to the farm, domestic life and outdoor pleasures, was, where possible, reproduced upon this unique monument.

The inscriptions under the names of the eccentric farmer and his wife are also remarkable. Under the name of Hannibal Clark appears this verse:

The blackbirds sing sweet on the gay walnut bough,
Their songs often cheered him while holding the plow,
And the robins above him hopped light on the mold,
For he fed them with crumbs when the season was cold.

But the strains of his violin forever are stilled,
And the void in our hearts can never be filled.

Of the wife, Matilda, it is written: "Of a sunny disposition, a devoted wife, a loving mother, a steadfast friend, a lover of books and of home, and in sunshine or shade she did what she could."

It is said that some of the relatives seriously objected to recording the idiosyncrasies of the father and daughter upon a monument in this manner, but it was decided that the wishes of the old man must be respected, no matter how unconventional.

TO PICTURE SHELL'S IMPACT.

[Washington Special to New York Herald.]

Rear Admiral Newton E. Mason, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, will shortly conduct an interesting and novel test at the proving grounds to determine the exact angle at which a twelve-inch shell hits the side of a battleship when fired from a rifle 8,000 yards distant. By an ingenious contrivance the shell, just before it hits the target, will cause to be operated a heavily armored camera so that a picture of the shell at the moment of impact may be obtained.

The purpose of the experiment is to determine definitely the position of the shell as it travels over its trajectory. It is not known whether the shell keeps the same angle to the earth from the time it leaves the muzzle of the gun until it hits the target, or whether the shell follows its trajectory so that the nose strikes the target a direct instead of a glancing blow. There has been much discussion on this subject.

The plan is to have constructed a target representing a section of the side of a battleship and to place before this plate successive screens of canvas or half-inch pines. The shell when fired will cut through these successive screens before it hits the target and the size and appearance of the holes will show, it is said, the position of the shell when it goes through. An arrangement of wires on one of the screens will connect with a camera so that when these wires are cut by the shell the lens is thrown open automatically at the moment the shell strikes the target.

In 1895 an effort was made by the Bureau of Ordnance to obtain a picture of the impact of a heavy shell. The first picture was taken a trifle late and showed a ball of fire. At the second attempt the camera was smashed to pieces by flying fragments of the shell.

A PERSISTENT INVENTOR.

[Boston Transcript.]

Charles Goodyear is not the only inventor who might turn his face to the wall to die saying of the tardy recognition of his efforts, "I die happy—others can get rich."

Goodyear's efforts to introduce the use of vulcanized rubber were no more magic than the stories of a dozen other inventors. There was a man named Simpson in Missouri who discovered that gutta percha was a non-conductor of electricity. He borrowed money of one Amos Kendall to make his application for a patent. It was rejected over and over, rich companies fighting his claim. But he had "sand;" he never weakened. It was just after the Civil War that he made his last fight. He had no money—not a dollar—but he started from St. Louis for Washington afoot.

He would not beg, but made his way half across the continent by sawing wood, hoeing corn or doing any work that came to hand. In one place he robbed a scarecrow of a pair of pants and a hat, leaving his own more ragged garments in their place. In Pittsburg he had to work as a truck driver till he could earn enough to repair his shoes and take him on his way. And all the time he believed stubbornly in himself and in his invention. His own words were:

"When I came over the tops of the Alleghenies I saw the sun rising, and I knelt down and thanked God for my life and asked him to let me get my patent. He promised me on the spot, and I never had a moment's doubt after that."

Arriving in Washington, he got a living as a day laborer on the stone foundation of the patent office, and from that vantage ground he fought his claim through the office and the courts and got his patent. The Western Union Telegraph Company gave him $100,000 down for the privilege of using it.

DAUGHTER OF MAN WHO MADE FAUST FAMOUS TO BE HERE.

Rosabelle Morrison, daughter of the man who did so much toward making the role of Faust one of the best known on the stage, doubtless will be given a warm greeting when she comes to the Masonic next week. Miss Morrison has made a name for herself independent of whatever aid she might have been given because of the fact that she is her father's daughter.

Of a personality which charms, with an inherited dramatic talent which is fast putting her into the front ranks and with a company which is in itself a recommendation to theater-goers, the coming production most probably will attract big houses.

The Weather.

Indiana—Increasing cloudiness and warmer Sunday; Monday rain and cooler.

Tennessee—Increasing cloudiness Sunday; showers and cooler at night or Monday.

THE LATEST.

Fire originating in a barn, presumably from a carelessly dropped cigarette, started a conflagration in Fort Worth, Tex., which swept over many blocks in the residence section of the city, destroying four churches, more than 200 dwelling houses and the shops and roundhouse of the Texas Pacific railroad. One life is believed to have been lost and several persons were seriously injured. Many families were left homeless as a result of the fire, and the aggregate of the losses probably will reach into the millions. A strip of unoccupied territory known as the Texas Pacific reservation saved the business section of the city from destruction.

With no more than a corporal's guard on hand at any time during the day, the debate on the Payne tariff bill in the House proceeded wearily yesterday. Two weeks already have been consumed in general discussion of the measure and the belief is that it is now concluded. Every member is looking forward to the bringing in of a rule on Monday next which will provide an opportunity to vote on a limited number of schedules with debate confined to five minutes for and against each amendment.

The people of Naples, Italy are showing great interest in the arrival of former President Roosevelt. The brevity of Mr. Roosevelt's stay, however, will compel the abandonment of many of the arrangements which have been made for his entertainment. He probably will be able to remain in Naples for only a few hours, for the latest reports say the Hamburg will not reach there until Monday afternoon or evening.

The body of 10-year-old Harold Moon, who disappeared from Flint, Mich., on February 27, and who was supposed to have been kidnaped, was found yesterday morning in Thread Lake. Rewards aggregating $1,300 had been offered for the boy's return to his home. He was evidently drowned while skating.

The House Committee on Ways and Means at a full meeting yesterday decided to amend the Payne tariff bill by removing the duty on tea and the countervailing duty on coffee. The committee also struck out the proviso in the lumber schedule fixing a countervailing duty.

Representative Victor Murdock, of Kansas, has introduced a bill in Congress calling upon the States to refund the money that Andrew Jackson distributed among them in 1836, when the surplus from the sale of public lands reached $38,000,000.

ROOSEVELT'S STAY IN NAPLES TO BE BRIEF

POPULACE GREATLY DISAPPOINTED AS RESULT.

HAMBURG IS EXPECTED TO ARRIVE MONDAY.

BIG STEAMER BEHIND TIME.

Naples, April 3.—As the time for the arrival here of Theodore Roosevelt approaches—he is coming on board the steamer Hamburg from New York and is expected Monday afternoon—the interest and excitement of the people of Naples increases. In the belief that Mr. Roosevelt would be here for the better part of two days all kinds of arrangements were made for his entertainment, and the disappointment is correspondingly great as it is realized that through delay to the Hamburg he will have only a few hours here.

A magnificent apartment in one of the best hotels has been prepared for Mr. Roosevelt's use. The rooms afford a beautiful view of the bay of Naples, Mount Vesuvius and Capri, and it is hoped the distinguished traveler will be able to make use of this apartment for at least a few hours.

It is now said that the Hamburg will not arrive here until late Monday afternoon. It is doubtful if Mr. Roosevelt meets the Duchess of Aosta. His stay will be too short.

The Prefect of Naples has given orders that a special detachment of picked Caribineers be on duty at the dock to protect Mr. Roosevelt, not only from any possible assault, but also from the importunities of the population.

Both the Hamburg and the steamer Admiral will be surrounded by police boats, and it is deemed that these precautions preclude any untoward occurrence. Motor boats and automobiles have been put at the disposal of Mr. Roosevelt for excursions by sea and by land.

The municipality of Naples will greet Mr. Roosevelt by the presentation of an address. The Mayor has appointed three Aldermen to receive the former President of the United States and extend to him the welcome of the city. Various other committees of welcome have been formed and are eager to show their admiration for Mr. Roosevelt.

Emperor William has instructed the German Consul here to board the steamer Hamburg when she comes into port, to greet Mr. Roosevelt and present him with a message of greeting from His Majesty.

A number of Americans have arrived here to greet Mr. Roosevelt. The American residents on the Island of Capri have chartered a steamer especially for the trip over.

Many earthquake refugees from Messina will send Mr. Roosevelt their cards as a token of gratitude for the American help to the earthquake sufferers.

Several boxes of cartridges ordered in London by Mr. Roosevelt have been sent here for delivery and two large packages of letters also are awaiting his arrival.

The steamship people say the Hamburg probably will come in at 8 o'clock Monday morning.

Ill of Pneumonia.

Mrs. Anita Raggio, aged 33 years, mother of Capt. William Raggio, who is chief operator at the fire tower, is seriously ill at her home, 1929 West Main street, of pneumonia. She was taken ill about a week ago, and her condition has been gradually growing worse. She is one of the oldest Italian residents of Louisville.

Aged Citizen Passes Away.

Richmond, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—Col. David Irvine, one of the best-known citizens of this city and member of a distinguished family, died here this afternoon after a long illness from a complication of diseases in his 79th year. He is survived by one sister, Mrs. William Irvine, this city.

The title of "Reverend" was first used in England in 1557.

LABOR TROUBLES

MAY BE SETTLED AT MEETING THIS AFTERNOON.

Committees Representing the Two Factions To Hold Conference At Germania Hall.

Two committees, one representing the local Federation of Labor and the other representing local unions whose delegates withdrew or have been expelled from the federation, will meet in Germania Hall at 10 o'clock this morning for the purpose of finally adjusting the labor troubles in Louisville. The conference is a result of a visit here of Stuart Reid, of Chicago, who is there at the instance of President Gompers, of the American Federation of Labor.

President Gompers vested in Mr. Reid power to settle the differences, instructing him to fully investigate charges that have been preferred in an informal way by both sides. Since beginning the investigation Mr. Reid has kept his own counsel as to the result. He said last night that about the only question involved in the trouble is whether or not the local union delegates now out of the federation were expelled legally or whether their expulsion was without warrant.

John Young, president of the local federation, said last night that he thinks Mr. Reid will hold that the delegates who withdrew did so without cause, and that the expulsion of them, after they had withdrawn, was legal.

"If Mr. Reid so holds," said President Young, "that will settle the matter, as charges cannot be preferred by anyone not a delegate. If they were legally expelled they are not delegates and have no word in the federation, and if they voluntarily withdrew the same fact exists."

The faction known as the belligerents is having little to say about the matter, but it was mainly through this faction that President Gompers has taken the case in hand. The disgruntled ones claim that all the rules and regulations governing a federation of labor have been violated, and that they withdrew their delegates because the officers at the head of the local federation have attempted to run things "with a high hand," without regard for the rights of delegates who saw fit to differ with them on any material matter.

Mr. Reid insists that peace will be restored, and expressed the belief that today's meeting will heal the breach.

Venerable Woman Dies.

Milton, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—Mrs. Sallie McIntire, wife of James G. McIntire, died after a week's illness of pneumonia. Mrs. McIntire was a member of one of Trimble's oldest families. She was 77 years old, and is survived by her husband and six children.

Million Dollar Fire In Chile.

Santiago, Chile, April 3.—A serious fire that started to-day in the Chile Huerfanos destroyed the cable office before the flames could be gotten under control. The losses are placed at $1,000,000.

The depth of the earth's atmosphere is from 120 to 200 miles.

FOR Sour Stomach AND Belching YOU SHOULD TAKE Kodol

These symptoms result from indigestion and dyspepsia—brought on by improper eating. If you will merely take a little Kodol, now and then, you can eat what you want—and you will not have any digestive trouble. Kodol digests your food as soon as it reaches your stomach. It does this because it contains every element essential to proper food digestion. Thus you see that Kodol merely duplicates Nature's process, in your stomach, when your stomach, through over-loading or ill-treatment of one sort or another, is unable to do its own work as Nature intended. This is why Kodol is such a good preparation, for anyone who has any digestive trouble, or is likely to have—as most of us are.

Our Guarantee. Get a dollar bottle of Kodol. If you are not benefited—the druggist will at once return your money. Don't hesitate; any druggist will sell you Kodol on these terms. The dollar bottle contains 2½ times as much as the 50c bottle. Kodol is prepared in the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

ABOUT 400 ENTRIES

FOR COMING HORSE SHOW AT ATLANTIC CITY.

Prize List Heaviest Ever Offered and a Large Attendance Is Expected.

Atlantic City, N. J., April 3.—[Special.]—It really looks as if the popularity of the Atlantic City Horse Show to be held on the big pier over old ocean's breakers had reached the point where the only exhibitor on the Eastern coast who has not made an entry is King Neptune and his sea horses!

It is safe to say that the Easter Horse Show of the Atlantic City Association on Young's new concrete pier April 8, 9 and 10 will be the most successful in the annals of the organization.

All the arrangements are being perfected on schedule time by Philander E. Lane, the contractor who built the million-dollar pier and the auditorium will be the most novel and handsome setting for a horse show ever seen in America.

The attendance of leaders of society and lovers of horses from all sections of the country will be the largest ever seen here, and the prize list is the heaviest ever offered by the association.

About sixty owners of blue-blooded horses have entered over one hundred animals, many of which are blue-ribbon winners here and elsewhere. In the seventy-three classes, the total number of entries in all events being about 400.

The Atlantic City Horse Show of 1909 will be the equal in almost every respect to that of the famous Madison Square Garden Show, of New York, and it is now an absolute and assured fact that it will be the largest and finest in point of entries alone in the history of the association.

COME-BACK MONEY FOR PUBLIC LANDS

CONGRESSMAN MURDOCK INTRODUCES PET MEASURE.

WANTS AMOUNT LOANED TWENTY-SIX STATES PAID.

KENTUCKY OWES $1,443,757.

Washington, April 3.—[Special.]—If a bill introduced by Representative Murdock, of Kansas, becomes a law (and it never will) the State of Kentucky will have to pay into the Treasury $1,443,757, having been distributed among twenty-five other States in 1836, during Jackson's Administration. A total of $38,000,000 is involved, and Mr. Murdock says that in the Treasury there are written promises from Twenty-six State to pay back when directed. Mr. Murdock says that New York has the $4,000,000 allotted to it loaned out at interest, but the other States have spent the money. In speaking of the bill Congressman Murdock said:

"I introduced that bill two years ago and no one paid any attention to it. Since the special session began I received a letter asking me what had become of my bill to have the money repaid, so I reintroduced the bill. Evidently the public mind is in a state now to consider the national finances. I shall do everything in my power to press the bill for passage, if not at the special session, then at the regular session."

In 1836 there was a surplus in the Federal Treasury of $28,000,000, due largely to the sale of public land in the Central West. Congress authorized the distribution of this money among the States upon their promising to repay it upon demand of the Secretary of the Treasury. After $28,000,000 had been distributed, but before the fourth installment had been paid, Congress passed another law postponing payment of the final installment, and incorporating as a "joker" a proviso that the money distributed should be subject to the demand of Congress instead of the Secretary of the Treasury. It is said the matter of the repayment was called to Mr. Murdock's attention by the claim of Virginia a few years ago to the fourth installment, still undistributed.

The twenty-six States received the three installments in proportion to their representation in Congress. The amount in round figures deposited with them was as follows:

Maine, $956,000; Maryland, $936,000; New Hampshire, $669,000; Vermont, $669,000; Massachusetts, $1,338,000; Connecticut, $765,000; Rhode Island, $382,000; New York, $4,015,000; Pennsylvania, $2,865,000; New Jersey, $765,000; Ohio, $2,007,000; Indiana, $860,000; Illinois, $478,000; Michigan, $287,000; Virginia, $2,199,000; North Carolina, $1,444,000; South Carolina, $1,051,000; Georgia, $1,051,000; Alabama, $669,000; Louisiana, $478,000; Mississippi, $382,000; Tennessee, $1,434,000; Kentucky, $1,434,000; Missouri, $382,000; Arkansas, $287,000; Delaware, $287,000.

DUSTY OCCUPATIONS LEAD TO CONSUMPTION.

Intelligent Ventilation Would Result In Saving 22,000 Lives Annually.

Washington, April 3.—An annual saving of more than 22,000 lives, representing a reduction in the consumption death rate from 2.2 per 1,000 to 1.5 per 1,000, would result from intelligent methods of ventilation and dust removal in the United States. This opinion is expressed in a bulletin issued to-day by the Bureau of Labor, which says mortality from consumption among workers in dusty trades is from two to three times as great as the general death rate from the disease.

Of deaths from all causes among males over fifteen years of age in the United States, 14.8 per cent. are from consumption, while, according to reliable figures, the death rate from the disease among men engaged in dusty occupations ranges from 24.8 per cent. for those exposed to vegetable fiber dust to 36.9 per cent. for those exposed to metallic dust. The occupation showing the highest consumption motality was grinders, among whom 49.2 per cent. of all deaths were from that disease.

While the death rate from consumption for males between the ages of 25 and 34 was 31.3 per cent. of the total, it was 47.6 per cent. among men exposed to mineral dust; 53.9 per cent. among those exposed to vegetable fiber dust; 57.3 per cent. among those exposed to metallic dust and 55.3 per cent. among those exposed to animal and mixed fiber dust.

IN MEMORIAM.

Resolution of Respect On the Death of Mr. E. C. Bohne.

Mr. Bohne was one of the founders of the Home and Savings Fund Company, which was the outgrowth of his ideas and those of his associates. It was their aim to establish a company that would assist the wage-earner, or the person of moderate salary or income of Louisville, in securing homes at the lowest cost and on terms of easy payment. The plan was philanthropic as well as patriotic, for they maintained that to encourage the habit of saving and the ownership of homes led to good citizenship in the nation, State and city.

Many thousand residents of Louisville, particularly of the working class, have profited by the excellent measures advocated by Mr. Bohne, and to-day they give acclaim to his unselfish purpose, his goodness of heart and his individual labor in their behalf.

Since its beginning, Mr. Bohne was the treasurer of the company up to the time of his death, during which time he handled millions of dollars and always accounted most accurately for every penny—and those years of service he gave without pay, for he desired to be of mutual assistance to his fellowman. His compensation, as he expressed it, was in the love and respect of humanity; if he could "pluck a thistle and in its stead plant a flower," then life was worth the living.

That he was of sterling character and unquestioned honesty is attested by the many positions of trust, both public and private, held by him at different periods of his life, and since his departure his adopted city is the poorer for his going.

Now, in appreciation of his service and in commemoration of his splendid traits of character, we, constituting the board of directors of the Home and Savings Fund Company, Resolve:

First—That we have heard with profound sorrow of the sudden death of our treasurer, Mr. E. C. Bohne, our associate and friend, and we hereby make public expression of our appreciation of his long, faithful and efficient service to the company and of his many splendid qualities as a man and a citizen.

Second—That in his death the board of directors of the Home and Savings Fund Company has suffered the loss of one whose connection with the company for many years was of inestimable value, and in whose judgment in all matters pertaining to its welfare the directors had unlimited confidence.

Third—That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the board, a copy be sent to his family and a copy be published in the daily papers.

In Memory of My Darling Wife, Lida C. Gosnell, Who Fell Asleep, April 7, 1907.

The years will go with heavy tread,
The summers bloom and die,
The winters with their icy touch
Will pass me sadly by;
But whether in the days of bloom,
Or in the winter's chill,
Your name, your face, your memory,
Is living with me still.

Two years of grief have not effaced
The sting that parting gave,
For still my heart, with wistful love,
Looks out beyond the grave;
And when I turn from worldly things
I find, in spite of death,
The love that made us one for aye,
Has turned a fadeless wreath.

HUSBAND.

In Memory of My Beloved Husband, Leo Hite Pierce, Who Died March 31, 1907.

Dear husband, idol of my heart,
Companion of past years,
You left behind a broken heart
That has no speech but tears.
In vain I pray to Heaven above,
And humbly bow the knee;
I cannot live without you, Love,
Through all the days to be.

WIFE.

In Loving Remembrance of Katie Belle Brooks (Nee Sidel), Who Departed This Life April 1, 1908.

Hour by hour we saw you fade
And slowly sink away,
Yet in our hearts we often prayed
That you might longer stay
The grief that filled our sorrowing hearts
'Tis yours alone to know.
We gave our Katie up to God
To-day one year ago.

BIG SHOW BEGINS ONE WEEK FROM TO-MORROW

ARMORY TURNED OVER TO THE EXHIBITORS YESTERDAY.

DECORATIONS MAY BE COMPLETED BY WEDNESDAY.

PRESIDENT TAFT NOT COMING.

There probably has never been witnessed a scene of greater activity at the armory than that disclosed in the preparations for the Southern Electrical and Industrial Exposition, which will begin there at noon one week from to-morrow. The armory was turned over to the exhibitors early yesterday morning, the last bit of carpenters' painters' and electrical workers' work having been completed Friday night.

Early yesterday morning there was a rush of exhibitors to the armory and wagonload after wagonload of material was hustled into the big building, and by 6 o'clock last night, when the doors were closed for the day, twenty booths had been fully completed and more than fifty had been gotten well under way. From now on this branch of the exposition will furnish an interesting spectacle, although the public is no longer being admitted to the armory. Three have so far been contracted for 200 exhibits, and only about twenty spaces remain. The expenses of the officials of the exposition during the last week has caused them to predict that by Wednesday night space will be at a premium in the big show. This prediction is based on the fact that many large manufacturers who were holding out hastened to get in, having reached the conclusion that remaining out would cause them to lose an opportunity that is really worth the while.

The booths have all been wired. In fact, the entire wiring of the big building is now completed, and yesterday there were a score of decorators at work on the individual booths. The contractors having charge of the main cloth decorations will not go into the armory until to-morrow morning. Their plans, however, have been carefully laid and they have agreed to have the decorations completed by Wednesday night.

The big electric clock which will swing from one side of the armory to the other on the south end of the exposition is rapidly nearing completion. The wiring has been finished and the dial was painted yesterday. The pendulum stem was completed several days ago. The first test of the clock will be made Tuesday night.

Brinson B. Davis, the architect, and Edward Meglemry, representing the Fiscal Court, went through the armory yesterday and investigated the work which had been done there. They found things in good shape, and wherever there had been an infraction of the rules of the armory corrections were made. They were few and slight.

The exhibit committee will meet Tuesday to arrange plans for facilitating the work of installing the exhibits in the exposition. It is proposed to have a sub-committee on the floor throughout every day prior to the opening of the exposition to hurry the work along, so that when the opening gong sounds Monday, a week, things will be in a state of absolute completeness.

The officials of the exposition have given up all hope of having President Taft here in person to open the exposition. There appeared to be some probability of his appearing in Indianapolis on April 12 and it had been hoped to get him here first. Arrangements have been made to have the exposition connected electrically with the White House and at the appointed time to have President Taft touch the button which will start in motion the machinery on the floor of the exposition.

Preparations are being made to send invitations to all of the high officials of the State and city and to various other important personages to officiate at the opening of the exposition. These invitations probably will be out Tuesday or Wednesday.

The committee on street lighting reports rapid progress in that work. The wires are being strung and there will be put in place this week the Eiblight bulbs which have been brought from New York especially for this purpose. This sort of light has never been seen in Louisville. In fact, the lights are being rented from the firm in New York.

DAIRYMEN HOLD A MEETING AT LEXINGTON

PROPOSITION MADE FOR SCORING THEIR PRODUCTS.

DR. J. C. CARRICK POINTS OUT ADVANTAGES.

SOME OBJECTIONS MADE.

Lexington, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—A meeting of the Dairymen's Association of Fayette county was held here to-day for the purpose of considering the proposition of having the product of each dairy scored according to the rules laid down by the State Board of Health.

Dr. J. C. Carrick, president of the Lexington Board of Health, made an address in which he pointed out the advantages which would result to both the dairymen and their customers. He said the record would be kept in the office of the Board of Health and persons who desired to buy milk or butter could there readily learn from the score card what was the percentage of each dairy.

By this means the customer could obtain the best milk and butter, while each dairyman would gain a reputation and custom in accordance with the merit of his production. Prof. J. J. Hooper, of the Kentucky Experiment Station, explained to the meeting the methods of the score card. The dairies are scored not only for the proportion of butter-fat, but on such points as the healthfulness of the surroundings, food, water, location and construction of stables, utensils and milkroom. Some of the dairymen at the meeting expressed objections to the adoption of the score system and no definite action was taken in the matter. A committee was appointed to confer with Mayor Skain with regard to placing a city license upon dairymen, the license not to exceed $100.

Publishers' League Meets.

Members of the Eighth District Publishers' League met here this afternoon for the purpose of considering plans for the entertainment of delegates at the annual convention to be held at Estill Springs on June 28. A number of plans were discussed and subcommittees appointed, and it is expected that the attractions offered to visitors to the convention will exceed those given at any previous convention since the league was organized four years ago. D. M. Hutton, of Harrodsburg, president of the league, presided, and State President Timothy Needham, of Carlisle, was also in attendance, giving his advice and assistance. Among those who attended the meeting were: A. D. Miller, Richmond; Harry McCarty, Nicholasville; James Sowers, Valley View; Louis Landram, Richmond; C. E. Woods, Richmond; Stanley Frost, Berea; Edward Shinnick, Shelbyville; J. R. Paxton, Lawrenceburg; George Dogbny, Danville; Judge N. H. McNew, Carlisle; Charles T. White, Harrodsburg.

Famous Colleges.

At chapel exercises of Transylvania University yesterday President Crossfield continued his report of observations of famous colleges he had recently visited, his subject yesterday being Hiram College, the alma mater of President James A. Garfield.

He said that Hiram College is located about thirty-five miles southeast of Cleveland, O. Hiram itself is made up of a few dozen houses and is about two miles from the Erie railroad. It is reached, too, by the Eastern Ohio traction line. It is a college community located in the country. President Crossfield also said that when young Garfield entered college it was with the determination to be the first man in the school. He did not, at first, however, make good in all his classes, as he had expected. He noticed that a certain student kept steadily ahead of him in their work. Observing the light in the room of this student he found that this man worked about fifteen minutes longer each night than he worked. Adding to his own study period just this time he soon found himself the first in his class, graduating with first honors. Later he returned to his alma mater and became its principal. The home in which President Garfield lived then is to-day pointed out to the visitor with interest.

By "FOOTLIGHTS."

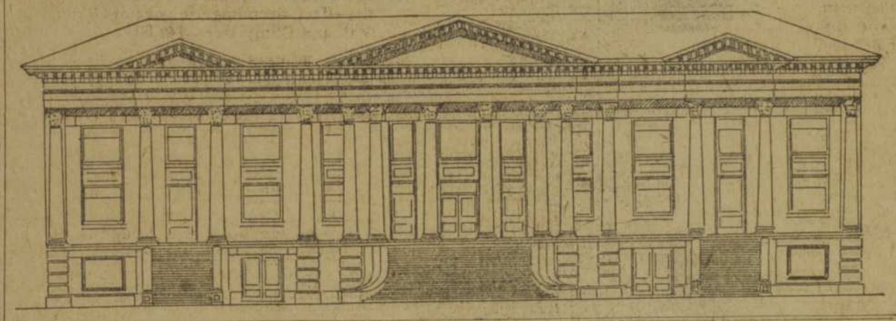

Glau and his overweight chorus from the "Aeroplane" Company have returned to New York in what may be described as greatly reduced circumstances. Not as to finances, let it be known, nor as to numbers, glory be, but in avoirdupois—that is to say, gross flesh. The entire galaxy has lost out in this respect, much to its advantage.

It seems the people out West will support slim ballerinas, and no other, and our famous "balloon chorus" carried, so to speak, no weight with them. They treated that prize collection of fat New York beauties with an unprecedented coldness. Consequently Glau faced the problem of reducing the entire front and rear rows at once or shipping them back—"excess" baggage. It was a terrific job, as all who saw the "Aeroplane" before it left this tolerant town will admit, but our ingenious townsman tackled it and succeeded—broke all records, in fact. And thereby hangs a tale worthy of any fat lady's attention.

Glau didn't rehearse his flock into shape, nor starve them into line, nor yet worry them, verbally, into shadows. He paid salaries regularly and let them eat and drink as they listed. He simply hung up a new rule in the dressing-rooms to the effect that every lady less than five foot seven who weighed in excess of 150 pounds must take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime (or about where her bedtime ought to be), of the following: One-half ounce Marmola, ½ ounce Fluid Extract Cascara Aromatic, and 5½ ounces Peppermint Water.

They did it and in a month averaged a loss of a pound a day apiece. "That's a dandy receipt," says Glau. "Simple, pleasant, harmless and a worker from the word 'go.' Wish I could get a railroad rate reducer half as good."

SUGGESTED AS THE FRONT ELEVATION OF THE PROPOSED NEW FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH

TO REMAIN HERE.

FRED H. BEHRING NOT GOING TO ATLANTA, GA.

Announcement Made Yesterday That He Will Continue In Present Position With Southern.

Contrary to announcements made several months ago, Fred H. Behring, for several years identified with the Southern Railway Company in Louisville, will remain in this city as the company's assistant general freight agent, with offices in the Columbia building. Several months ago, when Mr. Behring went to Atlanta, Ga., to fill a similar position, it was announced that he had been honored by the officials of the Southern with a promotion and that a new man would be sent to Louisville to assume charge of the office here. Mr. Behring has just returned to Louisville, however, and the official statement is made that he will be back in his old place Monday.

Rumors have been current for some little time past that a local man in the company's offices would be promoted to Mr. Behring's place and considerable speculation was indulged in as to who would be the lucky one. The reports, however, were set at rest yesterday when an official circular was issued by R. L. McKellar, the assistant freight traffic manager here, which reads as follows:

"Louisville, Ky., April 1, 1909.—Effective this date, Fred H. Behring will resume his duties as assistant general freight agent at Louisville, Ky. All reports, correspondence, etc., pertaining to the Louisville division, heretofore addressed to F. S. Reigel, chief clerk, should hereafter be addressed to Mr. Behring. R. L. McKELLAR."

It was explained yesterday that Mr. Behring was called to Atlanta several months ago to assist Randall Clifton, who succeeded George Browder as assistant freight traffic manager, Mr. Browder having been promoted to the uniform classification committee. It is said that Mr. Clifton has become thoroughly familiarized now with the system in his new office under the tutorship of the Louisville man, which accounts for Mr. Behring's return.

COLORED INSTITUTE LARGELY ATTENDED.

Interesting Addresses Made To Teachers—Colored Choral Society Sings Several Selections.

Nearly every teacher employed in the colored schools of the city of Louisville was present yesterday at the teachers' institute at the Central High School, Ninth and Magazine streets. It was one of the most interesting and pleasing sessions that has been held during the institute season.

Prof. G. M. McClellan was the principal speaker. His subject was "Musical Advancement Among Colored People." He spoke of the many colored composers, placing much stress upon the work of S. Coleridge Taylor and Harry Burleigh, of New York.

The Musergia Singing Society, which is composed of some of the best colored singers in the city, gave several selections. The choral club closed with the famous negro melody, "O, My Good Lord, Show Me the Way." The last selection was highly appreciated and brought forth an encore.

Through an invitation from Dr. W. H. Perry, president of the institute, Prof. William J. McConathy, principal of the Louisville Normal School, gave a talk on "How to Teach Geography." Miss Adeline Zackert gave a round table talk on "Telling Stories in a Primary Grade." Prof. John T. Clark gave a short lecture on "Physiology in the High School."

It was decided to have Prof. Lewis Moore, dean of the Teachers' College, Howard University, Washington, D. C., address the teachers on Saturday night, April 17, at Quinn Chapel church, Ninth and Walnut streets.

STILL AT SEA CONCERNING CHURCH SITE.

Meeting of Trustees of the First Christian Church Results In Nothing Tangible.

The trustees of the First Christian church and the site committee held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the Rev. Dr. E. L. Powell's office, but no definite conclusion was reached in the matter of selecting a site for the proposed new church edifice. Three members of the board of trustees of the church were absent from the meeting. Another meeting will be held next Saturday.

Owen Gathright, a member of the site committee, said last night that it probably will be some time before the trustees are able to effect a purchase of a site for the new church. He said that those to whom the matter has been intrusted are as far away from the real object as they can possibly be.

BROKERAGE FIRM FORCED TO SUSPEND

JOHN DICKINSON & CO. IN FINANCIAL STRAITS.

FAILURE ATTRIBUTED TO ADVANCE IN WHEAT.

BIG CUSTOMER "LAID DOWN."

Chicago, April 3.—Announcement was made on the Board of Trade to-day of the suspension of the firm of John Dickinson & Co., grain, stock and provision brokers. In addition to its membership on the Board of Trade the company also held membership on the Consolidated Stock Exchange of New York.

The firm also had from 250 to 300 offices scattered throughout the country. The liabilities were said to be in the neighborhood of $250,000.

According to J. T. Murphy, manager of the Chicago office, the firm had been doing a good business here, but the trouble, he said, grew out of the stock business in the East. He stated that Mr. Dickinson, who is now in New York, had wired him that the suspension was only temporary.

Reports were circulated among the stock brokers and Board of Trade men that the suspension of business by the firm was due to friction between C. W. Pardridge, father of Princess Eugalitcheff, and some of the Dickinson family, and that the crisis came in the sudden withdrawal of more than $100,000 from the Dickinson concern.

"The report that there is any friction betwen myself and John Dickinson is false," said Mr. Pardridge when interviewed to-day. "It is true that I have drawn out some money, but in my dealings I have put in and withdrawn money repeatedly. If $100,000 or $200,000 would straighten out my friend Dickinson's trouble I would gladly go down into my pocket and help him. Our relations are most cordial."

BIG CUSTOMER "WELCHED."

Representative of Firm Says Advance In Wheat Caused Failure.

New York, April 3.—The suspension of the firm of John Dickinson & Co. of Chicago and New York, announced on the floor of the Consolidated Exchange here to-day, was said by a representative of the firm in this city to have been due to the recent advance in wheat, and to the fact that one of the firm's large customers in Chicago "laid down" on the firm yesterday. This customer, according to the spokesman for the house here, failed to furnish additional margins when called on, thus forcing the suspension.

The firm's commitments in this city are not believed to be heavy, as while it transacted considerable business on the Consolidated Exchange, its principal operators were on the Chicago Board of Trade. No statement as to the financial condition of the firm was issued here.

The brokerage firm of John Dickinson & Co., of New York and Chicago, whose suspension was announced today, was the representative on the Chicago Board of Trade and the New York Consolidated Stock Exchange of the brokerage firm of Herman F. Monroe & Co. Mr. Monroe, of the local firm, said to-day that none of his customers would lose a cent, and that the suspension of Dickinson & Co. would probably be only temporary. Mr. Monroe said he was negotiating with another firm, and that there would be no interruption to his business. Mr. Monroe is also a member of Chicago Board of Trade.

RUMORS OF ANOTHER OUTBREAK IN COLOMBIA.

Uprising Against the Administration of President Reyes Reported From Willemstad.

Willemstad, April 3.—Rumors have reached here of a revolutionary outbreak against the administration of President Reyes, of Colombia, in the vicinity of Rio Hacha, a seaport on the Caribbean. Gen. Iguaran is said to be the leader of the uprising.

Evidences of political unrest in the Colombian republic were recorded some three weeks ago as a result of the effort of the administration to have the three-sided treaty between Colombia, Panama and the United States ratified by the existing assembly.

The people objected to this body, which is entirely appointive, taking any step of this kind and insisted that the matter be referred to a national congress to be elected in July. The Government acquiesced and popular elections have been called.

Dispatches received from Bogota four days ago said that the entire republic was tranquil.

PERSONAL EFFECTS OF W. F. DOWNS ATTACHED.

Baltimore, Md., April 3.—Forty suits of clothes, ten overcoats, thirty pairs of shoes, eight hats, large quantities of cigars, wines and liquors and hundreds of uncashed race tickets were among the things found to-day in the residence of William F. Downs, the former stock clerk in the office of the City Register, when search was made by the police on behalf of the State's Attorney's office. The most important find, however, is said to be two bank deposit slips. The house and contents have been attached by the city, as have also two racehorses owned by Downs.

TWO-CENT-FARE CASE UNDER ADVISEMENT.

Charleston, W. Va., April 3.—Argument in the proceedings before the Circuit Court of this district to test the constitutionality of the 2-cent fare law in this State was concluded to-day by Attorney General Conley for the State and George E. Price for the railroad. Judge Burdett announced that he wanted some time for consideration and would hand down his opinion "at the earliest possible date."

Many Miners On Strike.

Winnipeg, Man., April 3.—Special dispatches received here to-day from the coal regions of Alberta and British Columbia state that with the exception of the mines operated by the Crows Nest Pass Coal Company all the miners employed in the Lethbridge, Bankhead, Maple Leaf, Passburg, Blairmore, Hill Crest, Lille and Colemar mines are on strike. The miners are q[illegible]

Two Killed In Shooting Affray.

Hazelhurst, Ga., April 3.—Eugene and J. L. Williams, brothers, were shot down on the street here to-day by V. T. Stokes, J. L. Williams being probably fatally hurt. The brothers are members of the firm of Jarman & Williams and the shooting resulted from a quarrel over a check.

Fortune Telling

Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health.

The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 40 years, been curing delicate, weak, pain-wracked women, by the hundreds of thousands and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to indelicate questionings and offensively repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as sacredly confidential. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Great Family Doctor Book, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in Plain English hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. Sent free, in plain wrapper to any address on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or in cloth binding for 31 stamps.

THE HENRY HUTT CALENDARS FOR APRIL are now being distributed. They are very pretty, and we wish every one to have one of them. They are free as long as the supply lasts, and you are requested to ask for one of them when in the store.

KEATS-SHELLEY HOUSE AT ROME OPENED

KING VICTOR EMANUEL ATTENDS MEMORIAL EXERCISES.

MANY NOTED BRITONS AND AMERICANS PRESENT.

SHRINE FOR ENGLISH POETS.

Rome, April 3.—The Keats-Shelley memorial house, which is situated in the Piazza dia Spagni, in this city, the house in which Keats died, was inaugurated to-day and opened to the public. King Victor Emanuel, the American Ambassador, Lloyd C. Griscom, and the British Ambassador, Sir J. Rennell Redd, were among those who officiated at the ceremonies. The purchase of the house was effected two years ago by a committee composed largely of Americans, with which the late Edmund Clarence Stedman and Robert U. Johnson were associated.

The King showed great appreciation of the efforts of the committee, which was instrumental in providing the memorial to the great poets, and inspected each room minutely. He expressed warm praise for the initiative of the Americans who furnished one of the rooms, and his thanks to the others who had contributed toward the project.

Among others present were Arthur Severn, son of Keats' friend; Joseph Severn, the noted English portrait painter, who was devoted to the poet; the Rev. E. S. Dall, a relative of Shelley; Mrs. Edward A. MacDowell, widow of the American composer, whose music was inspired by Keats; Mrs. Stone Benedict, of Cooperstown, a descendant of J. Fenimore Cooper; Rudyard Kipling and John W. Garrett, secretary of the American Embassy.

The British Ambassador welcomed the King and thanked him for his presence. He traced briefly the history of the movement and pointed out that American generosity was largely responsible for its consummation. All the English-speaking poets of the Nineteenth century, he said, were inspired by Italy.

Nelson Gay, of Boston, secretary-treasurer of the executive committee, told of the great interest in America in Keats and Shelley, who inspired Lowell and MacDowell. He praised Robert U. Johnson, of New York, who, he said, was the soul of the movement in America.

Former Minister Martini expressed thanks on behalf of Italy, and Arthur Severn, in the closing address, spoke of his father's friendship for Keats.

The family of George Keats, the brother of the poet, who lived in Louisville, Ky., have united in presenting the Severn miniature of George Keats to the memorial house. Moses Ezekiel, the sculptor, formerly of Virginia, presented busts of Keats and Shelley and first edition of "The Revolt of Islam." The house now contains original portraits of Keats, his two brothers and his sister, as well as photographs of original manuscripts and rare editions.

Fear Effect of Treaty.

Paris, April 3.—Franco-American trade interests are apprehensive that the ratification of the Franco-Canadian, a commercial treaty which was adopted by the Senate April 1, will be followed by a complete readjustment of Franco-Canadian trade to the prejudice of American trade in the French market and German trade in the Canadian market. As finally adopted the bill is more inimical to American exporting interests than was the original measure. It gives Canada an average advantage of 33 per cent. on 197 articles in which the United States competes.

SIX WEEKS MORE BEFORE FILTER IS IN OPERATION.

Six Tanks Or Filtration Beds Yet To Be Completed—Being Calked and Riveted.

From three to six weeks is the estimated time which must elapse before the filter plant can be put into operation. Theodore Leison, the Water Board's chief engineer, made this statement after he had paid the Crescent Hill station a visit yesterday afternoon.

"I do not like to fix a date for the running of filtered water through the mains of the city," said Mr. Leison, "because there have been so many false alarms already. However, I believe that two months is a conservative estimate of time that will pass before the filter is seen in perfect operation. The plant will be given one or two days' trial and then it will be announced as running after the tests have shown it capable of fulfilling the work for which it was designed."

All that remains to be done at the filter plant is to complete the construction of the six tanks, or filtration beds, through which the water passes in the course of its purification. Originally there were three of these tanks, but they have been subdivided. The only thing that has stood between the city and filtered water for the last year has been these tanks. It is now believed that all imperfections in them have been obviated. The tanks are being calked and riveted together. When this is finished the sand will be put into them. Then there will be a general adjustment of the machinery. All that will then remain to be done is to turn on the faucet and get clear water.

Madison, Wis., April 3.—That Senator La Follette, while acting as Governor, personally directed game wardens to take a part in politics was the gist of the testimony of Deputy Game Warden W. C. Haslem, of Appleton, before the senatorial investigating committee to-day. Haslem told of being called to La Follette's office and being told by the Senator that H. F. Hagemeister, State Senator from Green Bay, must be defeated. Later he was ordered into Grant county to work for J. J. Blaine as a candidate for Congress against J. W. Babcock. He declared that he was told on leaving Grant county after the Blaine cancuses, that there were forty-eight State employes on the train.

JUDGE MILLER DRAWS GAIETY THEATER CASE.

Judge Shackelford Miller drew the suit of the Commonwealth against the Gaiety Theater in the allotment of cases for the Circuit Court Judges yesterday. The suit prays for a restraining order against the builders of the "Hub" theater, charging conspiracy and fraud in the passage of the building code which permits theaters with lobbies as long as a tunnel. Now that the case has been regularly allotted it is believed that it will be argued some time this week. If the injunction is granted it will stop work on the theater. There is little doubt but that whichever side loses the case will be appealed.

Work was begun on the Gaiety Theater more than a week ago and permit has been issued. The estimated time which must elapse, barring accidents and possible injunctions, before the theater can be completed, is six weeks. It is not thought that a decision will be reached in the lower courts before the last of next week.

BIG ELECTRIC CLOCK ONE OF THE WONDERS OF THE EXPOSITION

Just Clears the Street If Suspended From a Fifth-Story Window.

The big electric clock, which is to be one of the attractions of the Southern Electrical and Industrial Exposition, is entirely the work of Louisville artisans. The clock is in the form of a pendulum, and will be hung from the ceiling at the south end of the Armory, from which commanding position it will be the first thing that the visitor will see upon entering the building, as brilliantly illuminated, it swings majestically to and fro in its fifteen-foot arc.

The proportions of the clock are amazing. Forty-eight feet in length, 20 feet 3 inches in width, weighing over 3,000 pounds and containing 5,500 multi-colored bulbs, for which 11,000 connections were necessary. Figures such as these do not mean much to the ordinary reader, but when one realizes that were this clock swung from a window of the fifth floor of a skyscraper building it would just clear the street, and that it would take the width of an ordinary building lot to accommodate the dial laid flat, some idea of the magnitude of the timepiece will be gained. And the number of lights used on this single clock, when analyzed, brings forth more startling comparisons. They number more than enough for the amount of incandescent globes used to illuminate cars of the whole street-car system of the city of Louisville; they would, if placed two feet apart, form a double circle around the mile racetrack at Churchill Downs; they would light brilliantly 275 residences or stores, allowing twenty lights to each. Over a mile of wire was required to make the connections on the clock alone, and these same connections call for 140 pounds of especially made screws.

The dial is 20 feet 3 inches in diameter, and differs widely from the ordinary clock in that, although it indicates hours, minutes and seconds, it has no hands. The time in minutes is indicated by sixty series of lights, each containing thirty-two electric globes and radiating from an ornamental centerpiece to the outer edge of the dial. Shorter rows of different colored lights indicate the hour, and these change their position twelve times during each sixty minutes. The seconds are shown by sixty lights placed at equal distances around the extreme outer edge of the face. The hour figures are about 3 feet high and are outlined in colored globes. Each second the illumination in the outer circle of lights moves round one, and when the entire clock has been encircled the lights indicating the minutes also advance, and the hour hand makes its slow journey at five-minute intervals.

Despite huge proportions of the clock, it will keep absolutely correct time, even to the second, and this is the first time that such minute accuracy has been attempted in so large a clock. The motive power for the pendulum movement is supplied by a small magnet at the side and near the top of the pendulum; but this will not be visible from the floor, and the impression produced by the ponderous swinging of the dial is that it is of its own volition.

The mechanism of this immense machine is controlled entirely by the small master clock that ordinarily controls only the series of electric clocks installed when the Armory was built.

SERIES OF NOONDAY SERVICES TO CLOSE.

Bishop Woodcock Calls Upon All Men To So Live That They Can Face Maker.

That every man should be able to stand before the Great Supreme Court and, facing every man, have no one say that he had been treated by him unfairly, and facing every woman have no one say that the hell in her had been caused by the hell in him, was the statement made by Bishop Charles E. Woodcock yesterday in his address made at the last noonday Lenten service held at the Board of Trade building under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew.

He took as his subject "Peace," and recommended this as a remedy for the downcast.

"The peace of God does not give less work to do, but it enables us to do all we can in a better way," he said. "It does not give us ease, but strength to do more. Some men are feeding their intellects and starving their hearts, but this gives food to both. It also tells a person when it is time to stop, making him conscious of the fact that he is in the wrong.

"This wonderful peace of God has several other accompanying qualities. With this I am not afraid. I do not have to answer for the awful things that I would if I lacked this quality. It acts as a garrison upon the human heart. Neither am I ashamed when I have this peace of God. We go through this life but once, and with the help of God we do not have the pathway stained with low-down tricks. When the time comes we can face our Redeemer with a clear face."

Yesterday's noonday Lenten service marked the close of the most successful series ever held by the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. More interest seems to have been shown this year than on any other occasion.

Title Declared Invalid.

Helena, Mont., April 3.—In the United States Court to-day Judge Hunt declared null and void the title of the Northern Pacific Railway Company to 1,120 acres of coal lands in Carbon county valued at $2,000 an acre. The Government instituted a suit to recover lands because of their mineral character and the decision holds that, although classified as nonmineral, it was well known that they contained coal. The lands will be restored to the public domain unless some higher court reverses Judge Hunt. The railway company will appeal.

BATTLE WITH SHERIFFS

OHIO RIVER BOAT HELD UP AND FIGHT ENSUES.

Officials of Livingston County Attempt To Arrest Crew of Steamer Liberty.

Paducah, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—While the Sheriff of Livingston county, Ky., and the pilot fought in the pilothouse of the Liberty, the boat floated down the Ohio twelve miles, and was beached on the Illinois shore, opposite Paducah, by the engineer, who managed to keep in the channel the whole way. Sheriff Bishop and Deputy Champion boarded the Liberty at Smithland with warrants for Capt. Harry Davis, charging him with selling liquor.

While the officers were aboard, the boat backed out and started down the river. The officers entered the pilothouse and demanded that Pilot Will Brisco turn about. He refused, and during the fight that ensued was knocked down and the boat drifted without a helmsman. The engineer realized the situation and, guided the boat himself. When the boat landed the captain inquired of United States Commissioner Armour Gardner what he should do. Gardner assured him the local officers had no authority on the river, and the Liberty continued down the river.

CHARGE OF MURDER FALLS TO THE GROUND.

Henry Burnham Establishes Complete Innocence of Indiana Crime.

Amarillo, Tex., April 3.—[Special.]—Henry Burnham, recently arrested upon complaint of E. Chambers, in Swisher county, Tex., charged with the murder of a girl in the outskirts of Terre Haute, Ind., alleged to have been committed thirty-two years ago, was discharged from custody at the conclusion of a preliminary trial to-day at Tulsa.

Chambers, who came to Texas two years ago from Indiana, set up the allegation that he had reasons to believe that Burnham was the man wanted. He accounted the fact that the girl's body had been horribly mutilated and left in a sack in an attic.

Burnham is one of the wealthiest men in the county, and the accusation created a profound sensation among his neighbors. He had always borne a most enviable reputation. On the stand it was shown that Burnham has lived in Swisher county, Texas, twenty-six years, that he is a native of Arkansas, and that he was only 14 years of age when the tragedy was committed in Indiana, and further that he was nevere in Indiana in his life.

Blood and Skin Diseases

Caused By Impurities and Bacteria In the Blood.

That the blood is a natural antiseptic and powerful germ destroyer is a fact recognized by all leading medical men.

There are certain cells in the blood whose sole mission is to keep it free from impurities, and which seem to have nothing in particular to do on ordinary occasions but to float about on the blood tides and wander through the various channels and tissues of the body watching other cells work.

But the moment those cells come upon a foreign particle, disease germ or impurity in the blood or fragment of worn-out cells, they pounce upon it, wrap themselves around it and either digest or destroy it or carry it off to a safe place of deposit, either within the tissues or without.

A great deal of lore has accumulated about these wandering scavengers of the blood, and they seem to be of great importance in many ways, and are known to medical men as phagocytes. Whenever the blood becomes very impure and the number of germs within it are large, the phagocytes are vastly increased numerically, a condition known as phagocytosis.

Thus a fierce struggle between the germs and the phagocytes rages. The phagocytes usually win out and destroy the germs, but it sometimes happens that the phagocytes are completely overwhelmed by numbers, so rapid is the increase of germs and blood impurities.

STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS are the most powerful germicides, antiscorbutics and alteratives or blood-purifiers in the United States Pharmacopoeia. When the phagocytes are overcome by disease germs and the blood impurities, these wonderful little wafers, when taken into the system, exert a cleansing, germ-destroying and purifying effect on the blood, assisting the phagocytes in driving all foreign matter from the system, thus freeing it from all skin and blood diseases, and so rapid and efficient is the work of purification performed that a complete change for the better is noticed in a remarkably short time.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers should be in every home. Everyone needs a blood-purifier occasionally at least. For sale at all druggists at 50 cents a package, or send us your name and address, and we will forward you a free sample package, and let you test the remedy for yourself at our expense. ZEPPELIN WELL PLEASED WITH AIRSHIP'S VOLAGE.

Says Trial Demonstrated That Unfavorable Weather Does Not Prevent Flights.

Friedrichshafen, April 3.—Count Zeppelin was questioned to-day regarding his recent trip from here to Munich and back in the course of which he was blown far out of his course. He said:

"I am entirely satisfied with the performance of my airship. I had been advised from many quarters not to undertake the trip under such unfavorable weather conditions, but the result of this flight has shown me that when a storm springs up and landing becomes perilous the balloon can remain in the air until the danger is passed.

"The wind attained a velocity of over forty miles an hour on this journey, while my motors developed a speed of 24½ miles an hour. The airship was consequently driven backward, but we never lost control of the steering gear.

"The airship will be transferred to Metz as soon as the hall under construction there is completed."

LANDMARK MAY DISAPPEAR WITHIN NEXT TWO WEEKS.

Site of Old Guthrie Homestead Wanted By Chicago Shriners As a Stamping Ground.

The old Guthrie residence on the south side of Walnut street, near Second street, revered as a landmark in Louisville, may disappear within the next few weeks. The matter will be decided definitely this week at a meeting of local men who purchased the property at a public sale several months ago.

It is said that an arrangement was made yesterday by the Commercial Bank and Trust Company with representatives of the Chicago delegation of Shriners for the use of the old Guthrie property during the convention here in June, and it may be necessary to tear down the old homestead of James Guthrie so that the Chicago visitors to the convention will have ample room on the large lot for a tented city.

The Guthrie homestead was erected many years before the Civil War by James Guthrie, who was secretary of the United States Treasury during the administration of Franklin Pearce. Mr. Guthrie obtained the charter of the Bank of Kentucky, one of the oldest financial institutions in the State, in 1838, and is accredited with being the prime mover in the Louisville and Nashville railroad when it operated only between Louisville and Shepherdsville, Ky. At that time Shepherdsville was larger than Louisville.

Mr. Guthrie invested a handsome sum of money in the homestead. It has withstood the elements bravely.

The present owners of the property, who will meet this week to take action on the proposition to tear down the old structure, are Sam P. Jones, M. W. Bird, J. E. Gamble and R. H. Edelen.

HAROLD MOON'S BODY FOUND

Boy Evidently Was Drowned While Skating.

Parents Believed He Had Been Kidnaped.

Disappeared From His Home On February 27.

HIS FATHER'S ANXIOUS QUEST.

Flint, Mich, April 3.—Instead of having been kidnaped when he disappeared from his home here on February 27, ten-year-old Harold Moon broke through the ice of Thread Pond and was drowned.

The long search for the boy, which has been prosecuted in all parts of the country, ended to-day when his body was found floating in the pond by Bert Robson, who had been searching for it there for days.

A pair of skates fastened to the feet bore mute testimony to the manner of the lad's death. The hands were covered with the mittens the boy wore when he went through the ice.

Suspicion developed soon after the little boy's disappearance that he had been kidnaped. Rewards aggregating $1,300 were offered for the boy's return and circulars were sent broadcast all over the United States.

Harold's seventeen-year-old sister Marina was the first member of the family to learn that the missing boy had not been stolen, but was dead. She had gone to the neighborhood store and heard the report of the finding of the body.

Thread Pond is a small body of water about thirty-six by forty rods in area, and is fed by a small stream known as Thread creek. It is a mile from Flint. The pond is used by ice men for their harvest.

Harold Moon was last seen on February 27 going in the general direction of the Flint River and this pond with his skates over his shoulders. When he did not return home for supper that night his parents began a search for him. There was no evidence along the river banks or about the pond that he had fallen through the ice. Then stories became current that a strange man had been seen leading the boy away. The police were notified and officers in adjoining cities were asked to be on the lookout for him.

Several days later it was reported from Pontiac, Mich., that a lad of Harold's description had been seen with a stranger in a freight car. This clew was followed without results. It was followed by a report that he had been seen in Ontario. This also was investigated by Flint officers without success.

Then rewards were offered. A meeting of business men was held and a total of $1,300 was subscribed to be paid for information that would lead to the boy's return. Detective agencies, police departments and newspapers all over the country were supplied with pictures and descriptions of the missing lad.

At one time the police at Toledo reported a promising clew. A boy was seen in the freight yards with a rough-appearing man. He resembled the descriptions of the Moon boy. On investigation, however, this clew like the others failed to develop anything.

Last week the Sons of Daniel Boone, an organization of boys with branches in all parts of the country, of which Harold was a member, sent out from its New York headquarters an appeal to all of its membership to join in the search for the missing boy.

With the failure of all the efforts to discover any trace of Harold, systematic dragging of Flint River was begun. For twenty-five miles its bottoms was searched without results. A gang of twenty men worked for days at the dragging under the supervision of the local police. Then it was decided to begin a careful examination of Thread Pond.

Part of the water was drained out of it yesterday, and to-day Robson found the little boy. It was about 100 feet from the shore and the legs were caught fast in the weeds at the bottom. One arm and shoulder protruded from the water. It was immediately identified and taken to a morgue.

FATHER HEARS NEWS.

While Following a False Clew At Delavan, Wis.

Delavan, Wis., April 3.—T. N. Moon, father of Harold Moon, was deeply affected to-day when he received word that the body of his son had been found.

Accompanied by an operative from a Chicago detective agency, Mr. Moon arrived here last evening. No explanation was made of the purpose of their visit. After a short rest Mr. Moon walked to City Park, located the cannon described a letter where $500 was to be deposited to-day.

Just before Mr. Moon was about to make his visit to the cannon to-day he received the message containing the news of the finding of his son's body in Thread Lake. No arrests have been made but the capture of the letter writer is expected.

ON A FALSE TRAIL.

Father Was Seeking Son When His Body Was Found At Flint.

Chicago, April 3.—Tuman N. Moon, father of the Flint, Mich., boy whose body was found in a pond early to-day near his home, is at Delavan, Wis., in company with a Pinkerton detective, to which place he was lured by a letter demanding $500 ransom for his missing son.

Moon received a letter at his home in Flint a few days ago from Delavan, in which the writer stated that he had the missing boy in his possession, and that the father could recover him by going to Delavan and depositing $500 in the mouth of a cannon in the city park. Subsequent developments show that the scheme was arranged by a person who had read the details of the kidnaping of Willie Whitla, of Sharon, and that he sought merely to extort "easy money" from a frantic father.

Moon, as soon as he received the letter, conferred with influential citizens in his home town, and a purse was raised to employ a detective agency in running down the supposed kidnaper of his boy.

As soon as the financial details were arranged Moon took a train for Chicago. He arrived here Thursday evening and went at once to the detectives' office, where he told his story and showed the anonymous letter which he had received. The detectives planned a ruse to capture the alleged plotter. A detective was sent to Delavan in advance and Moon left Friday afternoon, to arrive, in accordance with the directions in the letter, at Delavan at 5:40 o'clock.

In the letter mailed at Delavan to the boy's father, the writer stated:

"I have your missing boy in my possession. If you want him back come to Delavan, Wis., arriving here on the afternoon of April 3, on a train reaching here at 5:40 o'clock in the afternoon. Go to the city park at 7:30 o'clock in the evening and place $500 in an envelope in the mouth of the big cannon. When you have done this, return to the hotel and the boy will report to you there. This letter is dictated by your own son, and under no circumstances reveal its contents to anyone if you ever wish to see your child alive."

Moon, who is not a rich man, was much aroused when he received this mysterious missive. His fellow-citizens came to his aid, and a detective agency determined to trace the case. The agency arranged for the detective to go to Delavan in advance. Moon took the train as directed. With him he took an envelope stuffed to have the appearance of containing a roll of bills.

Following is the wording of a note written by Mr. Moon and deposited in the cannon in city park last night:

"I know not who you are, but if you will have the boy write the name of his brothers and sisters, the name of the book received on his last birthday, and who sleeps with him at home, I will produce the $500 and no names will be asked."

Mr. Moon and the detective lingered in the vicinity of the cannon for some time and finally observed a man approach the cannon, seize the letter and quickly disappear.

Just before starting for the cannon to-day with the expectation of receiving a reply to his note Mr. Moon received word of the finding of his boy's body.

Constipation and Liver Trouble

Entirely Relieved In a Man Who Had Suffered For Years—He Is Also Cured of the Cathartic Habit As He Can Now Rely On Nature.

$1.00 WORTH FOR 50c

James Sanatorium Co.—Gentlemen: An inactive life caused me to suffer from constipation until it developed into liver trouble, or rather, liver disease. As a result, I had to take pills every night to keep from getting all bound up, consequently, I soon had the cathartic habit.

Being 42 years old, I developed a nervous condition, which greatly aggravated my condition.

I could not sleep at night and I felt depressed and dizzy during the day.

I suffered a kind of vertigo and could not go about my work with vim nor energy.

Since I took your course of treatment for liver trouble and constipation several months ago, I have been entirely well of constipation, my liver and bowels have become normal, and as a result they act without artificial stimulation of any kind.

I no longer suffer from nervousness nor sleeplessness, and when I awaken in the morning I feel strengthened and invigorated and go about my work with increased energy and interest. I enjoy a splendid appetite, I assimilate what I eat, my skin is becoming clear and my flesh is sound and healthy.

When the thousands of people throughout this land who are daily taking injurious pills, regulators and cathartics learn that there is a complete cure for constipation and liver trouble in your treatment, they will soon decide to take a complete course of your treatment, get well and get cured of their cathartic habit.

I greatly appreciate what you have done for me in restoring me to good health, and I therefore take this way of expressing my appreciation.

Yours very truly,

Raleigh, N. C. J. E. SMITH.

In order to introduce this new discovery at once into every community and give everyone suffering from liver troubles and constipation an opportunity to test its truly marvelous curative powers, we will now mail a full one-dollar size bottle to any address on receipt of only 50 cents, in stamps or silver, to cover cost—packing, shipping, etc. As an evidence of our great confidence in this preparation, we will gladly refund the money to anyone dissatisfied, after receiving and trying the remedy. Then why suffer from bowel and liver trouble another day when all that is necessary is to fill out the following coupon?

RIVER, BUSINESS AND WEATHER.

The river commenced to fall slowly yesterday. The stages last night were 7 feet 8 inches on the falls, 10 feet 3 inches in the canal and 24 feet 3 inches below the locks. Business on the levee was fair. The weather was clear and cool.

BOAT LLEAVING THIS DAY.

City of Cincinnati, Capt. Lindenburn, for Cincinnati, at 9 a. m.

ARRIVALS AND DEPARTURES YESTERDAY.

City of Louisville, Capt. Brennan, from and to Cincinnati....Helen M. Gould, Capt. Moody, from and to Carrollton....Tell City, Capt. Anderson, from and to Evansville.

DRIFTWOOD.

The fine steamer City of Cincinnati will be the only packet to leave the local wharf to-day. She leaves at 9 a. m. from the Third-avenue wharfboat for Cincinnati and all intermediate points....The Helen M. Gould brought down a large excursion from upper-river points yesterday....The Tell City was late in arriving yesterday on account of heavy way business. She returned to Evansville last night....The Mariner will leave to-day for Cairo with a tow of Pittsburg coal....Nearly all of the big towboats that return from the South with empties bring up several barges of lumber. Much of the lumber that is used around Pittsburg for ship building is brought from the South by returning towboats. The Sprague, which is en route from New Orleans to Louisville with empties, has several barges of lumber included in her tow....The Peters Lee, en route from Memphis to Cincinnati, will pass here Tuesday afternoon. She leaves Louisville on her return trip to Memphis Saturday, April 11, at noon. Claude Jagoe is her agent....Capt. Sterling McIntyre, who has been in Cincinnati attending the funeral of his wife, will be back at his post of duty on the Helen M. Gould Monday....The Pittsburg Gazette-Times of yesterday says: "The local office of the United States engineers has plans well under way for the active resumption of construction and repair work upon the locks and dams in the Monongahela and Ohio rivers. In the lower Ohio districts bids have been asked for the construction of some 500 feet of concrete at No. 19, some distance below Parkersburg. Bids to be opened April 29. Bids have been submitted for work on No. 13, near Bellaire, and No. 18, above Parkersburg. River interests have become active between Cincinnati and Louisville and are urging the completion of dam No. 37, below Cincinnati, and working to secure the construction of No. 41, above Louisville. This dam, when completed, will, owing to the sluggish current and the fact that the river bed only shows a fall of six feet in fifty-two miles, will back up navigable water for fifty-two miles and furnish the longest known slack-water pool in the world." ....The following is an article from the St. Louis Globe-Democrat of yesterday: "Speaking of the rumor that Kansas City merchants were going to build steamboats for the Missouri River trade, Col. Hunter Ben Jenkins recalls that he took care of that trade years ago and says that they are the kind of boats the Kansas City merchants should build now. It was in 1884 that the steamer Dakota made the trips from St. Louis to Kansas City with a record cargo each way. She departed from here July 15 with 450 tons of merchandise and handled en route 5,600 railroad ties. She returned to St. Louis with a manifest of 15,000 sacks of wheat, 54 head of hogs and 500 packages of produce. She made the round trip in eleven days and ten hours, with five feet of water in the channel, and did not ground during the entire trip. Col. Jenkins has retired to his home in Alton, which, years ago, was presented to the boat for making the trip. Capt. George G. Keith, now pilot of the United States snagboat McPherson, was in command of the Dakota on this trip. Capt. John Herman, now chief clerk of the Ferd Herold, was clerk on the boat. A sister ship, the Montana, was another that did large business on the Missouri in those days."

RIVER TELEGRAMS.

Pittsburg, April 3.—[Special.]—The packet Queen City will be in to-morrow night from Cincinnati with a party of school teachers. There is no coal shipment, though the barge stage continues. Empties are coming in regularly from the South and with a short season of rain there will be a shipment of perhaps 5,000,000 bushels toward Louisville. The stage at Davis Island to-night was 8 feet and at Freeport 7.3 feet. The rivers continue to fall slowly.

Wheeling, April 3.—River 9.8 feet, falling. Departed: Ohio, Cincinnati.

Point Pleasant, April 3.—River 13.1, falling. Partly cloudy.

Cincinnati, April 3.—[Special.]—River 24.5, falling. Clear, warm. Arrivals: Virginia from Pittsburg, Greenwood from Pomeroy, Chilo from Chilo, City of Cincinnati from Louisville. Departures: Virginia for Pittsburg, Greenwood for Charleston, Chilo for Chilo, City of Cincinnati for Louisville. The Jim Wood arrived from Pittsburg and continued on to Louisville with most of her tow of coal. The Valiant, Sam Brown and Josh Cook passed up en route to Pittsburg with empties. The A. R. Budd passed up late Friday night. The towboat Fritz, brought up from Louisville by the Sam Clark, is lying at the Ludlow landing. She will have to undergo extensive repairs.

Madison, Ind., April 3.—[Special.]—River 22.2. Cloudy, cold.

Evansville, April 3.—River 19.8, rising slowly. Clear, cool.

Cairo, April 3.—River 31.5, stationary. Fair, cool. Arrived: A. O. Brown, St. Louis, 11 p. m.; Enterprise, lower Mississippi; City of Savannah, upper Ohio, 8 a. m. Departed: City of Savannah, Memphis, 8 a. m.

Hickman, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—The Mengel Box Company, of this city, has received its large new towboat, the steamer Mengel Box Company, and this will operate in the log trade between here and Hales Point, Ashport, Tenn., and other logging points on the Mississippi for this company. The boat is a model craft in every particular, 150 feet long and 36 feet wide. Her engines are both high and low pressure, compound machinery, and cost in the neighborhood of $40,000. The boat also had in tow a new derrick. Both boat and derrick were built at Marietta, O. Capt. F. M. Ryan, one of the best-known commanders on the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, will command the boat. The Mississippi River banks have again begun caving at Birds Point, Mo., and thirty-five more feet of the bank has gone in the river. The rapid erosion is threatening the depot, and a cut has been taken to move it within a few days. A new landing stage will also have to be excavated. The river is now from six to eight feet below the top of the bank and the undercurrent is eating into the sand strata under the surface. All of the business section of the town has been rolled back once or twice and it seems as if the town is doomed.

Memphis, April 3.—[Special.]—River here 26.2 on the gauge, a fall of 1 foot in 24 hours. Peters Lee arrived early this morning from Cincinnati with 2,595 packages of merchandise and departed at 6 p. m. with 28 bales of cotton, a good lot of sundries and a good list of passengers. Sadie Lee arrived this morning from Cairo and will return Tuesday at noon. Kate Adams arrived this evening from Arkansas City and departed again for Mound City, Ill., where she will receive a new set of boilers. The City of Savannah will take her place Monday in the Memphis and Arkansas City trade. Towboat Duquesne is in port cleaning boilers and will leave early in the morning for the Ohio River. Towboat Eagle passed up early this morning for St. Louis with several barges of logs. The Dolphin No. 3 arrived this morning from St. Francis River with a tow of barges loaded with logs for this place. Towboat Pardo No. 2 with a tow of empties passed South this morning.

ACT OF BANISHMENT MUST BE REPEALED.

Parliament Will Have To Act Before Don Miguel Can Return To Portugal.

Lisbon, Wednesday, March 24.—While King Manuel and the royal family have received favorably Don Miguel's offer to renounce his pretensions to the throne, the pretender cannot return to Portugal until Parliament has repealed the act of banishment against him.

Don Miguel only proposes at present to renounce his claims in favor of the present dynasty and not any ultimate rights of succession he might have in case the King died without heir and his uncle, the Grand Duke of Oporto, should not survive. In other words, Don Miguel proposes to throw in his lot with the young King and support him loyally in exchange for the right of succession, and this co-operation on the part of Don Miguel is an important acquisition for the throne. Over 250 noble families probably will return to Portugal if Parliament revokes the act of banishment. Don Miguel has considerable property in Portugal which was confiscated when he was banished, and it is assumed that this treasure will be returned to the pretender, if he is allowed to come back to the country.

Fire In Hungarian Town.

Veszprim, Hungary, April 3.—Veszprim was visited by a serious fire today which practically destroyed the seminary, an establishment connected with the ancient cathedral; an adjoining church, most of the residence of the ecclesiastical authorities, together with a score of smaller houses. No fatalities have been reported. The losses are heavy.

New Clubhouse Dedicated.

Chicago, April 3.—The new University clubhouse, erected at a cost of $1,100,000, was dedicated here to-night. Hundreds of college men marched from the old clubhouse on Dearborn street to the Michigan-avenue building, which is regarded as probably the handsomest structure in the downtown district.

RAISING SKUNKS.

Proprietor of Maine Farm Says It Is Profitable.

ANIMALS NICE TO HANDLE IF YOU ONLY KNOW HOW.

SKIM MILK AND INDIAN MEAL USED FOR FEEDING THEM.

THEIR PELTS RUN INTO MONEY

The most productive, if not the largest, skunk farm in Maine is on the old Tom Cummings place, two miles from the ancient British earthworks at Fort Point, which were put up to repel the French and Indian invasion from Canada in 1759, and dedicated about two weeks before Gen. Wolfe scaled the heights of Abraham and captured Quebec, writes a Prospect (Me.) correspondent of the Rochester Herald.

There are less than 200 skunks in the enclosure, but they are all nearly pure black, and Arno Cummings, their owner and manager, declares that every animal is worth $25 to him. Cummings inherited the farm and skunkery from his brother, Howard, who spent more than ten years in buying and selling skunk skins, extracting oil from the animals he had slaughtered and studying the ways of skunks so far as they related to the production of black fur and oil.

"A man who knows the business the way I do," said Arno Cummings, "can make a larger profit on his investment and make it steadily every year by raising skunks in Maine than he can at any other calling. There are more secrets in the skunk business than there are in mixing fancy drinks.

"There's feeding, for one thing. Nobody ever made anything at rearing skunks in confinement until my brother and I learned how to prepare food for the mother skunks while they were rearing their young.

"Until we found out a better way everybody believed because skunks stole chickens and ate eggs before they were cooked, that skunks would not live without a flesh diet of some kind. We paid out hundreds of dollars every year for tomcods caught in the smelt nets and for sculpins and flounders from the salmon weirs and bought beef scrap in Boston and porgy chum from the oil presses, and the more we pampered them the more the mothers turned cannibals and ate their young until the pups were all gobbled up, and then they turned upon their abused husbands and served them up raw at the family table.

"For the past six years the only article that has the remotest relation to meat product which we have given our prisoners to eat has been the skim milk from the creameries. With skim milk, which we buy for two cents a gallon from the farmers, and Indian meal mixed to a thin mush and lightly baked into a sort of Indian pudding I can bring a colony of skunks through the coldest winter that ever struck Maine without losing an animal, and can have all the mothers bring up their little ones without any complaints about infant mortality and without manufacturing a single widow.

"Instead of being a coarse and repulsive creature the skunk is just the neatest and sweetest little creature in the world. For more than a dozen years now I have been among my skunks every day and have handled them by the hundreds and thousands every week, and unless some fool dog gets behind the wires and goes to stirring them up there is never any trouble. A skunk is like a can of nitroglycerin—he is always perfectly safe if you know how to handle him.

Haste Dangerous.

"Slow and sure is my motto when among my skunks. If I see a skunk in my flock that I want to kill I walk in and pick it up by the tail, and then I lug it about by the tail, shift it from one inclosure to another, put it in a box to be sent away or rap it over the head with a club to kill it for the fur and oil, and so long as I keep the animal suspended by its tail there is no danger. So far as risk is concerned there is far more danger in having a swarm of Italian bees than there is in transferring a thousand skunks by hand. They are the gentlest and sweetest little pets that walk.

"One summer about eight years ago we had some real sport with the sister to my brother's wife, who came down to the skunk farm from New York to pass her vacation. We argued and pleaded with that girl for more than a week before she would so much as go inside the wire netting. She is now traveling with a show in Mexico in charge of a cage of trained skunks and receiving $30 a week and expenses for giving two performances a day. She writes me she is drawing a bigger crowd than any bullfight in the country.

"There is a good easy living, with a few dollars to the good every year, in keeping skunks as a commercial venture. The pelts are much lower now than they were ten years ago, when skunk muffs were the fashion, but a good solid black skin with only a few white hairs in the tail is worth $4 at any time. Others with more in them sell at from $1.50 to $3.00, according to how close they are to the standard. From four to six young skunks are produced every year, which, commercially speaking, means $20 two years later. Strictly pure skunk's oil is worth $1 a pint or about $2 for every animal killed.

"As for the cost of feed and care, that can never amount to more than $2 a year for any animal. And when a man can receive a cash return of $22 for every $2 he invests in skunks the question becomes a very simple one to figure out, the profits depending upon how many skunks he keeps."

COOKING IN ITALY

Houses Without Most Kitchen Conveniences.

NOT EVEN A RANGE UPON WHICH TO PREPARE FOOD.

BAKING DONE IN FRONT OF PILE OF RED CHARCOAL.

COMMON OVENS IN THE CITIES.

The modern New York apartment housewife has little idea of the inconveniences and economies of the Italian woman, dwelling in houses absolutely devoid of conveniences, according to our standpoint, observes a writer in the New York Mail. A friend who has lived long in Italy tells me that the American who keeps house in Italy finds the first few months peculiarly trying, for it is not easy to become used to no bathroom, no kitchen range, nothing but copper or earthen cooking pots, often no running water and an utter absence of dozens of daily labor-saving devices which have become accepted kitchen furniture over here.

There one has no range, only one side of the kitchen, along which extends a continuous line of connecting charcoal pots, each of which has a little iron door opening out beneath the grating or floor of the pot that the bellows may be inserted to kindle a glow from the ignited shavings beneath the grating, thus lighting the charcoal in the holes. Over all this formidable line of cooking squares or pots (varying in size) is a widely overhanging black, cavernous hood to catch odors and gases mounting chimneyward.

Baking is done in front of a glowing pile of charcoal, heaped in a corner of the pot-hole shelf, the roast being spitted on a slowly turning axle, which connects with a small clocklike machine set to toll off the minutes when attention may be needed and basting required. More frequently roasts are sent to the nearest common oven, in which all Italian cities abound, and a guest frequently arrives as the roast comes in the door.

And yet, despite all inconveniences and tedious methods of the Italian kitchen, "una cucena lunga" as all know, the meals are more universally good and more generally well balanced from a dietetic point of view than here in America. The foreign woman is early taught the necessity of culinary knowledge, and yet more important is the requirement that she shall learn and practice close economy, and no matter how wealthy the family, the kitchen economy is rigid. Mrs B remarked the other day: "I remember the Venetian saying, so often heard when a child throws away food, 'The devil will laugh and the Madonna will weep tears of blood over thy act.' The between-meal eating which our children indulge in so frequently is seldom permitted in the Italian child, nor the eating of candies and pastries. Our candies lead the world, for the excellent reason that the demand is far greater, and the foreign woman would be actually afraid to eat the quantities our women do. Every Italian child loves oil, and it is amusing to see them often eat an egg poached in oil instead of water. Of course, this general oil habit gives better health and clearer skins, and it is fortunate that we are beginning to imitate our neighbors in this particular."

Another point where the Italian cook excels is in her seasonings. Few of our farmer cooks know more than salt and pepper, with an occasional ketchup, or among the truly progressive ones, an occasional onion and bay leaf, but the southern-born woman is equally dependent upon her garlic, curry, saffron, chervil, nutmeg, mace, dried mushrooms and a half dozen or more dried herbs and spices, practically unknown to the average American who calls herself a good cook.

A CURIOUS OATH.

[Chicago Journal.]

What is regarded as the quaintest oath still in use is that taken by the High Court Judges in the Isle of Man, the terms of which are as follows: "By this book and the contents thereof, and by the wonderful works that God hath miraculously wrought in the heaven above and the earth beneath in six days and six nights, I do swear that I will, without respect of favor or friendship, loss or gain, consanguinity or affinity, envy or malice, execute the laws of this isle justly between party and party as indifferently as the herring backbone doth lie in the midst of the fish. So help me God and the contents of this book."

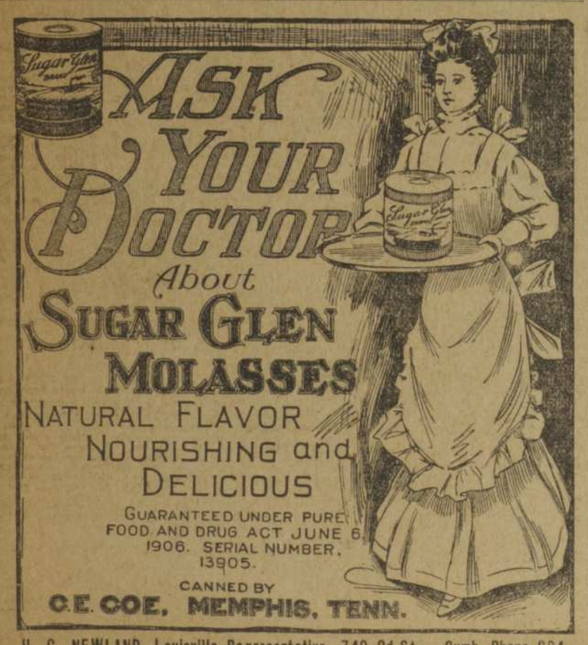

THE MIRACLE.

[T. A. Daly in Catholic Standard and Times.]

Unlovely things they were and cold
As Death itself, last fall—
The bulbs I planted in the mold
Beside my garden wall.
Yet here above each sodden husk
A bourgeoned beauty blows
And fills with hyacinthine musk
The little garden-close.

Ah! lovelier, dearer seed than mine,
Albeit cold as they,
I watched my widowed friend consign
To churchyard mold to-day.
Yet he, in darkness, questioning
The same Benignant Power,
Can neither see the distant spring
Nor visualize the flower.

ORIGIN OF SILVER WEDDINGS.

[New York Press.]

The origin of silver weddings was in the reign of Hugh Capet, King of France in 987. One day when arranging his uncle's affairs he found on one of the estates a servant who had grown gray in the service of his relative. On the same plantation with this old man was also a faithful serving woman as old as he and also unmarried. When the king learned of the praises of the two he ordered them to be brought before him, and said to the woman: "Your service is great, I would say greater than this man's whose services were great enough, for the woman often finds work and obedience harder than a man, and therefore I shall give you a reward. At your age I know of nothing better or more suitable than a dowry and a husband. The dowry is here—this farm from this day and hereafter belongs to you. If this man who has worked with you five and twenty years is willing to marry you then there is no trouble of looking further for the husband."

"Your majesty," stuttered the old woman, "how is it possible that we should marry, having come to the years of silver hairs?" "Then it shall be a silver wedding," answered the king, "and here I give you a wedding ring," drawing a handsome and costly ring from his pocket and placing the hands of the thankful old couple together. This incident was made known all over France and it became the fashion after twenty-five years of married life to celebrate the silver wedding.

MANY SOUGHT POISON'S NAME.

[New York Press.]

In England years ago there was a famous poisoning case in which the strong point of the defense was to show that the accused, who was an expert chemist, would not have used a poison that would be so easily found after it had been taken into the human system. Sir Robert Charleston, a professor in Edinburgh University and an authority on toxicology, whose works are still standard on that subject, was put on the stand to prove the point. He declared that a chemist would certainly use some poison that would leave no trace. The prosecuting attorneys asked him if he meant to say that there were such poisons to be had. Sir Robert replied in the affirmative. The prosecutor asked: "Will you kindly tell the court what they are?" "No," shouted the Judge, "I rule that question out and forbid you to answer."

In spite of protest the Judge would not allow the expert publicly to give the name of the poison which would leave no trace. During the next two years Sir Robert received more than four thousand letters from various parts of the world offering to pay fabulous sums for the recipe of the untraceable poison alluded to in his testimony. Many of these letters he kept as curiosities, showing them to his friends as evidence of the depravity of human nature.

Some of the excuses for wanting the name of the poison were ingenious. One of the writers desired the information that he might base a novel on a poison plot. He did not give the name of the poison in the book, but just wanted to have it that in case any scientific critic could deny the possibility of such poison he could send him the name in a private letter and quote the distinguished authority from whom it came, etc. Several persons professing to be studying chemistry asked the information on the ground of professional curiosity. Many pretended that they had wagered large sums that they would find out the poison in a given time, and they were willing to share their profits liberally with Sir Robert. Sir Robert was horrified at the number of persons all over the world who seemed so desirous of possessing the secret of an agent that would bring an end to any member of the human race, but leave no trace.

BIRDS AS SCOUTS.

[Field Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood in London Saturday Gazette.]

During the night, July 2-3, before the battle of Sadowa, a division commanded by the Archduke, retreating before the Prussian army, had bivouacked near a town in Bohemia, facing north.

At midnight the Archduke, when resting in a peasant's cottage, was awakened by the arrival of a gypsy, who insisted on seeing him personally, having come to report the advance of the enemy.

The Archduke, who spoke Romany fluently, asked: "How do you know? Our outposts have not reported any movement."

"That, your highness, is because the enemy is still some way off."

"Then, how do you know?"

The gypsy, pointing to the dark sky lighted by the moon, observed: "You see those birds flying over the woods from north to south?"

"Yes; what of them?"

"Those birds do not fly by night unless disturbed, and the direction of their flight indicates that the enemy is coming this way."

The Archduke put his division under arms and reinforced the outposts, which in two hours' time were heavily attacked.

WHEN THE TYPE HAD FUN.

[The Watchman, Boston.]

The death of John William Jones, D. D., at Columbus, Ga., recalls what is probably the funniest series of typographical blunders which ever actually occurred. The writer can testify to the accuracy of this series, because he read them at the time they were made in the two journals involved. After the Civil War Dr. Jones was Southern correspondent of the New York Examiner. At the time there was a rival Baptist paper in New York City called the Watchtower. In writing of the death of his friend Stonewall Jackson Dr. Jones praised highly his character, and referred to him as "a battle scarred veteran." The printers of the Examiner amended this, and it was stated to the readers that Stonewall Jackson was "a battle scared veteran." The Watchtower saw a chance to make a little fun of its rival paper and attempted simply to reproduce the error of the Examiner's printer; but the printer of the Watchtower took his turn and made it read that Stonewall Jackson was "a bottle scarred veteran." Now the Examiner had a good chance to get back at its rival, and it made merry at the trial to correct one error by making a worse one. But alas! it seemed that the expression was doomed to a comedy of errors; for when the Examiner's triumphant counter appeared, it informed its readers that in attempting to correct the error in the Examiner the Watchtower had said that Stonewall Jackson was "a battle sacred veteran." At this both the editors gave it up as a bad job.

STRANGE STORY.

[Chicago News.]

A tramp came to the garden gate.
With pity in her eye
She handed the poor man a plate
Of huckleberry pie.

When such a story I relate
There is no need to sigh.
It's not a mournful fact I state—
She handed him some pie.

It was her first one, too, I hate
To palter or to lie.
She gave that sorry reprobate
Her first completed pie.

He took it, too. He did not wait,
He was in no way shy.
He thanked her kindly and he ate
Her huckleberry pie.

Still, his was not a hapless fate,
He did not groan and die,
Although he did not hesitate
To eat the lady's pie.

I'm telling you this story straight
And there's no reason why
I should not. It was a first-rate,
A truly splendid pie.

At the present rate the excavations at Pompeii will not be completed until the year 1970.

Financial and Commercial

MONETARY.

Saturday Evening, April 3.—The decrease of $2,793,850 for the week in the surplus reserves of New York clearing-house banks was less than expected in view of the heavy disbursements of interest and dividends. There was an increase in loans of $10,920,100 and in deposits of $10,569,800. The latter change enlarged requirements $2,642,450, and there was a loss in cash of $151,400. The accumulation of funds to meet the April settlements had not the slightest effect on the money market. Call loans renewed at 1¾ per cent. and time money for periods of six months dropped to 2¾ per cent. There is no likelihood of any appreciable change in the money situation before the crops begin to move.

The feature of the foreign money situation was the reduction in the Bank of England discount rate from 3 to 2½ per cent. Money is so plentiful in London that a 2 per cent. rate, the minimum, is not improbable before many weeks pass. The Bank of France did not lower its 3 per cent. rate, but it is expected to do so in the near future, since private discounts there are quoted at 1¼ per cent. The Bank of England's weekly statement disclosed a substantial addition to bullion, namely $3,800,000, but changes in other accounts reduced the increase in total reserve to a nominal figure. The proportion of reserves to liabilities decreased ½ of 1 per cent., to 48½ per cent.

The local situation shows no material change. However, there is a little more demand for money, but supplies continue large. Rates range from 4½ to 6 per cent., the lower rate of course being on preferred loans. New York exchange is quoted at 25 to 40 cents premium.

The report of the Clearing-house to-day was as follows:

Day's clearing	$2,218,289
Balance	400,956
Week's clearing	13,916,867
Corresponding week last year	11,040,013
Balances for week	2,470,153

There was a fair business transacted in local securities to-day. Louisville Traction common, on account of its advance of a point, selling at the Stock Exchange at 98½, was the feature. The preferred was also stronger, selling at 112¾. Toledo was firm and Portland common steady, while West Penn common was easier. In the outside market Columbia Gas and Electric touched a new high market for the year at 20.

The local market was more active and stronger this week than any week since January. Nearly every issue traded in advanced and some advances were substantial. The chief stimulus came from the reinvestment of April disbursements of dividends and interest, which were unusually large. A liberal number of sales were made at every session of the Stock Exchange. While a large share of the reinvestment demand was for bonds, there was more call for stocks than in January.

There seems to be a turning to local securities, and local brokers as a rule are expecting the market to show steady improvement. The companies whose securities are dealt in locally almost without exception weathered the past year in good shape; their earnings are increasing at a satisfactory rate, thus insuring present fixed dividends, increased dividends for some issues and initial dividends for others, and their securities are selling at prices to yield from 2 to 4 per cent. more than New York stocks or the ruling rate for money, and, therefore, would seem to be entitled to sell higher.

In the bond list at the Stock Exchange Louisville Railway 5s, Memphis Street Railway 5s, Rochester Railway and Light 5s, Springfield Railway and Light 5s and Nashville Railway and Light refunding 5s sold fractionally higher during the past week, while St. Joseph Railway, Light, Heat and Power 5s and several other issues were in good demand, but held at prohibitive trading figures.

Louisville Traction common was the feature of the stock list, figuring in a number of sales and advancing to 98½, compared with 95¼ at the close of last week. The preferred advanced from 110¾ to 112¾. Portland Railway, Light and Power common advanced from 59½ to 65½ on a few sales and closed the week at 64½ to 65½. Springfield Railway and Light gained 1½ points in bid price without meeting stock, and St. Joseph Railway, Light, Heat and Power common sold at 44¼, compared with the last previous quotation of no bid and 44 asked. Chattanooga Railways common and Dallas Electric common advanced 2 points each. St. Louis United Railways common and preferred and Kansas City Railway and Light ruled firm.

Columbia Gas and Electric developed strength the latter part of the week, selling up to 20, a new high record for the year. Butte Electric and Power common sold at 96¼, an advance of 4 points for the week. The January earnings of the Butte company were at the rate of 20 per cent. on the common stock, and as the prospects are for a larger rate, the chances for a big increase in the dividend or some other step of advantage to the stockholders are considered bright.

At the Stock Exchange to-day Birmingham Railway, Light and Power 4½s were 92½ and interest bid, an advance of ¾. $5,000 wanted.

Chattanooga Railways 5s were 93 and interest bid, an advance of ½. $1,000 wanted.

East St. Louis and Suburban 5s were 99¼ and interest bid, an advance of ¼, and 99½ asked. $1,000 each way.

Memphis Street Railway 5s were 96¼ and interest bid, an advance of ⅛, and 96½ asked. $1,000 each way.

Springfield Railway and Light 5s were $1,000 sold at 95¼ and interest and $1,000 offered at 95¾.

St. Joe 5s were 101½ and interest bid for $5,000 and $1,000 offered at 102.

Avery preferred was sixteen shares offered at 99¾.

Evansville Light common was forty shares offered at 35½.

Louisville Heating preferred was six shares sold at 79¼ and twenty offered at 79½.

Louisville Traction common was thirty shares sold at 98½, ten offered at 98¾ and 98 bid for ten.

Louisville Traction preferred was ten shares sold at 112¾, 112½ bid for thirty and ten offered at 113½.

Portland common was 64½ bid and 65½ asked, fifty shares each way.

Springfield was 78½ bid for ten shares and fifty offered at 80½.

St. Joe common was 44½ bid and 46½ asked, fifty shares each way.

West Penn common was 33¾ bid and 35¼ asked, twenty-five shares each way.

Columbia Trust was 120 bid, an advance of ¾, ten shares wanted.

Toledo sold in New York at 13.

United Railways Investment preferred sold at 53¼.

American Tobacco closed at 370 to 380, Standard Oil at 665 to 668, Subway at 27¼ to 27¾, Giroux at 8¼ to 8¼, Yukon at 4½ to 4 5-16 and Bay State at 1¼ to 1⅜.

Kansas City Railway and Light common sold in Chicago at 42.

St. Louis United Railways common closed in St. Louis at 22½ to 23, the preferred at 65¼ to 65½ and the 4s at 85 to 85¼.

Columbia Gas and Electric was quoted in Cincinnati at 19¼ to 20 and sold up to 20.

New Orleans common was quoted in New Orleans at 15¾ to 19¼, the preferred at 40¼ to 41¼ and the 4½s at 79¼ to 80. American Cities common was 45 to 45½ and the preferred at 91 to 91¾.

The total sales of all stocks dealt in upon the New York Stock Exchange in the month of March aggregated 13,667,788 shares. This compares with 15,397,481 shares in March, 1908, and 32,208,525 in March, 1907. The total since January 1 is 43,416,516 shares, as against 42,243,203 shares for the three months of 1908 and 71,382,257 shares in 1907. The bond sales amount to $84,808,500 for March as compared with $62,734,200 in March, 1908, and $53,742,300 in March, 1907. For the three months since January 1 the aggregate is $332,232,500, against $209,546,400 in the corresponding periods of 1908 and $137,062,500 in 1907.

Concerning the earnings of the United States Steel Corporation the Wall Street Journal says: "The Corporation begins the current year with prospects of the smallest earnings reported in several years. The Corporation is producing at the rate of about 6,500,000 tons of steel a year. Last year the ratio of earnings per ton of steel sold was about $15. The ratio is now about $9 a ton, a result of the lowering of steel prices. At $9 a ton the earnings of the Steel Corporation are now running at the rate of about $60,000,000 a year, or about $12,000,000 below preferred dividend, interest and depreciation charges, based on deductions last year."

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Philadelphia Company, of Pittsburg, will be held May 3.

There were 3,312 failures reported to Bradstreet's for the first three months of 1909, with total liabilities of $39,247,955 and assets of $[illegible],732,542. There is here shown a decrease of 20.8 per cent. in the number of failures as compared with the same period of 1908, while the liabilities show a decrease of 64 per cent. from the exceedingly depressed first quarter of last year. Compared with the first quarter of 1907 failures this year are 26 per cent. more numerous and liabilities are 2.2 per cent. larger.

An analysis of the commercial failures reported to R. G. Dun & Co. for the first quarter of 1909, as compared with corresponding periods in the preceding years, reveals the increasing strength of the structure of business as the result of the economic changes of the past ten years. There were 3,850 failures during the first three months of 1909, comparing with 4,909 in the first quarter of 1908, a decrease of 1,059. The average number of failures for the first quarter in the past five years was, however, 3,587, so that the record for the year is 263 above the five-year average. The liabilities of the past three months were $44,469,959, a reduction of $31,245,241, or over 41 per cent., from the first quarter of 1908, but $541,000 above the average of the last five years. In number of failures the record for the past quarter is greater than for any corresponding period since 1895, with the exception of 1896, 1897 and 1908.

MARKET LETTERS.

New York.—The most favorable feature during the past week in the world's financial circles has been the calmer aspect of the European political situation, as evidenced by a better tone of the foreign market, particularly London. Foreigners have been conspicuous buyers of American securities, having decided that a drastic decline was not likely in view of the plenitude of money and the concerted action of those interests which are known to control the bulk of securities. The upward movement of values undoubtedly has had its inception in the theory that betterment in business conditions is bound to materialize in the course of the next few months, and the comparatively small amount of liquidation even at advanced prices has encouraged pools and others to advance prices in an effort to attract public interest. The latter have responded in a moderate way, but trading for the most part continues professional. However, it seems to be only a question of time when investors will be inclined to take hold of the most attractive issues in an aggressive manner.—(W. L. Lyons & Co.

New York.—The market appears to have gone into a somewhat professional position and may be two-sided for a little while. But it should be bought on all drives such as we had to-day. The outside public does not appear to be letting go of its stocks. If it had been the setback of 2@3 points would have seen an outpouring. On Monday we would follow the same rule of buying on moderate drives.—(C. I. Hudson & Co. to S. C. Henning & Co.

New York.—It looks as if the bull market would soon be resumed in spite of uncertainties over the tariff and the long-talked-of Supreme Court decision on the commodity clause. Certainly people feel hopeful, and it is admitted on every side that business is gradually improving and that in the next six months, any way within a year, we shall see a veritable boom in all lines. It is for this reason that the market goes up in spite of minor discouragements and uncertainties.—(Post & Flagg to John W. & D. S. Green.

New York.—General strength developed during the second hour of trading. Interborough issues were strong and gained 1½. Union Pacific, Reading and Amalgamated Copper were also strong. The market closed firm, above last night's close, and near the high for the day. We think stocks should be bought on any setback.—(E. F. Hutton & Co. to E. E. Paine & Co.

New York.—The action of the market to-day was surprising, as more of a reaction was looked for. We have strong advices to buy Denver common and our opinion has not changed.—(Kelley, Howell & Co. to Almstedt Bros.

New York.—There were some conservatives who exhibited reluctance to purchase stocks to-day, owing to the fear that at the meeting of the Supreme Court in Washington on Monday there would be handed down an unfavorable decision in the Hepburn rate case. The Hawleys stocks were taken in hand and Toledo and Chesapeake were marked up. Denver common was supported, although there was some liquidation by outside holders, which forced a sharp early decline. We look for a firmer market early on Monday, and should there be no decision handed down, or should the decision be for the railroads, we would then expect to see very much higher prices follow immediately.—(J. S. Bache & Co. to Washington Flexner & Co.

New York.—The past week witnessed the highest level of prices so far for the year 1909. Some of the advance was undoubtedly accomplished at the expense of an unwieldy short interest, but there existed more substantial reasons for permanent enhancement. The money situation is very satisfactory, railroad earnings show up marvelously well, and especially as regards maintaining of the net, practically all of the substantial gross increases, gold exports are in all probability at an end, and a further reduction in the Bank of England rate will in all probability materialize before the end of April. We continue to look for and believe in the permanency of a higher level of prices for the active railroads.—(Miller & Co. to John L. Dunlap.

STOCK MARKET REVIEW.

New York, April 3.—Money on call nominal. Time loans dull and easy; sixty days 2½ per cent.; ninety days 2½@2¾ per cent.; six months 3 per cent. Prime mercantile paper 3½@4 per cent. Sterling exchange steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86@4.8610 for sixty-day bills and at $4.8770 for demand; commercial bills $4.85½@4.85¾. Bar silver 50⅞c. Mexican dollars 44c. Government and railroad bonds steady.

The selling of stocks which depressed prices yesterday was proved by the action of the market to-day to have included a large proportion of bear operations on the short side. The bears seemed indisposed to leave their commitments open over the end of the week, and to-day they bought to cover. The scanty selling induced by yesterday's sharp reaction was an influence in inducing this action.

There was some evidence of buying of the new series at the decline in prices which occurred at the opening in continuation of yesterday's movement, and this also promoted the desire of the shorts to retire from a position considered vulnerable. There was nothing in the news of events to account for the shift in the price movement. Yesterday's selling was professedly based on the expectation that the Supreme Court would hand down a decision Monday in the case to test the commodities clause of the Hepburn law, and to-day's knowledge on that subject went no further than that of yesterday.

There was not much in the weekly mercantile reviews to warrant an assumption of any considerable revival in trade activity. February railroad earnings continue to make a good comparison with February of last year, but the contrast with the year before indicates that restoration to normal conditions has made only moderate progress as yet. Evidence of growing plethora of money was a substantial influence in sustaining the determination of the speculators for a rise to hold their position. Funds are offered in abundance, with the effect of a yielding tendency for time loans. A feature of the situation is the borrowing of funds abroad against purchase of prime mercantile paper in this market, the 3½ per cent. minimum rate for the mercantile paper here offering a margin of profit on funds secured in London and Paris at the prevailing discounts below 2 per cent. The day's gains were fully held and the market closed strong.

The bank statement disclosed some weakening of position, principally owing to increase of deposit liabilities by the loan expansion. The ease of the money market indicates that this was in connection with April 1 payments, which return quickly to the channels of the money market.

Bonds were steady. Total sales (par value), $2,414,000. United States 3s registered advanced ¼ per cent. on call during the week.

Weekly Bank Statement.

New York, April 3.—The statement of the clearing-house banks for the week shows that the banks hold $13,985,825 more than the required 25 per cent. reserve rule. This is a decrease of $2,793,850 in the proportionate cash reserve as compared with last week. The statement follows:

		Increase.
Loans	$1,300,522,200	$10,920,100
Deposits	1,335,968,700	10,569,800
Circulation	48,713,600	175,800
Legal tenders	78,572,900	*2,861,700
Specie	274,405,100	2,710,300
Reserve	352,978,000	*151,400
Reserve required	338,992,175	2,642,450
Surplus	13,985,825	*2,793,850
Ex-U. S. deposits	14,639,550	*2,837,075

*Decrease.

The percentage of actual reserve of the clearing-house banks to-day was 25.81.

The statement of banks and trust companies of Greater New York not reporting to the clearing-house shows that these institutions have aggregate deposits of $1,237,353,500; total cash on hand $147,751,500, and loans amounting to $1,081,033,800.

The Financier says: "The statement of the associated banks of the city of New York for the week ending April 3 showed an unexpectedly large decrease in cash reserve. The known operations of the week, taking the actual conditions of the banks as a basis, foreshadowed a gain in cash from the interior about as large as that lost in operations with the Subtreasury and through gold exports. It is rather puzzling to figure out how, in the face of the different known operations, the banks reduced their cash holdings by $5,238,300. The loans of the banks increased during the week $9,655,444. This was due, for the most part, to April dividend preparations and disbursements. Deposits, owing to the loss in cash noted above, increased only $3,258,500, and the result of all the changes was a decrease of $4,060,025 in surplus reserve, bringing that item down to $10,502,550. The summary of State banks and trust companies in Greater New York not reporting to the New York clearing-house showed a decrease in loans for the week of $3,081,500, an increase in cash of $262,000, and an increase of net deposits amounting to $5,686,700. The cash reserve of the clearing-house banks, based on actual conditions, is now 25.81 per cent., which shows that they are within a fraction of the 25 per cent. reserve required by law."

COTTON MARKETS.

New York, April 2.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 6@7 points and soon sold 9 to 10 points higher on active general buying, bull support and covering. Higher Liverpool cables, bullish week-end figures, more optimistic trade reviews and reports of firmer interior holders aided the advance, which carried prices to within 2@4 points of the high record for the season, made late last January. Realizing was heavy at the advance, but offerings were well absorbed and the market continued active during the most of the morning, with prices holding well up to the best. The market closed very steady, with prices net 5@8 points higher.

Receipts at the ports to-day were 13,651 bales, against 16,271 last week and 14,819 last year; for the week 90,000 bales, against 97,461 last week and 99,899 last year; to-day's receipts at New Orleans 1,888 bales, against 3,979 last year, and at Houston 2,095, against 1,075 last year.

Spot cotton closed quiet and 5 points higher; middling uplands 10c; do gulf 10.25c; sales 100 bales.

Futures opened firm and closed very steady. The range for the day was as follows:

New Orleans, April 3.—Spot cotton firm and unchanged. Sales 1,100 bales on the spot and 650 to arrive. Quotations: Low ordinary 5¾c, nominal; ordinary 8 11-16c, nominal; good ordinary 8¼c; low middling 9c; middling 9 9-16c; good middling 9 15-16c; middling fair 10 5-16c; fair 11 1-16c, nominal. Receipts 1,888 bales; stock 187,160.

Futures opened steady at an advance of 7 points on good cables. After the opening the advance was continued on unfavorable weather returns from the Western belt and on good trade reports from the East. No rain at all was reported in the drouth area in Texas and the prospects were for fair weather over Sunday. This caused considerable covering by shorts. Reports of a better business in cotton goods with China increased the buying, and prices rose to a level 9@13 points above the closing of yesterday. The advance was maintained up to the end of the session, the market closing firm at a net advance of 9@12 points.

Futures advanced sharply this week as the result of marked improvement in reports from the dry goods markets of both this country and England, as well as on weather returns from Texas, which were nothing short of alarming. Bears covered freely in the old and the new crop months, while professionals bought for long account the old crop months and outsiders bought the new.

In the spot department the demand showed improvement; sales on the spot totaling 9,875 bales, against 6,150 last week; sales to arrive 4,500, against 5,450. Middling advanced ⅛c during the week.

Futures ranged as follows to-day:

COTTON COMMENT.

New York.—Rain is still badly needed in the Southwest, but the continued apathy in cotton trade may bring about slight reactions from time to time, on which we strongly advise the purchase of the commodity.—(Hubbard Bros. & Co. to E. E. Paine & Co.

The most encouraging item in the week-end figures was the renewed activity at Fall River, sales being estimated from 175,000 to 200,000 pieces, against 70,000 last week. Spinners' takings of American were again at the 250,000 mark. The China trade continues large. March shipments of goods totaling 50,000 bales, which is approximately 40,000,000 yards. Texas reports were discouraging; each additional day of the drouth makes the prospects poorer, and the prevailing high and dry winds were said to be taking every vestige of moisture out of the soil. The situation in the big State is undoubtedly becoming critical. From the balance of the belt we hear of no complaints and the eastern section will likely put in as big an acreage as possible, hoping to profit by a small yield in Texas. We believe the market is due to react, but if there is still a good-sized short interest no material setback is likely until it is run in. On soft spots we believe cotton should be bought.—(J. S. Bache & Co. to Washington Flexner & Co.

The spring weather continues abominable and it gives no promise of relief, as the Texas forecast is for continued fair and warmer weather, which, should it continue for another week, would put cotton into the same fermenting speculative turmoil which now characterizes the grain markets of the world.—(Hill, of Logan & Bryan, to W. L. Lyons & Co.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, April 3.—For the third consecutive day new high record marks for wheat were established on the Board of Trade here to-day when the May delivery sold at $1.22¼ and the July at $1.08¾ per bushel. The market closed strong at net gains for the day of a shade to 1@1¼c compared with the previous close. Corn and oats also closed firm and provisions steady.

Extreme bullishness was manifested in the wheat pit throughout the entire day, and the volume of trade was large. Traders in the pit were apparently not greatly disturbed by the suspension of John Dickinson & Co., announced here before the opening of the exchange, inasmuch as the manager of the concern here declared there would be no losses to the Chicago trade. At the same time, it was believed a good many short sales for the account of the firm existed. This proved true to some extent, as there was buying of wheat "for whom it may concern" during the early part of the session, presumably for Dickinson short lines. The market opened strong and at a wide range of prices. First trades on May were quoted at $1.20¾@1.21½, the latter figure being the high point made during the Gates deal in 1905. The July delivery opened at $1.08½@1.08¾. The strength at the start was due to the bullish situation surrounding the cash grain in this country, and to an advance of ¾@⅞d at Liverpool. The leading bull was on the buying side of the market, and this started plenty of covering by shorts. Early in the day prices reacted a trifle on profit-taking, but toward the end of the first hour prices again started upward, and before the upturn was checked May had advanced to $1.22¼ and July to $1.08¾. During the final hour the market was bullishly affected by crop damage reports and by an improved demand for flour in the Northwest. Fresh reports were received from Ohio telling of injury to the crop by "winter killing." The close was strong, with May at $1.21⅝@1.21¾ and July at $1.08⅝.

The corn market was a spasmodic affair, trade being active at times, and then inclined to drag. The tone, however, was firm all day, mainly on account of the strength of wheat. Small receipts, light country acceptances and an artificial forecast for unsettled weather in the corn belt, however, had some effect. The close was firm at net gains of a shade to ¼@⅜c. May being at 68c and July at 66⅝c.

There was a broad and active trade in oats and the market scored moderate gains in sympathy with the strength of other grain. Cash houses bought May rather freely, while shorts were the principal buyers of the deferred futures. The market closed firm at net gains of ¼@⅜c. Final quotations on May were at 55⅝@55¾c and on July 48½@48⅝c.

Provisions were quiet and steady. Buying by a local packer based on a 5c advance in live hogs was the feature of trade. At the close prices were a shade to 5c higher.

GRAIN LETTERS.

Chicago.—There was some fancy work in May wheat during the morning, when the price for that month went to $1.22¼. The buying was chiefly by those who had accounts open with the firm which suspended, and as the house had recently been on the selling side of May wheat it took fairly liberal offerings from the bull leaders to check even more of a flurry than was recorded. In July wheat, where a greater part of the trade exists at present, there was a big, broad bull market all day, with the close only ⅛c under the high point of the day and the year. Legitimate news, both at home and abroad, continues to encourage buyers of wheat. Broomhall revised his estimate on world's shipments exclusive of America, making it 6,400,000 bushels. This indicates small world shipments for Monday. Liverpool was up nearly 1d at the time of our opening, and reported big demand for cargoes and strong country markets all over Europe. Northwest receipts fell below last year. Minneapolis decreased stocks 50,000 bushels from yesterday. That point reports large flour sales. Cash sales of wheat here yesterday amounted to 140,000 bushels, one round lot going to Eastern mills, all rail, and a lake charter for 100,000 bushels to go to Buffalo confirmed. Sales of moderate amounts of hard wheat were made for shipment here early to-day. A number of houses in the trade which have been getting very flattering crop news for a fortnight past are now beginning to hear from damaged spots both Southwest and Southeast. If anything occurs in Monday's statistics to disturb prices at all, believe buying orders filled on a break will show quick profits. The July wheat is sure to work higher.—(Logan & Bryan to W. L. Lyons & Co.

Chicago.—Cables came higher, Liverpool closing ¾@⅞d up, and this was a helping influence. Flour business in the Northwest was reported showing some improvement and there were further sales of cash wheat here. In the Southwest the cash demand was called less urgent, the milling demand having been fairly well supplied for the moment. Primary receipts were slightly less than a year ago at 357,000 bushels, but there seems to be ample wheat stocks at all markets except the Southwest. Sentiment is becoming too unanimous for safety on the long side, and a reaction would place the market in a much healthier position. Would take profits on the strong spots and only buy in the good breaks. Country offerings of corn will probably increase with any further improvement in prices, and we think deferred months a sale. May oats are controlled by the bull clique and may be worked higher, but would buy off months on sharp drives only.—(S. B. Chapin & Co. to S. C. Henning & Co.

Chicago.—The market looks overbought to us, although sentiment is still very bullish, and there would undoubtedly be support by the leading bulls on any good break. Crop reports are none too good, and if the Government report confirms important damage the bulls will have plenty of help on the long side. Up to date, however, we believe present conditions relative to cash wheat, as well as the state of the growing crop, have been well discounted, but the bull fever will have to run its course before there will be any permanent decline. With a slow cash demand and fair receipts we do not regard the outlook for corn as bullish, and would sell deferred months on the bulges for quick turns. A big short interest in July oats has been eliminated on this advance, and we think this month will be a sale on all bulges.—(Finley Barrell & Co. to E. E. Paine & Co.

Chicago.—While the bull leader keeps aggressive, congestion will continue and bear scalps are only advisable on extreme bulges, but may be safest in the end, as liquidation usually starts vicious breaks. The leader may possibly take in May on delivery, though he would have little time to market before the new crop.—(Tracy & Co. to Hunt, Bridgeford & Co.

FOREIGN FINANCIAL.

London, April 3.—Money was more plentiful and easier on the market to-day and discounts were quiet. Attendance at the Stock Exchange was small, owing to the Oxford-Cambridge race. Business was light, but the tone was steady, with slight improvement in consols and Kaffirs. Otherwise there was little change. American securities were easier, in sympathy with Wall street, and after small business they closed from ½ point to 1 point lower than yesterday, but still above the lowest for the day. The tone was steady. Closing prices: Consols for money 84 13-16; do for the account 84 15-16; Anaconda 9; Atchison 109½; do preferred 106½; Baltimore and Ohio 114½; Canadian Pacific 179¾; Chesapeake and Ohio 72; Chicago Great Western 5½; Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul 152½; De Beers 13⅜; Denver and Rio Grande 48¼; do preferred 90; Erie 29¾; do first preferred 45½; do second preferred 35½; Grand Trunk 20¾; Illinois Central 149½; Louisville and Nashville 137; Missouri, Kansas and Texas 42¾; New York Central 133; Norfolk and Western 93; do preferred 90; Ontario and Western 48; Pennsylvania 68¾; Rand Mines 8¼; Reading 68¾; Southern Railway 26¾; do preferred 66; Southern Pacific 123¼; Union Pacific 189¾; do preferred 98; United States Steel 50¾; do preferred 116; Wabash 18½; do preferred 48½; Amalgamated Copper 75¾; Spanish fours 96½. Bar silver steady at 23 7-16d per ounce. Money 1½@1¾ per cent. The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 1 9-16@1¾ per cent.; do three months' bills 1 9-16@1¾ per cent.

The long-expected revival and broadening of business on the Stock Exchange has made a fair start, and transactions for the past week have been larger than for some time past. Prices without exception are considerably dearer and the tone is buoyant. The definite settlement of the near Eastern question started more confident dealings which increased on the clearer monetary outlook and the reduction in the Bank of England's discount. Consols, Colonial issues, foreign rails and foreign bonds were bought locally during the week. The continental account was largely for investment, but speculators have given increased attention to Kaffirs and copper shares, resulting in an all-around improvement. Consols advanced 1 per cent. This rapid rise brought an equal amount of profit-taking sales at the end of the week. The outlook is considered promising for a further rise in good yielding stocks, especially with money becoming more plentiful. Various checks, however, are anticipated by the outflow of fresh issues and the probabilities of increased taxation in connection with the budget. The budget, together with the overhanging Irish land purchase bill, is expected to limit the improvement in gilt-edged securities. American securities are also considerably dearer, due to increased professional support. Local operators, however, do not like the rapid rise in the face of tariff revision, and they are acting cautiously. The continent, however, sent fair orders to assist in the upward movement. The Harriman issues, Atchison and United States Steel received the most attention, and, in spite of profit-taking sales at the end of the week that caused a decline of 2 points, values closed to-day from 2 to 4 points higher than last Saturday. Canadian Pacific was an exception, being quoted 8¾ points dearer.

Berlin, April 3.—Prices on the Boerse to-day opened lower, especially in the case of American securities, on realizing. Later the market turned strongly upward, notably Canadian Pacific. Exchange on London 20 marks 41½ pfgs. for checks. Money 3¼ per cent. Private rate of discount 2 per cent.

Paris, April 3.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm. Rentes rose on the appointment by the Senate of an income tax committee. The Bourse will be closed on April 9 and 10. Three per cent. rentes 98f 30c for the account. Exchange on London 25f 17½c for checks.

DO YOU HEAR WELL?

The Stolz Electrophone—A New, Scientific and Practical Invention for Those Who are Deaf or Partially Deaf—May Now Be Tried At Our Louisville Branch.

Deaf or partially deaf people may now make a trial of Stolz Electrophone at home. This is unusually important news for the deaf, for by this plan the final selection of the one completely satisfactory hearing aid is made easy and inexpensive for everyone. This new invention (U. S. Patent No. 783,950) renders unnecessary such clumsy, unsightly and frequently harmful devices as trumpets, horns, tubes, ear drums, fans, etc. It is a tiny electric telephone that fits on the ear, and which, the instant it is applied, magnifies the sound waves in such manner as to cause an actual increase in the keenness of all sounds. It overcomes the buzzing and roaring noises and also accustantly and electrically exercises the vital parts of the ear that usually the natural, unaided hearing itself is gradually restored.

ONE OF THE MANY TESTIMONIALS

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 11, 1909.

Mr. H. V. Wright, Stolz Electrophone Co.—Dear Sir: I am more than pleased with my Electrophone, and would not part with it unless I could purchase another. I cheerfully recommend your hearing device to all deaf or partially deaf persons, as it is giving me perfect satisfaction. Yours very sincerely, GEO. J. FIELDS.

Mrs. C. Lidecka, 228 12th ave., Maywood, Ill., wears an Electrophone. Less conspicuous than eyeglasses.

WANTED--A CANDIDATE

INSURGENT REPUBLICANS NOW "UP A STUMP."

Councilman Forst Only One Willing To Run For Mayor, But He Isn't Conservative Enough.

The anti-machine Republicans who have been meeting and condemning the action of the Republican City and County Executive Committee in calling the primary convention, from time to time, effected a permanent organization last night at the meeting at Odd Fellows' Hall, Sixth and Walnut streets. The name of the insurgent body is the Louisville and Jefferson County Republican Club. Edward Ashcraft, a member of the Board of Aldermen, was elected president of the club. He has been acting president ever since the anti-machine Republicans have been meeting.

The meeting last night was decidedly a tame affair. The special committee which has been trying to get some one to make the race for Mayor on the insurgent ticket, has made very poor progress and was as far from being able to make a report last night as it has ever been. While Isidore Forst has intimated that he wanted to make the race for Mayor, it is believed that many of the insurgents fear that he is too radical in his ideas against the Grinstead administration. One of the members of the club last night said that the club was not so much opposed to the Grinstead administration as it was opposed to the tyrannical methods of the Republican City and County Committee, which is being controlled by a few Republican bosses.

"We want a conservative man to make the race," said the member of the club. "We can't afford to get into the game as being opposed to everything in the Grinstead administration. I like Forst, but he is awfully bitter against the Grinstead administration. We are opposed to machine methods of making nominations for city and county officers and not so much opposed to every act of Mayor Grinstead. I believe that we will be able within the next week or two to make some definite announcements as to what we will do in the matter of putting a ticket in the field. One thing is sure, we are not going to surrender to the machine."

It is understood the great trouble is that no one will consent to make the race for Mayor on the insurgent platform with the possible exception of Councilman Forst. While the insurgents will not admit it, yet it is understood that several men who have been approached on the matter have declined the proffered honor.

Franklin, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—Relatives here have received intelligence of the death of Mr. A. J. Clark at his home in Green county. He was the father of Mrs. J. M. Leak, of this place. The deceased was 94 years of age and veteran of both the Mexican and the Civil Wars.

LITIGATION

May Follow Awarding of Contract For Sewer.

NEWLY-WEDDED PAIR STRANDED IN JEFFERSONVILLE.

MYSTERY SURROUNDING DISAPPEARANCE GROWS DEEPER.

VICTIMS OUT OF DANGER.

The Jeffersonville Board of Public Works yesterday advertised that on April 26 it would receive bids for building a trunk sewer, from the Ohio River, at the foot of Pearl street, to North and Locust streets, the route to be over a number of thoroughfares. It is stipulated that the construction is to be of concrete pipe, sixty inches in diameter at the river and thirty-six inches at its smaller end. The action of the board, Henry F. Dilger, a Jeffersonville attorney, says, probably will result in litigation. It is being claimed by many that the contemplated sewer is eighteen feet higher at the river than at the inlet, which, it is asserted, makes the drainage uphill.

The estimated cost is about $51,000 and the length of the excavation is more than one mile. For himself and other residents of Jeffersonville Mr. Dilger went before the Board of Public Works on Friday and filed a written remonstrance against the construction of the sewer, but no attention was paid to this, he claims. In his remonstrance Mr. Dilger gives seven different reasons, in as many paragraphs, why the sewer should not be built. In a condensed form they are as follows:

"That the cost to the property owners will be practically confiscatory of the property along the line of the sewer; that the plan is needlessly expensive, as the drainage as planned is against its natural course; that it will be inoperative and valueless during several months of the year for the reason that the level of the Ohio River will be above the sewer at its inlet; that the immense ditch contemplated for the construction of the sewer on Court avenue and Pearl street will make the construction of the sewer economically impossible; that the only practical method of constructing the sewer to serve the territory intended is to build one by natural drainage and not to attempt to drain uphill for a mile in defiance of the laws of gravitation; that to make the proposed sewer of any value it will be necessary to maintain a pumping station to prevent water and sewage from flowing out of the sewer at Tenth street when the stage of water in the Ohio River is above normal; that the construction of the sewer will entail useless expense on the property owners whose lands will be affected by the sewer for the reason that the trend of legislation, both by the General Assembly of Indiana and the Congress of the United States, is toward prohibiting the emptying of sewage into ponds, lakes and rivers, especially those from which water is taken for domestic purposes, with the intention of preventing the spread of typhoid fever and other filth diseases."

In Dire Straits.

With their honeymoon barely ended, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Trimble, intelligent, well-appearing young people, found themselves in Jeffersonville yesterday morning in a stranded condition and appealed to Fry, Curry, Township Trustee, for assistance to get to their home in Indianapolis. They were hungry and were sent to Reilley's Hotel. The story they told was so full of hard luck that Mr. Curry's heart was touched and he did what he could for them. Last night they were sent to Indianapolis, but not before Trimble had worked for a few hours at a small job on the streets.

The pair said they were married four months ago and their prospects seemed good for the future. Trimble is a baker and had what he thought was a steady position in Cincinnati. He worked, made fair wages and was getting along nicely until he lost his position and could not find another. He had heard work could be had in Jeffersonville at the car works for the asking of it. They had practically nothing, but decided to trust to luck to get them to Jeffersonville. They worked along the way, where they could find anything to do, to secure funds to give them a boost on a train for a few miles.

When they had no money and could not find odd jobs they walked until something turned up, finally arriving in Jeffersonville after paying out their last dime for car fare. Hungry and tired they set out afoot, more miserable than they found the car works was not running. They then decided to appeal to Trustee Curry. Trimble said he was stout and could beat his way home on a freight train or walk part of the way if his wife was given transportation. This was agreed to and after a ticket was purchased for an afternoon train the wandering pair could not be found. They returned to Trustee Curry's office late last evening and explained that the husband had found an odd job of work and he decided to make what he could before starting for Indianapolis.

Still Missing.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of Mrs. Pearl Giltner, a sister of Mrs. C. L. Monroe, of Jeffersonville, who disappeared from the home of Mrs. J. W. Talbott, 717 West New York street, Indianapolis, two weeks ago next Tuesday night, has become deeper and, on account of the Jeffersonville relatives, two of whom went to Indianapolis, the police of that city for the second time have taken up the search for the missing woman. Mrs. Giltner, who is a widow and about 27 years old, for some time had been living with Mrs. Talbott, and on the night in question left home about 12 o'clock, partly clad in her night attire, telling a daughter of Mrs. Talbott that she was going to a drug store after some medicine.

She did not return and a search was begun for her, but without success. A few days after her disappearance a note was received by Mrs. Talbott from Mrs. Giltner saying that the latter, on the advice of a physician, had gone to a hospital, but she did not say where it was located. She said she was being well treated and did not want for anything. The police attempted to find her, but were not able to do so and gave up the search. Early last week Mrs. Monroe and another sister from Jeffersonville went to Indianapolis to see if they could find the missing woman.

Mrs. Giltner is a woman highly regarded by those who know her, and she formerly lived in Jeffersonville, where her father, Henry Nolan, owned a blacksmith shop several years ago. Her husband has been dead about a year. Mrs. Monroe and the other Jeffersonville relatives are greatly worried over the unaccountable absence of Mrs. Giltner.

All On Road To Recovery.

Encouraging reports reached Jeffersonville yesterday from John Dellinger, Lucille Lentz and Charlotte Lentz, the latter being colored, who are at a Pasteur institute in Chicago, through the return of T. E. Lentz, of Utica township, father of the little girl who was one of the three persons bitten by a mad dog last Tuesday. Mr. Lentz is going to Chicago was accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Chris Lentz, and his sister, Miss Ella Lentz, not his wife as was generally understood, and he returned home to look after his duties there. Mrs. Lentz is threatened with pneumonia. Mrs. Chris Lentz and Miss Ella Lentz remained with the little girl and all of them will return in about ten days, as the treatment lasts for two weeks.

Mr. Lentz said his daughter was out of danger and her complete cure had been guaranteed. He said the physicians in charge stated there was nothing serious about her case, as it had been taken in hand promptly. Mr. Dellinger, Mr. Lentz said, was really in a better condition than the daughter of the latter, but he was considerably worried on account of his compelled absence from his work on his farm at home. The white patients are having a good time, Mr. Lentz said. They board just across the street from the institute and spend a great deal of their time sight-seeing, as the treatment does not interfere with this, and they go where they please.

The condition of the old colored woman, Lentz said, was regarded as favorable for her recovery.

RESIGNS

As Superintendent of New Albany Schools.

PROF. PROSSER ACCEPTS POSITION IN NEW YORK.

PREPARING TO CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH.

TO IMPROVE SHELBY STREET.

Earl S. Gwin, president of the board of trustees of the public schools of New Albany, received yesterday from Prof. Charles A. Prosser his resignation as superintendent of the New Albany public schools. Prof. Prosser resigned to accept the appointment as superintendent of the schools of the Children's Aid Society of New York.

Prof. Prosser was re-elected a year ago superintendent of the public schools of New Albany for a period of two years and was given a year's leave of absence to take a teacher's course in the Columbia University, New York City. Prof. H. Buerk acted as superintendent of the New Albany schools in his absence. It was understood that if Prof. Prosser did not expect to return at the close of the year his resignation was to be offered. His salary at his new place will be $3,500 for the first year and $4,000 for the second.

Prof. Prosser stated in his letter that the Children's Aid Society has sixteen day schools, nine night schools, two for crippled children, two for those mentally defective and four for truants. Besides these summer schools are conducted at Bath Beach and Coney Island. Three hundred teachers are employed and the total enrollment of the schools is more than 14,000.

The society has a farm school on the Hudson River, above New York City, from which 26,000 waifs have been sent to farm homes west of the Mississippi. The entire work of the schools is with abnormal children, including the indigent, crippled and mentally deficient. During the existence of the society it has received numerous handsome endowments and only last week it was given an endowment of over $1,000,000.

Prof. Prosser, during the last few years, has been deeply interested in juvenile work and his services in the Juvenile Court of New Albany were most valuable. It was through an article on juvenile work in an Eastern magazine that he was awarded a scholarship in the Columbia University and his efforts there have attracted attention, as evidenced by the responsible appointment he has received.

Birthday Anniversary.

Gerhardt H. Hinkebein, an old resident of New Albany, to-day will celebrate at his home on East Market street, near Fifth street, that city, his 86th birthday anniversary. Mr. Hinkebein came to New Albany more than sixty years ago and has lived nearly all of the time in his present home. He has three sons and four daughters—Bernard, Andrew and Frank Hinkebein, Mrs. Peter Husson, Mrs. Vincent Zimmerman, Miss Mary and Miss Frances Hinkebein. During all these years he has pursued the trade of shoemaker and has acquired a competency by his industry and economical habits.

Adopts Specifications.

The Board of Public Works of New Albany, at the meeting of that body yesterday morning, adopted general specifications for the improvement of Shelby street, east of Eleventh street, and notice was given that objections could be filed April 24.

The property holders, after the bids are opened, can select the paving material a majority may desire.

A leave of absence was granted City Engineer Mann to go to Indianapolis to investigate the cost of different material.

This is the second time that the Shelby-street improvement has come before the Board of Public Works. The first steps toward the movement were taken under the provisions of the old law, but before the contract was awarded the new law had become effective.

Burglars Loot Home.

The residence of R. W. Alpers, 325 East Fifteenth street, New Albany, was entered by burglars Friday night and jewelry and silverware to the value of $50 were stolen. The articles included a set ring with garnet center, surrounded by diamonds; plain gold ring, eighteen dessert spoons, a silver purse, a watch fob and two razors.

Entrance was effected by forcing a front window and an attempt was made to enter the home of John T. Scales, 323 East Fifteenth street, adjoining, in the same manner.

Footprints in the soft earth about the house included those of a woman. The matter was reported to Capt. Thomas Cannon, in charge of the night force, and Patrolmen Martin and Kleinsteiber were detailed to investigate the case.

United In Marriage.

Mrs. Rebecca Byrne, who lives near Byrnville, Harrison county, and Dr. Isaac LaHue, a veterinary surgeon living near Corydon, were married in New Albany Friday night. The ceremony was performed by Magistrate Thomas E. Fogle. The pair left yesterday for Harrison county. The bridegroom is 75 years old, while the bride is 64 years old. This is the second matrimonial venture for each.

NEW LIFE IN TARIFF DEBATE

Good Democratic Speeches To Empty Benches.

Less Than Twenty Men Present During Session.

Representative Cox, of Indiana, Finds a Joker.

RAINEY ROASTS WATCH TRUST

Washington, April 3.—[Special.]—Representative Cox, of the New Albany, Indiana, district, and Representative Sabath, of Illinois, managed to get the House out of the tiresome rut of new members' speeches to-day, and the Indiana member especially made a speech well worth listening to. Mr. Cox has been putting in some hard work on the tariff and his speech shows it. He delved into nearly every schedule in the bill and added another joker to the long list, viz., the discrimination it is proposed to make against American shipbuilders.

"The Republican party insists upon its policy of protection for its double purpose, as it claims, of protecting all industries, large and small alike, against foreign competition and at the same time raising revenue. The Democratic party agrees with the Republican party as to raising revenue, but denies the right of protection against foreign competition. The Republican party's position is a paternalistic one; the Democratic party's position is in opposition to this, but aiming at equal and exact justice in the way of legislation, throwing the individual on his own ambition, free from fetters or special legislation, letting him work out his own destiny."

In these words Representative Cox opened his tariff speech upon which he was warmly congratulated by his fellow Democrats.

* * *

Equal Rights To All.

"The Republican party insists that the Government was created for the purpose of fostering private enterprises, even though it is at the expense of the many, if necessary. The Democratic party insists that the Government was created to foster the interests of all alike by passing laws of equal uniformity, operating with equal force upon all of its citizens," said Mr. Cox.

"One of the serious evils in this bill," he added, "and one which should condemn it, is that there is no relief from the burdens of taxation upon the many necessaries of life; but on the other hand, there is a very large increase in many articles necessary to life.

* * *

The Prize Joker.

"A great many 'jokers' have been discovered and unearthed during the progress of this debate, but, in my judgment, the real genuine joker, the straight flush, the sweepstake is in the provision providing for free raw materials for the construction and building of all ships in the United States to be used by foreigners or owned by them. This section would preclude free raw materials for the construction and building of ships for American ownership for American trade and to sail under the American flag. Why discriminate in favor of the vessels built for an American citizen, for the home trade and to sail under the American flag?

"This is exactly what the section does. It gives to the shipbuilders of the country material free of duty provided they build a ship for foreign ownership or for foreign trade. On the other hand, it compels an American who wants a ship built to ply in the home trade and to sail it under the American flag to pay an enormous duty upon every pound of iron and steel, lead or paint, every foot of lumber, his leather or any other article which may be necessary to construct his ship."

Letters of Protest Read.

Representative Sabath, a Democrat, of Illinois, described the widespread opposition to the Payne bill throughout the country. He produced letters from people in all walks of life, protesting against the duties on hosiery, cotton goods, gloves and every other article of wear. From the committee of wholesale grocers of New York he read a letter stating that their investigation disclosed the fact that the Sugar Trust was the chief beneficiary of the sugar duty. This committee said the cost of refined sugar was increased 2 cents a pound.

"Such a tax on a necessity," said the committee, "cannot be justified. It alone means a burden on the average family of about $16 per annum."

"I believe," said Mr. Sabath, "that these words are not far-fetched. The people do demand a revision of the tariff, but they demand a reduction on the necessities of life. And they are entitled to that. The Republicans have made a pledge and they have made a promise. You have pledged yourself in convention and in platform that you will reduce the tariff. And you have reduced it. For the interest of the laboring man, who is about to build a home, you have reduced the tariff on marble 10 cents per square foot. You have also reduced the tariff on granite and on stained and decorated plate glass, which is used in the poor man's mansion. You have reduced 2 cents a pound on gunpowder, but not the powder that is usually used or is ever used by our navy. They will not let you take that off, but they say 'for sporting purposes only.'"

Few Members Present.

Eleven members were in their seats to-day when the House of Representatives met to further consider the Payne tariff bill. It was the smallest attendance of the special session and demonstrates the fact that interest in the debate had practically disappeared.

Mr. Sparkman, of Florida, opened the discussion by making an earnest plea for a restoration of the Dingley rate on lumber, and the imposition of a duty of five cents a pound on all cotton imported into the United States.

While declaring that he would vote for the bill, Mr. Kinkaid, of Nebraska, entered strenuous objection to the taxing of these necessaries of life which are not produced in this country. The proposed tax on tea and the countervailing duty on coffee, he said, were especially obnoxious to him and he urged their removal. Mr. Kinkaid also opposed the placing of hides on the free list.

The placing of wood pulp on the free list and the reduction of the duty on printing paper were opposed by Mr. Malby, of New York.

Free coal, iron and lumber and a tariff commission were some of the things contended for by Mr. Gronna, Republican, of North Dakota.

Mr. Howell, of Utah, opposed any duty on sugar, tea or coffee and contended that an increase of duty in sugar would produce the required revenue and encourage the best sugar industry. He said the admission of 300,000 tons of Philippine sugar displacing that quantity of full duty paid sugar would ultimately deplete our revenues by $10,000 annually. He favored a duty on hides, lumber and coal. Mr. Hobson, of Alabama, followed Mr. Howell.

In the opinion of Mr. Randell, of Texas, the Payne bill is more obnoxious than the Dingley act. It is not only sectional, he said, but discriminated against the South and the West, and in its effects would be injurious to the masses North and East.

If Mr. Humphreys, of Mississippi, has his way, lumber will be on the free list and an additional tax of 60 cents a barrel on beer imposed. He spoke on both propositions in connection with the debate.

Mr. Stafford, a Republican of Wisconsin, heartily indorsed the provisions of the bill placing hides and wood pulp on the free list. It was, he said, a recognition of the need in the United States for free raw material.

The House at 6 o'clock took a recess until 8 p. m.

* * *

The Night Session.

Sixteen members were present when Mr. Rainey, of Illinois, began speaking against the bill, at the evening session. He found fault with the duty on watches. He became involved in a controversy with Mr. Tirrell, of Massachusetts, to whom he referred as the "watch trust expert on the Republican side." Mr. Tirrell defended the tariff as a protection to American labor.

Mr. Rainey claimed that the "joker" in the watch schedule was a provision requiring the name of the manufacturer, his town and nation and the number of jewels, about fifteen words, must be engraved on the works of the imported watch. He claimed no Swiss watch had large enough plates for this to be done and therefore it would be excluded.

Mr. Rainey said it was no wonder Mr. Tirrell defended the trust, as he would not have been elected had the trust not instructed its employes to vote for him. When Chairman Olmstead reprimanded him, Mr. Rainey said he meant no reflection, as he had spoken in a humorous vein.

Mr. Saunders, of Virginia, criticised the Ways and Means Committee for not applying the protective system to the tobacco industry in the South as well as industries in other sections.

Claiming that two weeks had been wasted in what is termed general debate, which he said was no debate at all, Mr. Lever, of South Carolina, said that the country wants the bill considered item by item and wants the members to have an opportunity to amend it item by item.

* * *

Plea From the Philippines.

Basing his objection to the Philippine sections of the Payne tariff bill on the provision which admits American goods in unlimited quantity into the islands without duty, Benito Lagarda, resident commissioner from the Philippines, addressed the House to-day.

He pointed out that the admission of 300,000 tons of Philippine sugar free into the United States would not improve conditions in the islands immediately because the industry had declined one-half during American occupation and because China was the natural market for that sugar. Immediate benefit might not accrue to the tobacco industry either, he said.

"Had the proposition for reciprocal free trade been made before the Philippine Assembly was constituted," said Mr. Lagarda, "very little if any opposition would have been made to this measure. But to-day that assembly wishes us to respectfully present their wishes before this House in order that you who come so directly from the American people may pass judgment on the claims of those over whom you exercise sovereignty.

"If, instead of the free admission, without limitation as to quantity, of American products into the Philippine Islands, this bill provided only the free entry there of agricultural machinery and other commodities of prime necessity (such as cotton cloth) and which are needed for the agricultural and industrial development of those islands, or if this bill provided only for such reciprocal exchange of commodities custom duty free as would balance the limited quantity of sugar and tobacco sent from there with an equally limited quantity of American products to be sent from here—if such were the provisions of this bill it would be our pleasant duty as representatives of the Philippine people to make manifest to this House their gratitude, and through this House to the American people, and who in the final analysis are the ones who decide what is to be the future of the Philippine Islands.

Not Ungrateful.

"The Filipino people are not ungrateful for what the American Government has accomplished and is accomplishing for them in those islands. In several respects the laws which govern the Filipino people are superior even to the laws in some of the most advanced States of this Union.

"The Congress of the United States has always been inspired in its acts by principles of justice and wise equity. Especially has it demonstrated its generosity and liberality when the interests of the poor and the weak were at stake. The Filipino people believe that coming before this Congress with a just cause it will receive the same measure of equity as that which the American people, through their representatives in this Congress, have always in the past conceded under similar circumstances.

"My firm conviction has always been and remains to this day unshaken, that a prosperous and happy future smiled on the Philippine Islands from the moment the Americans planted the flag which represents liberty, progress and civilization."

GRANTS PARDON

To Grace Brewer, Negro Girl, Who Stole 85 Cents.

GOV. WILLSON TURNS DOWN ANOTHER REQUEST.

JUDGE BOOE MUST ANSWER IN COURT MONDAY.

SEVERAL IMMIGRANTS PLACED

Frankfort, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—After serving nearly a year in the Jefferson county jail for stealing 85 cents, Grace Brewer, a negro, gained her freedom this afternoon and will be released to-morrow. Gov. Willson this afternoon granted her a pardon, which wipes out the charge against her.

The woman was convicted of grand larceny, in Louisville, for stealing only 85 cents, but the circumstances, under the statutes, of the theft made it grand instead of petit larceny. The woman was sentenced to the penitentiary for two years. Application was made to Gov. Willson for a pardon. Instead of granting the pardon he changed the sentence to one year in the Louisville jail. She made such a good prisoner and was so useful to the jail officials that they all joined in a request to the Governor for a pardon. Her time would have been out in June, anyhow, and if she had been allowed time off for good behavior, as would have been allowed in the penitentiary, her time would be out now. For this reason and because the Governor believes that she has been punished enough for so small an offense the Governor grants a pardon.

* * *

James Rone Must Serve.

Gov. Willson this afternoon refused to grant a pardon to James Rone, sent to the penitentiary for twenty-one years from Warren county. He was convicted of killing Charles Savery and at the time of the killing the case attracted a great deal of attention. Rone is a sort of trusty at the prison and his case attracted the sympathy of many persons, but the protests were strong and the Governor failed to find anything to justify a pardon. In refusing the pardon Gov. Willson says that he cannot upset the verdict of a jury unless something unusual is shown.

* * *

Pardons Granted.

Gov. Willson to-day granted pardons to the following companies indicted in the various Circuit Courts for failure to make reports to the Auditor for franchise tax: The Georgetown Water, Gas and Electric and Power Company; Stanford Water, Light and Power Company; Owensboro Gas Light Company, Louisville Bridge Company, of Louisville. The Governor says that the companies were not shown to have been negligent.

* * *

Booe Case Up Monday.

Circuit Court will begin here on Monday with several important cases on the docket. On account of the large number of divorce suits which are now pending it is probable that a special term of the court will be held to dispose of these. There are forty-two divorce cases on the docket, thirty of them being new cases. It is probable that Judge Charles E. Booe, formerly claim clerk in the Auditor's office, who stole nearly $40,000 from the State and who is now serving a sentence of five years in the penitentiary, will be tried on one or perhaps two more indictments against him at this term of court. The plan of the prosecution now is to have one case tried and if the jury gives Judge Booe five years, in addition to his present sentence, it is probable that only one more case will be tried. It is probable that after Judge Booe has been sentenced to fifteen years the other indictments against him will be dropped and he will be let off with that term of imprisonment.

* * *

Another Case.

Another case that will attract attention will be that of Gabe Jones, a convict in the penitentiary, who killed "Sheeny Mike" Jones inside the penitentiary walls. It is certain that Jones will be indicted early in the term and he probably will be tried at the present term, as there will not be much interest in behalf of the convict.

Immigrants Coming.

In his report made to M. C. Rankin, Commissioner of Agriculture, to-day Elijah Green, State Immigration Agent, shows the result of his work during the last month. He has brought to Kentucky and placed with people who desired help fourteen men and women and has received applications from seven more families who desire servants. Mr. Green's work has been to the advantage of the farmers and has helped to bring the best class of immigrants to Kentucky.

New Circuit Judge.

Gov. Willson this afternoon appointed William Lewis, of London, to be Judge of the Twenty-seventh judicial district, to succeed Judge H. C. Faulkner, resigned. He also appointed James C. Cloyd, of Manchester, Clay county, to be Commonwealth's Attorney to fill the vacancy caused by the promotion of Judge Lewis. Judge Lewis is now the Republican nominee for Circuit Judge, and Cloyd is the Republican nominee for Commonwealth's Attorney. Lewis is the present Commonwealth's Attorney. The two nominees are certain of election, as the district is largely Republican. They were nominated by overwhelming majorities.

WASHINGTON NOTES.

Considerable progress was made yesterday by the joint committee on demurrage of the Interstate Commerce Commission and representatives of the railroads and shippers, in session here, but no definite conclusions were reached. It will be necessary for the committee to meet again to thresh out matters yet in controversy. It is expected when the conclusions finally are reached they will be acceptable alike to the railroads and the shippers.

President Taft stated yesterday that he expects to visit San Francisco during the summer. He made the announcement to M. S. Salander and Leo Lexander, two callers from the Pacific coast, who were presented to him by Representative Kahn.

Rumors of activity of Nicaraguan troops reached the State Department yesterday, it being stated that troops had been moved to the Honduran border.

The Bureau of Insular Affairs yesterday received a cablegram stating that the Governor General of the Philippines is being flooded with telegrams from various points in the Islands urging that the Assembly recede from its opposition to the Philippines schedules of the Payne tariff bill, and especially from its objection to the proposed free trade sections of the measure. These telegrams, it is stated, declare that the sugar and tobacco growers in the Islands are greatly concerned about the action of the Assembly in the passage of its resolutions of opposition to the tariff bill.

In behalf of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, former United States Senator John C. Spooner has filed in the Supreme Court of the United States a petition for a rehearing of the various cases brought by the State of Texas against that company and which were recently decided against it. These include the cases involving the appointment of a receiver for the company, and the one ousting the company from the State and imposing a fine of $1,543,000 for violation of the Texas anti trust laws. The principal reason for the petition is that the fine was so excessive as to deprive the company of its property without due process of law.

Senators Dick and Burton, of Ohio, yesterday introduced to President Taft the new Speaker of the Ohio House of Representatives, Mr. Mooney, and Frank W. Milholland, a Republican leader of Toledo. It was said that some Ohio appointments were discussed informally and that the two Senators will act together as far as they can.

American delegates to the archaeological congress, which meets at Cairo this month, have been designated as follows: Theodore M. Davis, of Newport, R. I.; Walter Dennison, of the University of Michigan; Robert F. Harper and James H. Breasted, University of Chicago; George Andrew Reisner, Harvard University; Joseph Clark Hoppin, Dr. Albert M. Lythgoe and Paul Bauer.

William E. Wade has been appointed postmaster at Webbs, Green county, vice W. W. Settle, resigned.

Brig. Gen. William H. Carter was yesterday assigned to the command of the Department of the Luzon, as the relief of Brig. Gen. A. L. Mills, who is coming home. Gen. Carter was recently detached from the command of the Department of the Missouri.

PROSPECTUS

For May Music Festiva Ready For Distribution

CONTAINS PROGRAMMES FOR THE FIVE CONCERTS.

BRIEF HISTORY OF FAMOUS MUSICAL ORGANIZATION.

STARS TO APPEAR HERE.

There is hardly another organization in Louisville, which contains in its make-up representation of so many commercial and musical bodies as does the Louisville May Music Festival Society, which yesterday issued its formal prospectus for the festival of 1909, which will be held at the First Regiment Armory, May 6, 7 and 8. The description of the aims and objects of the organization includes a statement that the Retail Merchants' Association, the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, the Board of Trade, the Commercial Club and the Musical Club are all back of the festival society and are equally represented in its governing body.

"The chief object of the Louisville May Music Festival Society," the prospectus declares, "is the promotion of musical art by popularizing the higher forms of music, which, it is believed, can best be accomplished by the maintenance of a large chorus in Louisville and auxiliary choruses in New Albany and Jeffersonville; by bringing to Louisville the best music talent obtainable and the development and encouragement of meritorious musical talent in this section.

Formed Three Years Ago.

The society was formed three years ago for the purpose of holding music festivals every two years, alternating with Cincinnati, for the period of thirty years. A guarantee fund of more than $40,000 for the first three, one of which was held in the spring of 1907, was raised. It has the support of the Retail Merchants' Association, the Musical Club, the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, the Board of Trade, and the Commercial Club, all of them being represented equally in the organization.

"As an advertising force, as well as an institution of culture, it stands out as one of the strongest in the city, and more than recompenses the public-spirited citizens who have contributed so generously to its support."

The programmes for the five concerts to be given during the festival are given in the prospectus, and as it is the first time they have been made public, considerable interest attaches to them. Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, May 6, 7 and 8, and Friday and Saturday afternoons are the times for the performances, and each has some big feature to make it more than worth while.

The opening night is called "Italian Opera Night," and is marked by the production in concert form of the Verdi masterpiece, "Aida," as well as by selections from other representative operas of that school. Riccardo Martin and other famous soloists will appear at that time. Friday afternoon is to be the occasion of a "Symphony Concert," of which the outstanding feature is the great work recently produced by England's leading composer, Sir Edward Elgar, who wrote a symphony in E flat. Friday evening the chorus is to be featured, and will sing "The Death of Minnehaha" and "The Pied Piper of Hamelin" as part of the programme for "Popular Night."

* * *

Great Children's Chorus.

The great children's chorus of 500, drawn from the public schools of the city, is to appear at the "Children's Concert" Saturday afternoon, while the "Farewell Concert" of Saturday evening will be made one of the crowning events in the history of musical Louisville by the appearance of Mme. Olive Fremstad, one of the greatest sopranos in grand opera to-day. The programme has been arranged largely for her, and she will have full opportunity to prove her wonderful strength of voice and heart.

One of the features of the prospectus is the fact that it contains handsome half-tone pictures of all the soloists for the festival, together with a short sketch of the career of each. The publication is worthy of a high place, considered from a purely mechanical standpoint, and is printed on tinted paper with India ink. Fifteen thousand copies have been printed, and may be had on application to Secretary Andrew Broaddus, in the Columbia building. The demand has already proved so great that the plates are to be held for a second edition, if that becomes necessary.

The officers of the festival society are: Marion E. Taylor, president; Levi Bloom, first vice president; T. E. Basham, second vice president; L. T. Davidson, third vice president; L. F. Starks, fourth vice president; E. Weinstock, fifth vice president, and A. Broaddus, secretary-treasurer. The executive committee is composed of Messrs. Taylor, Bloom, Basham, Davidson and Broaddus, with the addition of R. G. Brier and Fred Levy. The executive committee has held weekly meetings for several months, and has worked out every detail of the big affair, with painstaking fidelity and care.

BLACK HAND

Note Left Under the Door of Barbershop.

J. O. WILSON WARNED TO CHANGE PLACE OF BUSINESS.

POLICE AND DETECTIVES WORKING ON CASE.

DIRE VENGEANCE THREATENED

Anonymous letters signed "The Black Hand" are puzzling the police and detectives of the East End. A veil of mystery now surrounds what at first appeared to be the pranks of mischievous boys. The alarm has grown out of a penciled note received March 28 by J. D. Wilson, a barber, who conducts a two-chair shop at Preston and Ormsby. When Mr. Wilson opened his shop on that day he found a note warning him to move out of the neighborhood under penalty of some dire happening. The note said in substance:

"Mr. J. O. Wilson: You must move out of this neighborhood or you will wish you had."

It was written on lined paper of a cheap grade, and was signed "The Black Hand Gang." Under the signature was printed a hand, three fingers folded, and the other pointing.

Mr. Wilson paid no attention to the note, more than to consider it a joke. He showed it to several customers, some of whom told him of the fact that Jesse Offutt, who now conducts a dairy at 732 East Jefferson street, had received such warnings in the same building. Mr. Wilson began to consider the affair in a more serious light. He then notified the police of the Fifth district police station. Capt. Luschinger took up the case personally. The "Black Hand" note was placed in the hands of the district detectives, Myers and Cooper, who have since been at work on the case, with no results to date.

* * *

Offutt Gets Letter.

Further investigation developed the fact that Jesse Offutt had received an anonymous letter about a year ago, which warned him to move away from the neighborhood of Twenty-third and Grayson streets, saying that unless he complied he would regret it. Mr. Offutt said that a few days after receiving the note his home was burned to the ground, and that he moved to another place in the same neighborhood, which was burned within five weeks after the first fire. He then moved into the building now occupied by J. D. Wilson, the barber, who received the note signed by the "Black Hand Gang." Mr. Offutt opened a grocery in the building, which was burned a few months after it was opened, the fire apparently having originated from the outside. Mr. Offutt's family had a narrow escape at the time, some of them being taken from the building by firemen.

After the last fire Mr. Offutt opened a dairy at 732 East Jefferson street, where he is now engaged in business. Mr. Offutt said he suspects a certain person, with whom he had some trouble, and who, he said, made threats against him. He has not been interviewed by the police, but said he would tell them of the threats if they call upon him.

* * *

Thinks It a Joke.

J. D. Wilson, the barber, who received the "Black Hand" note, insists that it is a joke.

"If I had received it on April first I would have had no doubt as to its origin," said Mr. Wilson yesterday, "but the fact that it came on March 28 made me feel a little 'leary' about it. I don't know why they would want me to move out. I don't believe any of my competitors would do a thing of that kind, but when people began to tell me of others in the same building being burned out after getting the same kind of notes I thought I had better tell the police about it."

Mr. Wilson said the note was several feet back in his shop when he found it. He could not understand how it could be placed in that position, it was from the outside, and he believed it had been shoved back in the room by means of a thin piece of cardboard.

The note is now in the hands of detectives, who refuse to allow the newspapermen to look at it. Capt. Luschinger, of the Fifth district, said he had seen the note, but that he considered it a prank of mischievous boys. He had not heard of the Offutt notes when interviewed, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Wilson knew of them.

* * *

Woman's Handwriting.

Mr. Wilson said the handwriting on the note he received appeared to be that of a woman. The flat was drawn crudely, with the index finger pointed. The notes received by Mr. Offutt were printed in pencil and the letters were very irregular. Mr. Offutt said he did not report the case to the police because he believed it useless, and that in spite of the fact that he was twice burned out in the West End and once after moving to the East End he did not connect the fires with the anonymous notes.

The front part of the building occupied by J. D. Wilson, the barber, at Preston and Ormsby streets, is occupied by a drugstore, but the proprietors of this say they have received no warning letters. The police say "there is nothing to it," as is usually the case when they get into deep water.

MAYOR HAPPY OVER REPEAL OF FRANCHISE.

Attaches Signature To Measure Which Blights Hopes of the Home Telephone Company.

Mayor Grinstead appeared happier yesterday than he has in months. The cause of his good nature was that both boards of the General Council have passed the ordinance which repeals the unsold Home Telephone franchise, which allowed a maximum rate of $.A month. Mayor Grinstead put the finishing touch to the measure yesterday morning, when he attached his signature. The ordinance is now a law.

As to whether this repeal ordinance would stop the mandamus suit to compel the Board of Public Works to sell the franchise now repealed by another ordinance Clayton B. Blakey, the City Attorney, was not prepared to say yesterday.

"The matter is before the Court of Appeals and I have no way of knowing whether it will be pushed or not," said Mr. Blakey.

It is the opinion of other attorneys that the case must now be dropped, inasmuch as there is no franchise which the Court of Appeals can order sold. Not much stock is put in the assertion of some that the franchise ordinance was illegally repealed. Everything seems to have been done according to law and custom.

Mayor Grinstead feels greatly relieved over the fact that the troublesome ordinance has been repealed. It has given him much worry and trouble, as he remains stanch in his determination that the Home company must abide by the contract under which it is now operating.

"Aunt" Susan Hall Dead.

"Aunt" Susan Hall, an aged colored woman, died suddenly of heart disease at 4 o'clock yesterday morning at the home of her son, Silas Hall, at 1911 Magazine street. She came here several years ago from Shelbyville, where for many years she had nursed in the most prominent families.

The English fondness for ale may possibly be traced to Queen Elizabeth, who is reputed to have drunk a quart every day with her breakfast, suggests the London Chronicle.

Col. Patten, a Lieutenant in the Old Guard, an exclusive organization composed of soldiers of distinction who fought in the Civil War, very popular in secret society circles, recommends the famous remedy, Pe-ru-na, as a spring tonic.

He says:

"I have used Peruna, and desire to recommend your remedy as an invigorating Spring tonic; also one of the best remedies that I ever tried for coughs, cold and catarrhal complaints."

Having read the above testimonial, what conclusion must be reached by any fair-minded, unprejudiced reader?

Is there any possibility that a man of the prominence and reputation of Col. Patten could be induced to say such things if he did not honestly believe them to be true?

Remember, he says not only that he recommends Peruna as an invigorating spring tonic, but also as one of the best remedies that he has ever tried for coughs, colds and catarrhal complaints.

What are you going to do with such evidence? Are you going to turn away from it and listen only to the talk of people who probably never saw a bottle of Peruna, certainly never tried a bottle of it, who have nothing else to do but to talk about other people's affairs? Are you going to listen to such people as that, instead of accepting the testimony of those who know?

There may be a few people so constituted as to be able to perform such a mental feat. But the sensible people, the reliable people, the brawn and brain of the world, who are governed by principles of justice and common sense, are going to accept the clear, pointed and undoubted testimony of a man of national reputation who knows what he is talking about.

Peruna is everything he says it is. It is an invigorating spring tonic. It is also a good remedy for coughs. We have many testimonials attesting to this fact.

Peruna is manufactured by the Peruna Drug Mfg. Co., Columbus, Ohio.

STREET SPRINKLING SEASON OPENS SOON.

Superintendent Crittenden Intends To Use Double Shift On Work of Laying the Dust.

The 1909 street sprinkling season will, in all probability, open this week. Harry T. Crittenden, superintendent of the street cleaning department, has been delayed in getting the sprinklers to work because of the inclemency of the weather. The street car company has agreed to again sprinkle the streets over which it operates cars. The city furnishes the water for this purpose free of cost and the railway company the cars and the men to operate them.

"The streets are very dusty," said Mr. Crittenden yesterday. "I expected to start sprinkling them April 1, but the weather turned so cold that it was impracticable. I expect to start the sprinklers some time before the end of the week, if the weather moderates. As the water splashes about, the men and mules get wet to the knees. It would not do to employ them at this work when the thermometer is at the freezing point.

"This year the five compressed air sprinklers will be operated eighteen hours a day. Last year they were only operated nine hours. The double shift will make it possible to cover twice the ground. Much of the dust on the streets is the result of street repairs. The public will be glad, and I will be glad when it is possible to put the sprinklers to work again."

Mrs. Knicker—The doctor said you should live out-of-doors?

Knicker—Yes; I'll have to after I pay his bill.—New York Sun.

PATROLMAN MATHENA DISMISSED FROM FORCE.

Trial Before Board of Public Safety Consumes the Whole of Two Days.

Patrolman J. H. Mathena's diplomatic connections with the police department payroll were severed yesterday by the Board of Public Safety, following a trial. Mathena was charged with conduct unbecoming an officer. Mathena is the patrolman whose alleged degradation was made complete by Chief Hagger, who stripped his buttons and badge from his uniform following the sweating out of warrants charging Mathena with detaining several young girls. Mathena has been tried on the charge in the Police Court. He was bound over to the grand jury on four counts under bond of $500 in each.

His trial before the Board of Public Safety lasted two days. Sufficient evidence was found to warrant his dismissal, it is said. The board still has under submission the cases of the quarry boss and guard, both employed at the workhouse. These men are charged with mistreating John Briner, a prisoner.

Funeral This Afternoon.

The funeral services over the body of William H. Driscoll, who was a retired trunk maker, will be held at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon at the home of his daughter, Mrs. A. A. Spaninger, 127 East Burnett avenue, and at 2:30 o'clock at St. Philip Neri's church. The burial will be in St. Louis cemetery.

TWO MORE INSPECTORS FOR HEALTH DEPARTMENT

Provided For In Board of Safety Ordinance Introduced In Lower Board Friday Night.

Aside from increasing the size of the police department from 390 to 420 men, the Board of Public Safety ordinance introduced in the lower board of the General Council Friday night provides for two more health inspectors to be attached to the health department. At present there are eight inspectors. If the ordinance passes in its present form there will be ten inspectors. The department of health can find plenty of work for ten men to do.

The only other change the ordinance seeks to effect is to have the size of the fire department stipulated definitely in black and white. The Board of Public Safety has the right to increase the size of the fire department from time to time, as needs arise. It has found it necessary to add a few men to the force. The new ordinance adds one chemical company to those in the old ordinance, although this is just a formality, inasmuch as the company is already in the service.

All of the new men to be added to the police force, if the ordinance passes, will go on as patrolmen. The ordinance provides for 380 men, drawing the minimum salary of $2.50 a day. The present ordinance provides for 360 of this class.

NEW CHURCH.

St. Mary's-of-the-Knobs To Be Dedicated.

IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES TAKE PLACE SUNDAY, MAY 16.

MANY DISTINGUISHED CLERGYMEN TO TAKE PART.

HISTORY OF CONGREGATION.

The new church at St. Mary's-of-the-Knobs, five miles from New Albany, will be dedicated on Sunday, May 16. The Rt. Rev. D. O'Donaghue, D. D., Bishop of Pomario and auxiliary of Indianapolis, will officiate.

Among the distinguished clergymen who will be present are all the living priests who were baptized in the old church. The Very Rev. Eugene McBarron, of Evansville, senior of the natives in the ranks of the clergy, has accepted the invitation to preach on the occasion. Besides him the Rev. Martin Andres, of St. Leon, Ind., and the Rev. August Sprigler, of Mitchell, Ind., are the only ones left. Those who have departed this life are the Rev. J. H. Missi and the Rev. Bartholomew Piers.

The new church is built on the lines of an English Gothic country church. It is situated on the hill which constitutes the parish property, and in the course of time, when the surroundings are once in proper condition, will no doubt take on a beautiful appearance.

The new building has a seating capacity of 400. It is built of brick which were made on an adjoining farm. The foundation is of concrete. The windows are artistic and neat. The entire building, with the furniture, represents an outlay of $15,000. The members of the parish are making great efforts to entertain all the friends of the parish who no doubt will attend from far and near.

Past efforts have merited for the women of the parish an enviable reputation as experts in the culinary art and the women are desirous of maintaining their reputation. The dedicatory services will take place at 10:30 a. m. and will be followed by a solemn high mass. Several commanderies of Knights of St. John from Louisville and New Albany will attend.

Where Situated.

The new church stands in the rear of old St. Mary's cemetery, which has served as a burying ground since 1836. Many inhabitants of Louisville and New Albany have relatives buried in this historic cemetery. Many of the old inhabitants dread to see the day on which the work of tearing down the old church will begin, for it is an old landmark. It was erected in 1837.

The history of the congregation is intertwined with the story of Catholic development in Floyd county. In 1829 when Bishop Flaget, of Bardstown, visited Indiana, the sixth time he celebrated mass in the Knobs he found eleven Catholic families. It is not definitely known whether a priest had ever visited the place before this time. However, the fact that a log church existed would seem to indicate that the place had been visited before by a priest, but by whom may never be known.

Tradition has it that Father Badin visited the place a few times. The Rev. L. Neyron was the first resident pastor. He built the brick church in 1837 and lived in the upper story of the vestry building. From this place he attended various stations in Floyd, Clark and Harrison counties. Eventually he removed to New Albany and built Holy Trinity church. From 1854 until 1857 the Rev. August Bessonies attended to the spiritual needs of the parish. The Rev. William Doyle had charge for a year or so and so did the Rev. Louis Gueguen, who is now at Vincennes.

From 1864 until 1873 the Rev. G. Ginnsz, who is now at Shelbyville, Ind., had charge of affairs, and in his time the present rectory was built. The Rev. Dr. James Stremler took charge in 1873, and he most efficiently discharged the pastoral duties for seventeen years.

* * *

Benedictine Nuns.

In July, 1890, the Rev. Charles Stricker was appointed pastor. The great event of his administration was the erection of a residence for the sisters, and the invitation extended to the Benedictine Nuns to take charge of the school. These nuns have taught to the entire satisfaction of the patrons of the school ever since their arrival.

In September, 1897, the Rev. J. H. Hillebrand was given charge of the parish. Under his wise and practical management the present school building was erected and the collecting of a building fund for a new church was begun. He collected $7,000 for this purpose.

In May, 1901, in consideration of his great ability, he was promoted by the Rt. Rev. Bishop of Indianapolis to the rectorship of St. Boniface church in Evansville.

Since 1906 the Rev. Joseph J. Sermersheim has had charge of the parish. In a short time the building fund was increased so that it was found possible to begin work on the new building which will now be dedicated to the service of the Lord.

S.S.S.
CURES OLD SORES

If you are one of the great number of persons who are afflicted with an old sore, we are sure this short talk will be of interest to you. It is a simple statement explaining the cause of chronic ulcers, and truthfully pointing out the surest and quickest way to effect a cure.

In the first place every chronic sore exists because of impure blood. It is a diseased condition of the flesh at that particular spot, remaining open because the circulation continually discharges morbid and unhealthy matter into the place, which keeps it inflamed and irritated. The nerves and tissues around the place are constantly fed with unhealthy matter, and nature is simply disposing of the poison by draining it from the system through the sore.

Just as long as the blood continues impure and contaminated, any sore on the body will remain open. No amount of dressing, cleansing or disinfecting the ulcer with salves, lotions, plasters, etc., will ever produce a cure, because they do not reach the blood.

The proper way, and the only way, to cure an old sore or ulcer, is to remove the source on which it feeds; in other words cleanse the blood and the place MUST heal.

The combination of healthful, vegetable ingredients of which S. S. S. is composed make it an especially desirable and effective remedy. It cures sores and ulcers of every kind by removing impurities from the circulation. It goes to the very bottom of the trouble, and so completely cleanses the blood that there is no longer any impurity to drain through the place. Then nature rebuilds all broken-down tissue and causes the place to fill in with firm, healthy flesh. S. S. S. removes inherited taints from the blood also, and prevents the formation of old sores or annoying scabs on the face or other part of the body, which frequently come after middle life is reached. S. S. S. will likewise remove fever germs and other malignant impurities so often left in the system after a spell of sickness, and which are sometimes the cause of sores and ulcers. S. S. S. is a perfect blood-purifier, and for this reason is a certain cure. Being made entirely of roots, herbs and barks it is an absolutely safe medicine, and its tonic effects are of great value to systems which have become weakened by the worry and drainage of an Old Sore. S. S. S. has cured thousands; it will cure you. Book on Sores and Ulcers and any medical advice sent free to all who write.

FROM THE CALF OF LEG TO ANKLE A SOLID SORE

My limb from the calf to the ankle was one solid inflamed sore, and truly I was in bad shape. I improved rapidly under the use of S. S. S., but about this time I had an attack of Typhoid Fever and this settled in the original sore. This, of course, caused a backset, but having confidence in the ability of S. S. S. I began it again as soon as I was over the fever, and to make a long story short was completely and permanently cured. Two years have elapsed and I have never had a return of the trouble. Too much cannot be said in praise of your medicine.

ENTIRE FOOT A SOLID SORE

Some time ago I had a sore to come on my foot and nothing I used would do it any good. It continued to grow worse and eat deeper into the surrounding flesh, until the entire foot was a solid sore, and gave me a great deal of worry and trouble. I tried almost everything I heard of, but got no benefit until I commenced S. S. S. In a short time after commencing this remedy I began to improve and I continued to use it until it drove the poison from my blood and completely cured this obstinate sore. I recommend it most highly as a remedy for sores and ulcers.

A BAD SORE ON HIS FACE

I was afflicted with a sore on my face of four years' standing. It was a small pimple at first, but it gradually grew larger and worse in every way until I became alarmed about it and consulted several physicians. They all treated me, but the sore continued to grow worse. I saw S. S. S. advertised and commenced its use, and after taking it a while I was completely cured. My blood is now purely and healthy from the effect of S. S. S., and there has not been any sign of the sore since S. S. S. cured it.

TAFT SMILE

Much In Evidence At White House Receptions.

SOCIETY PLEASED WITH NEW ORDER OF THINGS.

PARTY SPIRIT MANIFESTED AT THE PINK TEAS.

KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

Washington, April 2.—"Good, good!" is the present presidential exclamation of welcome. It arises as spontaneously to Taftian lips as "delighted" in its palmiest days to the departed Teddy's.

Mr. Taft blurts out the double adjective with beaming gusto whenever an individual is introduced to him with explanatory notes. Whoever you are or whatever State in the Union may chance to be guilty of you, the condition of affairs almost invariably appears "good, good," to our optimistic President, to whom the horizon is all cakes and ale, these halcyon days.

When Mr. Taft says "good, good," he gives you a grip as if he actually liked you—kind of hanging on to you lovingly. He'll get over that soon. The glamor isn't off things yet—the new zest is undimmed.

Society is ecstatic at the new order of things, the whole-souledness and humanness of the atmosphere at the White House. But society is a fickle jade. Whatever is, generally happens to be right in her eyes. And the Tafts, enthusiastically are is-ers. "Such a difference," "such a change," were frequently exclaimed with satisfaction at the first big reception at the White House of the infant administration.

Mrs. Taft had invited all the women of the House and the Senate to 5 o'clock tea, and Papa Taft, all rosy and tubbed, helped her take care of them. The President threw himself in, "lagniappe," as they say down South, without being in the original contract at all, and the guests were enchanted.

The happy couple—and they are beatific—stood at the head of the column (next to reading matter) surrounded by "Archie" Butt. After the gallant captain had put you through the third degree and extracted both your name and where's your home, Mr. and Mrs. Taft caught you soothingly by the hand and evinced actual human interest in all you had to say, blocking the long line at your heels while you poured your heart out. Nothing treadmill or machine made about the Tafts' parties. Each guest seems to be a valued entity in their eyes.

* * *

The Only Red Tape.

The only bit of red tape about the heart-to-heart affair was the detaining of each arrival by an usher with a request for your card, to make sure that nobody had called except those who were chosen. If you had brought along no better credentials than your visiting card this was scanned and compared with a type-written list of eligibles before you were allowed to proceed.

Mrs. Taft wore a new pink Empire frock. You've remarked how she loves Empires and pinks. It was of satin with a tunic of silver net. She looked pretty and girlish and infinitely happy.

"These ladies are from Kentucky, Mr. Taft," she beamed, swinging on cordially to a brace of elegantly-attired women, who expected only to nod and pass on to make room for the next comers. "Good, good" cried the host exuberantly, appropriating State, ladies and all; "Kentucky's a pretty fine country!"

When the introductions were all done the President and Mrs. Taft broke ranks and circulated among the guests in all the apartments as cozily as if the whole affair had been a family reunion. This is contrary to precedent. Mrs. President heretofore has always stayed put in exactly the same spot, with an aspect of

"Come, come all! This rock shall fly
From its firm base as soon as I."

* * *

Seemed To Enjoy It.

Mrs. Taft rested for awhile in a group of cronies on a divan in the Red Room, joining the festive folk later in the great State dining-room, where she and her husband seemed to enjoy their own party immensely.

Stunning Mrs. Meyer, of the Cabinet, served things at one end of the table, and Mrs. Herbert Parsons, the Congressman's wife, who writes about trial marriages and little eccentricities of that sort, served things at the other. Mr. Taft patronized everybody's stand.

A guest who has suddenly risen into vicarious fame, the object of much furtive curiosity at the White House affair, was the wife of Representative John J. Fitzgerald, of Brooklyn, instigator of the sacred order of Democratic "bolters." The unassuming little woman was as unsuggestive as possible of buzz-saws and hornets' nests and storm centers and other cyclonic conditions that her husband has precipitated at the Capitol. That she was distinctly "featured," as the wives of the old-line Democrats aver, by the women folks of the "regulars" or uninsurgent Republicans out of gratitude to her husband, the boss of the bolters, was no fault of hers. Mrs. Fitzgerald is an unobtrusive, undirectoired little person, who wore a fancy white waist and a dark silk skirt to the Taft turnout, with a simple little brown straw hat decked with red roses. But everybody rubbered just the same. Truly greatness has been thrust upon Mrs. Fitzgerald. She dosn't look the part in the least of the consort of a "Party Traitor" with capitals and italics and things of that sort.

The Democratic ladies, by the same token, threaten to make a fetich of Mrs. Victor Murdock, of Kansas, the extremely pretty wife of the leader of the Republican "insurgents" in Congress. Political emotion has been causing an unusual rustling among the petticoats since the revision of the House rules commotion of the new Congress. As a general thing the women folks of Congressmen have troubles enough of their own, without monkeying with the perturbations of their mates and masters. But party feeling has been running high at pink teas and ladies' lunches since the ides of March, and the wifery of "Cussin', Cannonism and Confusion" has been interspersed on pretty lips with "what's trumps?" and "I can't find a single hat this spring that's fit to wear."

Like Indoor Picnic.

The women in the galleries added to the tenseness of the scene the day of the great Cannon contest in the House. Hundreds had come early in the morning to secure a seat, remaining fixed for endless hours. Lunch baskets in action at the noon hour gave the staid old chamber the air and clo-se of an indoor picnic. Prominent women who didn't dare let go their coveted places were interchanging bottles of cold coffee and syphons of lemonade. During the taking of the votes it was the women who hung on every word, tense and eager-eyed. At the first crisis when her father's fortunes seemed to have collapsed, Miss Helen Cannon could not control a twitching of her pallid lips, a surge of tears to her eyes. At another juncture a woman broke down completely and boo-hooed. "Oh! you don't know how much it means to me!" she sobbed, wringing her hands, hysterically.

There's a buzz among directoire gowns of "bolters," "traitors" and "insurgents," and even the meekest maids and matrons in congressional circles are lined up into factions and party cliques that make things most entertaining.

* * *

Some Exquisite Costumes.

At the first formal dinner party of the new administration at the White House, Mrs. Taft wore an exquisite costume of pale blue satin, embroidered in gold and pearls. Among the thirty guests were Representative Champ Clark, a native Kentuckian; Representative Fitzgerald and Mrs. Fitzgerald, the Vice President and Mrs. Sherman, Mr. and Mrs. Longworth.

At Mrs. Taft's reception to the congressional ladies, were present from Kentucky: Mrs. Paynter, wearing pearl colored chiffon cloth, embroidered in gold, with hat to match, decked with pearl gray plumes; Mrs. Ben Johnson, trailing directoire cowl suit of black satin, heavily embroidered, with big, black, directoire hat; Mrs. Ollie James, costume of pale blue rajah, embroidered with pale blue hat, wreathed in ostrich plumes; Mrs. R. Y. Thomas, black velvet; Mrs. Swagar Sherley, black chiffon, richly embroidered; Mrs. J. W. Langley, black satin directoire; Mrs. A. O. Stanley, pale blue satin and lace; Mrs. Bennett and Mrs. Edwards.

At a brilliant musicale and reception given at Fairmont Seminary this week, among the young girl hostesses were Miss Louise Jones, of Hopkinsville, handsome in a costume of white satin and lace, and Miss Hazel Dawkins, daughter of Mr. W. H. Dawkins, of Ashland, in a directoire frock of pink satin. Miss Jones, an alumna of Belmont Seminary, Nashville, is a special art student at Fairmont. Miss Dawkins is talented in music. Many prominent Kentuckians were present in the company.

Miss Louise Shelby, of Princeton, Ky., a senior at National Park Seminary, left on April 2 for New York to spend her Easter vacation with her roommate. Miss Shelby made a hit on the eve of her departure, histrionically, in the caste of "Mid-Summer Night's Dream," as Hippolyta, the queen of the Amazons, in the play given by the seniors of National Park Seminary, in their pretty theater, the "Odeon." Miss Shelby was beautiful in her Amazonian armor and make-up. The "Mid-Summer Night's Dream" music of Mendelssohn accompanied the performance. The classic Wedding March, with variations, was ecstatically received. Among the hostesses, in charming evening toilettes, were Miss Katherine Bonnie, the 16-year-old golden-haired daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Bonnie, of Louisville, one of the pronounced beauties of the school; Miss Ruby Ott, of Louisville, possessed of a fine voice; Miss Virginia Bramlette, of Carlisle. Many Kentucky guests were in the brilliant audience, the Misses Johnson among them. Miss Katherine Bonnie left at once to spend the Easter holidays with her home folks in Louisville.

Senator Bradley a Speaker.

Senator Bradley was one of the speakers at the fifth annual supper at the Arlington Hotel, of the League of Republican State Clubs of Washington. Other Kentucklans there were Messrs. Harry Giovannoli, Milo Shanks, J. A. Williams, Alfred Hardesty, Hon. J. W. Langley, Luther Walters, of Catlettsburg; Fred Vaughn, W. W. Anderson, A. L. Hicks, A. L. Clothier, of Somerset, and others.

Mrs. Marshall, wife of Gen. William Marshall, formerly of Mason county, gave a bridge tea at her home at Stoneleigh Court, assisted by her debutante daughter, Miss Maitland Marshall. Mrs. Green Clay Goodloe, Mrs. Reid Rogers and Mrs. W. H. Hall were in the company.

Mrs. Thomas H. Sherley, who spent the winter in Washington, and who, since the inauguration, has been in New York and Philadelphia, returned to her old quarters at the New Willard this week, en route home to Louisville. Mrs. Swagar Sherley holds very cozy weekly Tuesday afternoon at-homes, at her residence on Connecticut avenue, assisted by her sister, Miss Marjorie Critten, of Staten Island. Representative Swagar Sherley recently entertained the bridge club of which he is a member.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Miller, of Frankfort, were guests recently at the Metropolitan Hotel.

Miss Helen Whitland, of Louisville, has been stopping at the Arlington.

T. C. Walden, of Louisville, has been at the Raleigh.

J. P. Altizer, of Kentucky, a student at the George Washington University, president of the Needham Debating Society of that institution, made a most graceful little address of welcome to the audience at the recent contest between the two rival debating societies of the university, the Needham and the Columbian. The subject of debate was, "Resolved, That in the Laws Regulating Suffrage Throughout the United States, There Should Be No Discrimination on Account of Sex."

Judge William Lindsay, of Frankfort, was a guest recently at the Raleigh.

Mrs. Edwin L. Price, formerly of Lexington, assisted by her young daughter, Miss Margaret Louise Price, has been holding a delightful series of Saturday afternoon at-homes all season, at her cozy apartment at the Farragut. Members of the cabinet, diplomatic and artistic circles of Washington are always among the guests.

Messrs. R. L. McKelder and Julius Ullrich, of Louisville, have been at the New Willard this week.

Mrs. Green Clay Goodloe was one of the hostesses at a tea in honor of the wife of the Vice President, given by the Colonial Dames at their clubrooms at the Arlington Hotel.

WORTH MOUNTAINS OF GOLD

During Change of Life, says Mrs. Chas. Barclay

Graniteville, Vt. — "I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter." — MRS. CHAS. BARCLAY, R. F. D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures of female ills as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing female complaints such as inflammation, ulceration, local weaknesses, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life. It costs but little to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and, as Mrs. Barclay says, it is "worth mountains of gold" to suffering women.

JAPAN TAKES TO CATS.

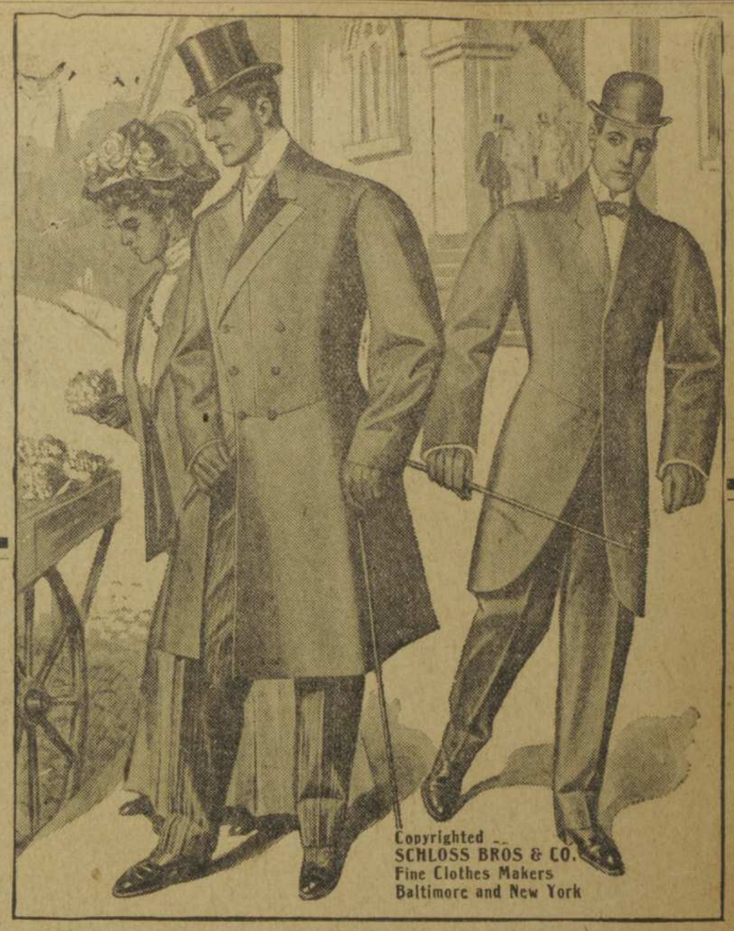

[Consular Reports.]

Consul John H. Snodgrass, of Kobe, gives the following account of the systematic fight that is being made in Japan against the rat pest:

As propagators of disease, rats are the worst known pests in Japan, it having been definitely settled that plague is spread far and wide by them, and so dangerous have they been to human life that the Government has set a price of 5 sen (2½ cents) on the head of every rodent, and has ordered a wholesale importation of cats, the number of the latter having been increased at Tokio alone by 30,000. Rats are hunted and killed with the utmost vigor.

Cats have hitherto been excluded from the households, owing to their cunning disposition and unsociable nature. Since the outbreak of plague in this district some years ago, and more especially since the recommendation of Dr. Koch to keeps cats in order to effect the destruction of rats, the popularity of this domestic animal has grown at a rapid rate. Several cities now boast a society which aims at the improvement of the breed of the domestic cat, and competitive shows, combined with rat-catching tournaments, are held from time to time under the auspices of the society. Many devices are employed by the Japanese in catching rats or securing them dead or alive, so that they may get the benefit of the bounty provided by the Government. The bodies are taken to the police station, where they are properly tagged and then turned over to the Government medical department, whose experts in bacteriological research examine them thoroughly, removing their heart, lungs and entrails, and if the animal is found to be infected with plague bacilli the house where it was caught is at once quarantined and a similar study of rats found in adjoining properties is made.

To aid in this effort to stamp out plague by removing the origin, various rat exterminators of both local and foreign formulas are used, over $4,000 worth of arsenic having been imported from Great Britain and Germany in 1908, and a well-known American rat poison having been introduced with pronounced success. It might be stated in passing that the Government utilizes the rat skins, all of which are tanned by having them sewed to the clothing worn by its soldiers in Manchuria, so that the bounty paid for rat scalps is partially repaid, not only in the prevention of the spread of plague, but also in providing warm clothing for the army.

MARCH GRAND JURY TOSSES MANY BOUQUETS ABOUT.

JAILER MONROE IS PRAISED TO THE SKIES.

THREE MORE INDICTMENTS.

The March grand jury, in its report yesterday, liberally complimented the Criminal Court and all county institutions. The Chief of Police and the Jailer were foremost in the list of those to whom bouquets were tossed. Seventy-eight cases were examined, and sixty-five indictments returned.

Three indictments were found yesterday as follows:

Horsestealing—Levi Davis and Laura Davis.

Obtaining Property on False Pretenses—Lee King, alias Robinson.

The complete report of the grand jury follows:

To the Hon. Judge Jos. Pryor, Judge of Jefferson County Court, Criminal Division—Dear Sir: Your grand jury, which has been in session during the month of March, begs leave to hand you its report as follows:

Exceptional care and consideration have been given to all cases brought to its attention, and in every instance this grand jury has endeavored to give every case a fair and impartial hearing, and has rendered its verdicts accordingly.

"Of the many cases presented to us we found quite a number to be of a trivial kind that could have been easily disposed of in the examining court instead of being brought to the attention of the grand jury, thereby taking up much valuable time and incidentally adding additional expense to the county.

During its session the grand jury has visited the various public and county institutions, and found all to be conducted in the very best manner possible.

* * *

Greatly Impressed.

"We were greatly impressed with the admirable management of the county jail. A visit to the jail proved it to be one of the best disciplined places of its kind in the country. Everything is kept scrupulously clean. The sanitary conditions could not be improved upon. The humane treatment of the prisoners and the general discipline employed bespeak of the splendid management of Jailer Mohroe and his deputies.

"The Industrial School of Reform, almshouse, workhouse and Central Asylum for the Insane at Lakeland have all been visited and each institution was found to be splendidly conducted and well presided over.

"In regard to the almshouse the grand jury would suggest and strongly advocates that the city extend the water main out to this institution and place within its vicinity four or five fire hydrants and provide a supply of hose in order to give better and more adequate fire protection. This, we believe, is most necessary and trust the proper authorities will take the matter in hand and act accordingly.

"Various complaints have come to this body relative to gambling. We have carefully and thoroughly investigated every complaint, and in no instance have we been able to find that any public gambling exists, and we earnestly believe that this evil has almost been eradicated from the city. We want to especially commend the Police Department for the manner in which it has co-operated with the grand jury, assisting it in every way possible in the seeking of evidence and the conviction of offenders. Through the intelligent and energetic administration of this office, Chief Haager has made the police force a terror to lawbreakers, and has set a standard of efficiency not surpassed by the best-governed police systems of the larger cities.

"In conclusion, we desire to compliment both Commonwealth Attorney Joseph M. Huffaker, and Assistant Commonwealth Attorney Loraine Mix for the able and fearless manner in which they have presided over their respective offices, and the tireless zeal always in evidence in guarding and protecting the interests of the Commonwealth. We also wish to express our appreciation and thanks to both Messrs. Huffaker and Mix for much valuable assistance given and many courtesies extended during our session. Respectfully, MARCH GRAND JURY,
"Per GEO RUSSELL, Foreman."

Do You Want Kitchen Comfort?

A POSTAL CARD TO US WILL BRING A BOOKLET YOU REALLY SHOULD HAVE

Suppose your sewing machine was made so you had to stand up and sew, what would you think of it?

Yet, that is exactly the way old-fashioned kitchen furniture has always been made. Not a bit of knee or foot room—when you work, you stand up.

And that isn't the worst of it. Your supplies are scattered around two rooms—pantry and kitchen. You make numberless trips back and forth between these rooms while you are preparing a meal and clearing up after it.

This needless toil makes your work drudgery—keeps you slaving in the kitchen when you might be out enjoying other things.

But the Hoosier Special Cabinet stops this extra, useless work and provides for your comfort, too.

The patented extension work table top of the Hoosier Special, when pulled out 16 inches, is as comfortable to sit by as the dining table, and it isn't necessary for you to get up for your utensils and supplies every few minutes. They are all grouped around this aluminum covered work table, right at your fingers' tips.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

Pianos At One Price
The Right Price
The Same Price To All

When we first began the piano business, we started to sell pianos in the old way, viz.: any old price for a piano. We soon found out that this method of doing business was not the right way to treat the customers who came to us, not knowing piano values, but relying on us as a reputable house to treat them fair and square; so we instituted the one-price plan of selling pianos, where one customer paid the same price as another for the same grade piano. This plan of selling pianos has, we are glad to say, been the foundation on which our success as piano dealers has been built.

It is easy to buy a piano from us, because every piano is tagged and the price is marked in plain figures; no haggling is necessary, as in the old way. The old-time way of selling pianos, which is being used by the majority of piano dealers yet, is as follows:

You enter a piano store; a salesman meets you, shows you through; you like a piano that he says is $350; you object to the price being too high; then he cuts $25. You still object, he talks some more, and cuts $50. You still think the price is too high; he talks some more, then cuts $75.

You say, "Well, I will think it over."

Before he permits you to leave the store he cuts another $25, making a total cut of $100 from the first price. Just think; you would have paid $100 too much. You would always have the feeling, "If I had only waited a little longer I could have gotten it cheaper;" and possibly you could, because it was only a $250 piano in the first place. The extra $100 was added on to give him a chance to drop and make you believe you had secured a bargain. But the question is, would it be a bargain?

The one-price plan (our plan) is the better way. We decide on the lowest price a certain grade piano can be sold for, and mark it that price, and every one gets that certain piano at that price. No haggling or cutting is necessary, because we are known as the One Price Piano Store by all who have dealt with us.

Here are the prices on the different makes of pianos we carry:

MISS STELLA CUSCADEN IN "BACK TO TOWN," KANSTON'S MUSICAL CHATTER

MISS STELLA CUSCADEN.

The Mackin Council Choral Club has secured Miss Stella Cuscaden to play the leading role of Virginia in its new production entitled "Back to Town," which the author, Aulyn Kanston, has styled "A Musical Chatter."

"Back to Town" is a sequel to last year's play, "A Mile from Town," in which Mrs. Esther Whedon-Slater scored a big hit in the role of Virginia.

Miss Cuscaden is an accomplished actress of exceptional ability and of a wide and varied experience. She is well remembered in Louisville as a member of the Meffert stock company, when, as Little Lord Fauntleroy, she held the distinction of being the youngest person in the history of dramatic record to act that role. She also is well remembered in "Fiddle Dee Dee," so successfully produced by the Louisville Lodge of Elks a few years ago.

Miss Cuscaden also has played in the East, having appeared in Boston and Philadelphia a number of times. Probably the greatest achievement of Miss Cuscaden was that while she was a student at the John B. Stetson University at Deland, Fla., when she acted the role of Buttercup in the opera of "Pinafore," which was presented under her personal direction and coaching. It was after this successful production that she was tendered the chair of elocution at the University.

Miss Hattie E. Hoffman will star in the ingenue role of "Back to Town." Mr. Kanston has written for her the most prominent and comprehensive part of the female roles, due to the fact of her pronounced success last year, which was evidenced at one of the performances by her, being forced to respond to ten consecutive encores.

Miss Leota Whitton Bierach comes in for a generous part as a male impersonator in the role of Snooks. While attired in the bright city clothes of an up-to-date lad her part leads to her presence at a party where she masquerades as a girl and, supposedly a boy, she is required to appear awkward and ungainly, which will require some difficult work, as it is in direct opposition to her usually graceful and artistic acting, but it is believed Miss Bierach will be capable of this requirement.

"Back to Town" will be presented in May, when several night performances and probably a matinee will be given.

CARDINAL CRETONI'S DEATH REMOVES ONE OF MOST ACCOMPLISHED LINGUISTS IN THE WORLD

Leaves Sacred College With Fifty-four Members, Sixteen Less Than the Full Number.

[Contributed by International Catholic Truth Society.]

New York, April 3.—Cardinal Cretoni's death removes perhaps the most accomplished linguist, excepting Cardinal Merry del Val, in the Sacred College. He could converse fluently in Italian, English, French, Modern Greek and Spanish, Latin and Ancient Greek, and had a fair knowledge of more than one Oriental language.

His death leaves the Sacred College with fifty-four members, sixteen less than the full membership, and ten less than took part in the election of Pius X. One, the aged Cardinal Oreglia, was created by Pius IX. Thirty-two are Italians, and twenty-two are divided throughout the Catholic world. Twenty-four reside in Rome, and have special duties in the Roman Curia. Twenty-six cardinals have died during the brief pontificate of Pius X. The oldest member of the Sacred College is Cardinal Grusha, of Vienna, now in his ninetieth year. The youngest is Cardinal Merry del Val, now in his forty-fourth year. Cardinal Logue is the last cardinal raised to that dignity in any English-speaking country, and that was sixteen years ago.

Cardinal Merry del Val is the first non-Italian to occupy the lofty office of Papal Secretary of State, to which he was appointed when only 37 years of age.

Of the present members Cardinal Aguirre had distinguished himself as bishop by his learning, sanctity and activity in promoting a religious solution of the social question, when Pius X. suddenly added his name to the list of cardinals to be created on April 15, 1907. At the same consistory were raised to the cardinalate Archbishop Mafli, of Pisa, a luminary of physical science, and Archbishop Mercier, of Malines, noted for his philosophical writings.

On December 16, 1907, were added to the Sacred College Cardinal Gasparri, the greatest living authority on canon law, and the life and soul of the commission for the codification of the laws of the church, and Cardinal De Lai, who was engaged at the time of his creation in organizing the sweeping reform of the Roman Curia which came into force last November. It is quite likely that a consistory may be held in April or May, which may add nine or ten more cardinals to the Sacred College.

Mother Austin Dead.

"There has passed from the life of the South a woman who in her simple, humble way was a heroine, a woman whose beautiful, holy life, devoted to the poor and helpless of her race, stands out as a noble refutation of the oft-repeated charge that the Catholic Church is doing little for the salvation of the colored people in our midst—a woman who, recognizing the troublous times that beset her native Southland when the banners of war were furled, resolved to give of the best that was in her to the solving of the problems that confronted this section; and who for upward of thirty-one years labored, with faith and zeal and energy along the truest lines for the betterment of her people and the bringing of their immortal souls to the love and knowledge and service of God in the one true church founded by Jesus Christ."

This beautiful tribute, from the Morning Star of New Orleans, is paid to the late Mother Austin, who died suddenly in that city. For eighteen years she was Mother Superior of the Sisters of the Holy Family, composed exclusively of colored women. We are told that she was a woman of rare nobility of character and splendid administrative abilities, which fitted her well for her great office.

In 1890, when she was elected superior, there existed only the main convent building and two small parochial schools with convents attached. At her death she left the St. John Berchman's Orphan Asylum, where hundreds of colored children were cared for and educated; a home for colored boys; and a large home to care for the aged of both sexes, in New Orleans. She also established and opened schools in different parts of Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, and even in faraway British Honduras. During her administration the sisterhood increased from forty to 193 members.

Her funeral was attended by a large number of the clergy and sisterhoods of New Orleans. The last absolution was pronounced by Archbishop Blenk.

Committee On Morals.

At its recent semi-annual meeting the executive board of the Catholic Federation appointed a standing national committee on public morals for the further prosecution of the crusade against immorality being conducted by many branches of the federation throughout the country. It will be the duty of this committee to get information on all things concerning public morality, and to direct branch federations to send any valuable information to the chairman or secretary of the committee.

The production of indecent plays and exhibitions, the circulation of indecent books, postal cards and other publications will be made known to all along the line; and Catholic societies will be aroused to greater activity, and a sound and strong public opinion against immorality will be established. Representatives will be appointed in centers like New York and Chicago to look after immoral theatricals, which usually start out in these cities.

The national committee is composed of Edward Feeney, Brooklyn, national president; Thomas H. Cannon, Chicago, chairman of the executive board; Anthony Matre, St. Louis, national secretary; Judge G. Harmon, Toledo, national vice president, and the Rev. F. Helermann, S. J., of Toledo, O.

Wins High Distinction.

The Rev. W. S. Reilly, professor of St. John's Seminary, Brighton, Mass., a member of the Congregation of Sulpicians, has just won the highest academical distinction conferred by Rome, that of Doctor of the Holy Scripture Faculty, established seven years ago by the late Pope Leo XIII., but so difficult of attainment that, in all that time, the doctorate has been won by only one priest, the Rev. Angus Cry, a Frenchman.

The ecclesiastical authorities made the degree difficult to mark their sense of its importance. Father Reilly, in addition to a long course of general preparation, devoted four years to the task of fitting for the public examination in Rome, held in the presence of Cardinal Rampolla, the members of the Biblical Commission and a gathering of Scripture scholars. As a preliminary to admission he was also obliged to present a written thesis forming a large volume.

Then Father Reilly had to give a class lecture on a passage of the Old Testament before the most learned and critical audience in the world. He was next subjected to a severe examination in one of the Oriental languages and finally he was subjected to three hours of a searching trial on many abstruse points connected with the Divine Revelation. He passed a strikingly brilliant examination and thus becomes the first Doctor of Holy Scripture in the United States.

Not Discouraged.

The Rev. Ambrose Kohlbeck, O. S. B., Collegio S. Anselmo, Monte Aventino, Rome, writes to this country as follows:

"Since you had a little news item to the effect that Abbot Gasquet is discouraged in his work of the revision of the Vulgate on account of lack of funds, I am glad to give you the following bit of news to the contrary. He is living under the same roof with me here, and told me a few days ago that he is extremely delighted by the substantial financial aid he is receiving lately from American Protestants in carrying on the colossal work of revising the Vulgate. He told me that American Protestants are evincing by far more interest in his work than the Protestants of England."

Cardinal Breaks Ground.

A few days ago Cardinal Gibbons broke the ground for St. John Kantius College, a new affiliated college of the Catholic University in Washington. The Missionaries of the Divine Love of Jesus are founding this college for the Poles. The Rev. Anthon Lechert, the superior general, has purchased four acres of ground adjoining the Soldiers' Home and the Marist Preparatory College on which the new building is being erected. The Rev. Andrew Grygue, of the Polish Church of the Sacred Heart, Dupona, Pa., will be the superior. He will have assistance from the College of Divine Love in Terracina, Italy.

The Polish Catholics also have started a movement to build a Polish university in Chicago, to be an evolution and enlargement of St. Stanislaus College, of that city. It will be conducted by the Resurrectionist Fathers. Father Rhode is at the head of the movement and prominent Poles in Chicago, Milwaukee, Pittsburg and Buffalo have taken up the work. The cost is estimated at $500,000.

FAIL TO AGREE.

Jurors In Callahan Case Are Discharged.

JUDGE KIRBY GRANTS WIFE A TEMPORARY INJUNCTION.

TO PREVENT ENFORCEMENT OF LEASE ON PROPERTY.

SIX DIVORCES ARE GRANTED.

After many hours of deliberation the jury in the Callahan case, which was impaneled to inquire into the sanity or the mental capacity of Mrs. Mary J. Callahan, was discharged by Judge Miller at noon yesterday, it having been unable to reach an agreement.

The jury had had the question yesterday afternoon for several hours. Yesterday morning Judge Miller advised the jurors that a verdict signed by nine of them would stand. Even after this information was furnished them they were not able to reach a verdict.

Grants Temporary Injunction.

Judge Kirby granted Mrs. Lena R. Driskill a temporary injunction against J. W. Mitchell to prevent the enforcement of a lease made between her husband and the defendant for a piece of land near Fisherville. The farm is owned by Mrs. Driskill, and she wishes to repudiate the contract made by her husband for the reason that she does not wish to have some considerable pasture ground plowed up.

The plaintiff alleged that the contract had been made without her authority, and its enforcement would result in her financial loss. The injunction applies to the turning of the pasture land and is to hold during the pendency of forcible entry proceedings instituted by the plaintiff.

Marriage Bonds Severed.

Six divorces were granted in joint session yesterday as follows:

Rosa Beatty from John Beatty, abandonment alleged. The plaintiff is restored to her maiden name, Rosa Daub, and is awarded allmony of $5 a week. They were married in Louisville on July 16, 1906.

Alma G. Ward from William E. Ward, for cruel treatment. They were married on February 15, 1886, at Jeffersonville.

Lillie Catherine Elizabeth Henley from Samuel Henley, drunkenness alleged. The plaintiff is given custody of her minor son, Leonard Sonberg Henley, and is allowed $5 a week allmony.

Dollie Ender from William Ender, for nonsupport. They were married in Louisville on November 29, 1892.

Rosa Mauzy from Thomas Clayton Mauzy, for cruel treatment. The plaintiff is awarded the custody of her two children, Willie and Francis, and allmony of $20 a month. The two were married on May 6, 1901, in Louisville.

G. Wehrle from M E Wehrle, for abandonment. They were married in Louisville on April 19, 1887, and lived together until November 25, 1907.

In the case of E. S. Porter against Lucy B. Porter, a suit for divorce, and which was granted on January 30, Judge Samuel B. Kirby to-day granted a new trial. This was asked for by counsel for the defendant on the ground that the defendant's side of the case had not been thoroughly heard. Abandonment is the alleged cause of action.

Court Paragraphs.

—W. H. Rudy sued William F. Blum, Jr., asking that he be allowed an attachment against property of the defendant to satisfy a judgment of $225.

—John A. and Maggie Muckelbauer sued the Nordeman-Daviess Company for $288, alleging failure of the defendants to adhere to the terms of a contract between the two parties.

—The Tischendorf-Chreste Lumber Company sued Constance R. Mann and others for $56.55 alleged to be due on a contract and asserting a lien on property of the defendants. The sum asked for is subject to credits of $23.

—C. D. Senior and Luella Senior sued the American Engineering and Construction Company, the Sewer Commission and the city for $1,000 as damages alleged done to his house at Woodland and Beech avenues when the ground caved in because of the sewer excavation.

—M. L. Dubourg, a saloonkeeper, who had appealed to the Circuit Court a judgment of $50 against him imposed in the Police Court, was adjudged guilty this morning by Judge Pryor and the charge of having unlawfully sold liquor to minors was sustained. The offense is alleged to have been committed on January 18.

—William Raven sued T. B. Jones & Co. for $10,000 as damages for injuries he received when the defendants allowed a piece of timber to fall into a sewer excavation in which he was at work. He was in the employ of the firm on January 16, 1909, and his right hip was broken. The timber, he says, was eighteen feet long, three inches thick and twelve inches wide and fell upon him a distance of thirty feet.

MOVEMENT ON FOOT TO HOLD GENERAL ASSEMBLIES ONLY EVERY THREE YEARS

Present Plan of Annual Meetings Said To Be Too Expensive For Presbyterian Denomination.

There is a new movement in the Presbyterian Church, North, which has for its object a change in the rules which provide that the General Assembly of this church shall meet annually. Leaders at the head of the movement want this changed so that the assembly shall meet but once in three years. It is said to be unlikely that this radical change will be made at once, but many leaders are agreed that if it continues to be agitated, the change is certain to come in time.

The annual meeting of the Presbyterian General Assembly is an expensive affair for the denomination, which has to pay the traveling expenses and board of some 500 delegates. The assembly is in session about one week. The new plan provides that at its triennial session the assembly should spend three weeks. This would not save much in the matter of board bills, but it would save in traveling expenses, and it is said that such saving would amount to at least $130,000 every three years, or about $1,000,000 in twenty years.

A committee of the West Jersey Presbytery recently considered the matter, and it decideid that "it is neither necessary nor desirable for the General assembly to meet once a year." It is pointed out by this committee, as well as by other leaders, that the assembly itself has been preparing for the change from annual to triennial meetings, although the preparations were made without this object in view. In recent years it has created a "permanent judicial commission" to which all questions of doctrine and constitution may be referred, and it has also created a "permanent executive committee" which has power to attend to matters of administration during the intervals between meetings of the General Assembly.

The Presbyterian General Assembly is the only legislative body of so large a denomination which meets annually. The Methodist General Conference meets once in four years, the Episcopal General Convention meets once in three years, the General Synod of the German Reformed Church meets once in three years. Annual gatherings are held by the Disciples of Christ, the Baptists, and some other bodies, but these are not legislative assemblies, and have rather the nature of popular meetings. The General Synod of the Reformed Church of America (Dutch Reformed) meets annually, but is not so large a gathering as the others named, although in this church also there is a movement looking to the abolition of annual assemblies and have meetings every two years instead.

The Presbyterian movement is meeting plenty of opposition, the character of much of it being indicated by the comment of one Presbyterian leader, who says: "It is a pity that such propositions cannot be studied and decided free from personal considerations. To a good many men of influence the fact that this suggestion means a 66 per cent. reduction in the chance to get a free trip to assembly, even the remoter fact that it signifies a 66 per cent. reduction of chances for moderatorial honors, will shut up the question before it is fairly opened."

No More Interference.

Pope Pius X. has made sure that there will never again be interference in the election of a Pope on the part of any of the nations of Europe, by the preparation of a solemn oath to be taken by all the Cardinals who will have a part in the election of his successor. While the proceedings of the conclave are supposed to be absolutely secret, it is generally understood and believed that when the conclave which met after the death of Pope Leo XIII. was in session, there came a time when the election of Cardinal Rampolla, Pope Leo's secretary of state, seemed to be assured. At that time one of the cardinals, by direction of the Austrian Government, stated that such election would be distasteful to Austria. The incident ended Rampolla's chances and other ballots resulted in the election of Cardinal Sarto, the present Pope.

Now the cardinals, all of whom have votes in the conclave, are to take oath that "We shall never in any way accept under any pretext from any civil power whatever the office of proposing a veto or exclusion, even under the form of a mere desire, and that we shall not make known such a veto, however it may have become known to us, either to the entire College of Cardinals, taken as a body, or to the individual fathers and cardinals in writing or orally; directly and approximately, or indirectly through others, either before or during the conclave, and that we shall never lend favor to any intervention or intercession or any other method whatever by which the lay powers of any grade or order whatever may wish to interfere in the election of a Pontiff."

In the same oath the cardinals are made to promise, each for himself, that should he be chosen to be Supreme Pontiff of the Church, "he will never cease to proclaim and defend integrally and strenuously the temporal rights, especially concerning the civil principality, of the Roman Pontiff and the liberty of the Holy See, and that he shall again make this promise and oath after his elevation to the lofty office of Supreme Pontiff."

Allege Discrimination.

When Andrew Carnegie provided a fund for the pensioning of aged college professors, he excluded from its benefits professors in State or denominational institutions. It has been felt by many educators in denominational institutions that they were discriminated against without real cause, and perhaps because the donor of the fund did not understand fully the denominational colleges. A committee of ten college presidents has therefore taken the matter before the trustees of the Carnegie Foundation and have asked the trustees to recommend to Mr. Carnegie that he extend the benefits of the foundation to the denominational institutions.

It was asserted by the committees that the so-called denominational colleges are in no sense sectarian. Their trustees, or a majority of them, may be selected from some one denomination, but the trustees administer the colleges with an educational motive rather than a sectarian one. It is therefore proposed that Mr. Carnegie shall admit to participation in the foundation all institutions fulfilling the academic and financial standards already prescribed, which are not found to have their property vested in an ecclesiastical officer or religious order, and which do not prescribe denominational tests for administrative officers, faculty and students, and which do not teach denominational tenets. It was also shown by the committee of presidents that the denominational colleges had been mothers of practically all the higher education of the country.

After receiving the committee the trustees of the foundation had an executive session and afterward announced that they would hold the whole in abeyance until it can be submitted to Mr. Carnegie.

Church Congress.

The Church Congress, an Episcopal gathering for the discussion of subjects of especial interest to churchmen, is this year to be held in Boston, the dates being May 11 to 14. The Church Congress meets only in those years when there is no meeting of the Episcopal General Convention, so that its next session will be in 1911, as the General Convention meets next year.

The programme for the Church Congress is always prepared by assigning topics to different leaders, some of them being asked to prepare papers and others to speak. As a rule the same topic is assigned to at least four men, two to write and two to speak. In this way different phases of one subect are secured, making a real and helpful discussion.

In the programme for the May meeting, the topic, "Socialism in Its Relation to Christianity," is assigned to Silas McBee, editor of the Churchman, and to the Rev. Percy S. Grant, rector of the Church of the Ascension, New York, where socialistic meetings have been held on Sunday evenings. "The Ethical Aspects of Gambling" is to be considered by President Luther, of Trinity College, Sereno S. Pratt and others. "Psychotherapy as an Aid in Pastoral Work" will be discussed by the Rev. Lyman P. Powell, of Northampton, Mass., who has been using psychotherapy in his own parish for several years, by Dr. Thomas Darlington, Health Commissioner of New York City, and two others. "The Outlook for Visible Church Unity" will be treated by Bishop Doane, of Albany; the Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, of Grace church, New York, and others. Other topics are: "Alleged Incompatibility of Genius and Orthodoxy," "The Possible Contribution of Oriental Thought to Present Day Christianity," and "The Office and Work of the Holy Spirit."

Conference of Church Clubs.

The Seventeenth National Conference of the Church Clubs of the United States, to which conference all the Episcopal Church Clubs of the country send delegates, is to be held in New York April 27 and 28. The session will be held in Synod Hall, adjoining the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. Bishop Greer, of New York, will make the address to the delegates at the religious service to be held in the cathedral crypt preceding the first business session. Robert H. Gardiner, of Boston, is president of the conference, and will make the annual address. Topics to be considered by the conference include "Immigration and the Church," "Christian Unity and Unchristian Division," and "The Emmanuel Movement and Its Deeper Meaning."

A novelty for the Conference of Church Clubs is provided by the Seabury Society of New York, which has invited the delegates to a conference of New York churchmen, which is immediately to follow the session of the other conference. The second conference will discuss conditions in New York, what may be done by leaders and men in general to improve them. Speakers are to be Bishop Greer, Secretary Lloyd of the Board of Missions and several other leaders.

Delegates to the Church Club Conference have been invited to two dinners, the first by the Church Club of New York and the second by the Seabury Society.

CURED OF WHISKEY HABIT.

"Charles B. James—Dear Sir—It has now been some time since I left your Sanatorium, where I took treatment for the Whiskey Habit. I wish to state that I now have no desire for whiskey and my general health is much improved in every respect. I sleep good, enjoy a good appetite and my digestion is all right. I have not lost a day from work since I returned home. I think the thing a man to do, when he finds he has to have whiskey to feed good, is to go to your Sanatorium and take treatment. He will find the amount he spends for treatment the best investment he ever made. The party who wanted prices on home treatment decided he would quit without aid, but I notice he is still drinking, and I think he will either order Home Treatment or go to the Sanatorium soon. Give my best regards to all connected with the Sanatorium. With best wishes for yourself and the Sanatorium, I am, yours truly,

They're After Him.

The brief period that already has elapsed since his departure has been sufficient to demonstrate that Theodore Roosevelt is to be a favorite subject for the news faker for the rest of his journey into and out of Africa. Promptly the faker invented a story of an attempt to assassinate the former President while on shipboard in the middle of the sea, the yarn being neatly fitted with a raving maniac and a few other spectacular accessories. Then there followed another prize fabricator who sent to his American sheets—or was it molded right in their own fake foundry on the 'steenth floor of the Yellow building?—this sort of rigmarole:

"Gibraltar, April 2.—Theodore Roosevelt was in serious danger Tuesday afternoon off Ponta del Gada in the Azores. A great wave swept him into the sea from a small boat in which he was returning from a visit to that city.

"He might have lost his life or at least had a hard struggle for it had not two brawny sailors caught him when another wave pitched him toward the side of the Hamburg.

"Mr. Roosevelt's patriotism placed him in danger. He had been visiting the American Consul at Ponta del Gada and as the small boat neared the side of the liner on the return trip the band struck up 'The Star Spangled Banner.'

"The former President rose and bared his head in respect for the anthem. Two sailors held him, as the sea was running high and choppy. The national hymn ended, the boat was pitching beside the Hamburg and Mr. Roosevelt made a flying leap for the rope ladder that dangled from the side of the vessel.

"Just then the big wave tossed the boat, threw him from his balance and he went into the sea. He is a sturdy swimmer, but might have had a hard time of it in the rough water if the succeeding wave hadn't tossed him up almost to the foot of the rope ladder. Two seamen who were hanging to that grabbed his arms and held him until he got a grip on the lowest rung and clambered up.

"He went at once to his cabin and took off his wet clothing. His fellow-passengers gave him a rousing cheer when he appeared again at dinner, smiling."

Now, wasn't that a perfectly lovely story? And can't you, in the bosom of your family, imagine Theodore Roosevelt, until recently President of the United States, swept overboard from a small boat, struggling for his life in the deep and in imminent peril of death—and no one the wiser but the yellow genius who conceived the episode and received it over his own imaginary cables?

So, gentle reader, be on your guard. Mr. Roosevelt will be made the hero or the victim of many a strange, eventful history before he gets back home. He may be expected to ride horseback through the Suez Canal; he may be expected to have some terrible fever within six days after he lands in Africa; to lecture the natives on race suicide; to teach an ambitious gorilla reformed spelling; to tell a funny story to King Kulululu in the original Hottentot patois. He will be killed or will die from the sleeping sickness forty-one times, at a conservative estimate.

Of course, all these fakes will not reflect much credit on journalism, but there will be plenty of newspapers that will add dignity to the field by refusing to publish the stuff.

"The Maple Leaf Forever."

Accepting the Canadian motto as their watchword and high incentive, certain gentlemen hailing from the storied land of Our Lady of the Snows have banded themselves into a society of loyal and lusty patriots; their hearts beating the stronger for that they are expatriates, who measure their fealty by the years of their exile.

The Maple Leaf Club is a very welcome and very worthy addition to those organizations of like national character already existing among us, of which the Scottish Society and more German Vereine than we can count, are the most prominent. We believe there is a Cercle Francais and we know that a French celebration has been held year after year with praiseworthy regularity on July 15, the day of the Fete de la Republique; but why do the sons of St. George content themselves with a singular abstention?

Since on May 24, 1897, the sixtieth anniversary of Victoria's accession was commemorated by a banquet, we do not recall any attempt by resident Englishmen to combine for those laudable purposes of good fellowship and good citizenship of which other kindred societies offer such admirable examples. They must surely exceed the Canadians in number and would doubtless equal them in enthusiasm, for a man is no less a good American for being a good German, a good Canadian, a good Scot and a fervent Britisher.

Of Breeks and Bonnets.

Though it be not generally known, yet is it none the less true that a battle is raging around breeks, the issue of which is still uncertain. Shall mere man return to the "smalls" of his forefathers, gaining thereby a picturesque variety and opportunity; shall trousers become, like the vanishing shad, no more than a grateful memory, or shall the traditional simplicity of our attire betray the dead level of our mental mediocrity? Those are the fateful questions.

The other night at the Tailors' Parliament held, one may reasonably presume, in Tooley street, W. D. F. Vincent, editor of the Tailor and Cutter, introduced "The abolition of Trousers Bill, 1909."

"Whereas,' said the bill, 'trousers have become inartistic, unhygienic, uncomfortable and in divers ways unsuitable as a garment to be worn by men, they should be abolished.'

"The measure provided it should be enacted:

"'First—Whoever shall wear, or knowingly have in his possession, or make or manufacture trousers, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labor.

"'Second—Adult males shall wear, instead of trousers, knee breeches, knickerbockers, kilts or some other form of dress, to be approved of by the sartorial secretary of state; and whoever shall wear, or knowingly have in his possession, or make or manufacture, any garment to be worn by men as an outer covering for their legs other than those set out in this section shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one year, with or without hard labor.'"

April 1 was set down as the date upon which the bill should go into force, and Mr. Vincent, who sponsored it, appeared on its behalf in all the dignity of full court dress. Trousers, he declared, with a bewildering display of classical erudition, to be the garb of slaves; as a forcing pit for microbes their upturned cuffs were a national danger; in bad weather they become as wet blankets; they had killed modern portraiture, and were always discarded by such as sought agility or freedom. Most convincing of all was the appeal to history. "When I look upon the victor of Trafalgar," said the inspired tailor, "upon the top of his monument, I find he wore breeches, and all the men who have done great things wore them." The arguments were not all of one piece; some small-minded, cheap-spirited folk with no soul above an Inverness cape, no riotous passion for brocaded waistcoats, no amateur's appreciation of cut steel buttons, of the tribe that dream not beyond the three-guinea suit, and who would be content to pass their lives near the Minories and as far from Savile Row as possible—such as these insisted that men nowadays wore knee breeches ceremoniously and under compulsion only and shed them shamfacedly as quickly as may be. One individual, speaking only for himself as an amateur beekeeper, opined that trousers were good enough for him. His argument, ad captandum though it was, carried the day, and a bag-kneed uniformity must possess us all for yet another year.

They were wrong—all of them. There is, as Carlyle has said of things sartorial in general, a great relativity about trousers. They can be in place and out of place; de rigueur and de trop. As, for example, an English sea captain, anxious to conciliate a South Sea potentate, sent him for his own wear a dress suit. Graciously pleased to accept the gift, his majesty, whose mind was of too generous a complexion to appropriate it solely to his personal use, distributed the garments among the court. Then he sent for the captain, advancing to meet him looking every inch a king in the somber dignity of the coat; the waistcoat lent an open air of benignity to the prime minister, while the commander-in-chief was resplendently bellicose in a pair of white kid gloves. As to the trousers some dispute had arisen, which had been settled in Solomonian fashion by an equitable division. None of the actors in the little comedy was the least bit at fault except the captain, who, being English, had no trouble looking solemn. But ever since he has attached only a relative value to custom in clothes, and he would be quite unable to understand the feelings of Secretary Newberry, who refused an ambassadorship because he wouldn't wear "velvet knee pants."

That the sobriety and uniformity of tailor-made man should offend the more by contrast, are not the modes of our mondaines arrived at a tempestuous climax of revelry in color, form and size? It is the vogue to sneer at the pictorial in Adam and to exalt the eccentricities of Eve; and those of us who would fain be gracious, chivalrous at a pinch, are in hourly danger of losing all faith in our standards of what is meet and comely, the while we spoil our tempers.

There is about all fashions something inevitable. We know them to be visible tokens of creative handiwork, of the "concrete picturesque;" we accept them as a paraphrase of the Botticellian canons, and we are moved to inquire with what patience we may, as of Canon Farrar when he elongated the Gospels, What's the use? Why restrict our horizon with rugged panoplies, inverted, incredible, uncouth, leviathan? Is there no middle way? Women, if they would please us, should be whimsical, coy, exquisitely and provokingly irrational, but blatant, never.

And the new fashions are blatant. It has been said that when ladies do their shopping, they buy this thing because it is pretty, that thing because it is cheap, and no thing because they need it. Such slanderous imputations should be rebuked; none of these reasons is valid. They buy anything so it be a la mode. The hats are there to prove it.

Disease and National Decay.

In reading the recent pamphlet of the Department of Agriculture on the subject of the "economic loss to the people of the United States through insects that carry disease" one comes across a strong presentation of the possibilities of disease as an emasculating force among races.

It is plain that the department wishes to warn the people of the United States against decadence accomplished by so insidious an agency, hence its impressive paper. It looks across the Atlantic and gathers the testimony of Maj. Ronald Ross for its most powerful argument—testimony given by the Major some time ago in an address delivered before the Oxford Medical Society on the general topic, "Malaria in Greece."

As is well known, malaria flourishes in modern Greece as few other products of the period do, and Maj. Ross undertakes to establish the relationship of this ubiquitous incubus of disease to the grade of the people of the nation. The malady over there is essentially one of infants. Infecting the child one or two years after birth, it stays with him until he is 13 or 14. Our own measles, whooping-cough and scarlatina are transient; the malaria lasts for years with the young Greek and sometimes it attacks every child in a village. After elaborating the facts concerning health conditions in Greece, Maj. Ross comes at length to the climax of his address—the historic significance of it all. We here quote him rather fully:

"We now come face to face with that profoundly interesting subject, the political, economical and historical significance of this great disease. We know that malaria must have existed in Greece ever since the time of Hippocrates, about 400 B. C. What effect has it had on the life of the country? In prehistoric times Greece was certainly peopled by successive waves of Aryan invaders from the North—probably a fair-haired people—who made it what it became, who conquered Persia and Egypt and who created the sciences, arts and philosophies which we are only developing further to-day. That race reached its climax of development at the time of Pericles. Those great and beautiful valleys were thickly peopled by a civilization which in some ways has not been excelled. Everywhere there were cities, temples, oracles, arts, philosophies and a population vigorous and well trained in arms. Lake Kopais, now almost deserted, was surrounded by towns whose massive works remain to this day. Suddenly, however, a blight fell over all. Was it due to internecine conflict or to foreign conquest? Scarcely; for history shows that war burns and ravages, but does not annihilate. Thebes was thrice destroyed, but thrice rebuilt. Or was it due to some cause, entering furtively and gradually sapping away the energies of the race by attacking the rural population, by slaying the new-born infant, by seizing the rising generation and especially by killing out the fair-haired descendant of the original settlers, leaving behind chiefly the more immunised and darker children of their captives, won by the sword from Asia and Africa? * * *

"I cannot imagine Lake Kopais, in its present highly malarious condition, to have been thickly peopled by a vigorous race; nor, on looking at those wonderful figured tombstones at Athens, can I imagine that the healthy and powerful people represented upon them could have ever passed through the anaemic and splenomegalous infancy (to coin a word) caused by widespread malaria. Well, I venture only to suggest the hypothesis and must leave it to scholars for confirmation or rejection. Of one thing I am confident, that causes such as malaria, dysentery and intestinal entozoa must have modified history to a much greater extent than we conceive. Our historians and economists do not seem even to have considered the matter. It is true that they speak of epidemic diseases, but the endemic diseases are really those of the greatest importance. * * *

"The whole life of Greece must suffer from this weight, which crushes its rural energies. Where the children suffer so much how can the country create that fresh blood which keeps a nation young? But for a hamlet here and there, those famous valleys are deserted. I saw from a spur of Helikon the sun setting upon Parnassus, Apollo sinking, as he was wont to do, towards his own fane at Delphi, and pouring a flood of light over the great Kopaik Plain. But it seemed that he was the only inhabitant of it. There was nothing there. 'Who,' said a rich Greek to me, 'would think of going to live in such a place as that?' I doubt much whether it is the Turk who has done all this. I think it is very largely the malaria."

Whether or not the theory advanced by Maj. Ross is true, his remarks are suggestive. They give the air of plausibility to an apparent moral derived from recognized conditions. His words are lucid and forceful enough to make it worth while for the civilized races to put on their thinking caps and regard endemic disease as an enemy to greatness and to progress. Physical health has much to do with mental and moral health, and all three have everything to do with national advancement. Aside from simply local and immediate expediency, the large economy involved makes the question of public health one that even the humblest individual cannot afford to overlook. And so the slogan should spread—down with disease and the insects that disseminate it in its various forms.

It is mighty considerate of China to equip herself with a first-class modern navy. Think of the money it will save Japan.

CRACK SOLDIERS

Bersaglieri, of Italy, Noted For Their Feats.

PRUSSIAN GUARDS WHO ARE PICKED FOR STATURE.

THE "CENTGARDES" OF FRANCE WHO NEVER RELAX.

HOW EMPRESS LOST HER BET.

It is doubtless true, as a great authority has said, that British regiments possess records "beyond all Greek and Roman fame," yet, nevertheless, there are European regiments that for romantic history, picturesqueness of uniform, or glorious incident, can challenge even our own resplendent Life Guards, "Death or Glory Boys," intrepid Highlanders, and dashing Dragoons, says Cassell's Saturday Journal (London).

The Bersaglieri of Italy, for instance, are one of the most perfectly trained—as they are certainly among the most picturesque—of regiments in the world. Amazing stories are told of their marching feats. On one occasion Gen. della Marmora drew up a battalion of them to salute King Victor Emanuel as he left Genoa. The king then traveled forty miles with English post-horses, changing horses four times, and at the end of his journey, what was his surprise to find an almost unrecognizable battalion of travel-stained Bersaglieri again drawn up waiting to receive him with Gen. della Marmora still at their head! They were the same troops who, fording rivers and streams, negotiating mountains and valleys, had taken a direct route with such incredible speed as to intercept his majesty.

Almost equally famous is the First Prussian Regiment of Guards, every man of which is a picked giant. "What do you think of it?" asked Frederick the Great of Col. von Wacknitz at the Battle of Zorndorf; "my idea is that we shall get the worst of it." "Your majesty," replied the Colonel, "in my opinion no battle is lost when the guard has not charged." "Very good," said Frederick, "then charge!" Wacknitz did so, the Russians were broken, and the day was saved.

"Tall prices for tall men" was the order in the time of Frederick William I., and one Tyrolese giant is said to have cost him £5,000 ($25,000). Giants came to him from Turkey, Russia, Poland, and even Ireland. His craze for tall men was so great that he turned recruiter, and would hook giants by the collar and march them off to be enlisted. When an outcry was raised through this "kidnapping" of one such son of Anak—a university man—the King merely replied: "No fuss! He's my subject."

The King of Siam prefers to retain about his person a bodyguard of high-born ladies. This force comprises 400 of the noblest dames in the kingdom, and much resembles that maintained by a native gentleman in Sumatra, who is still allowed by the Dutch to play at being the Sultan he once really was.

Mention must also be made of the brilliantly clad Russian Imperial Guard, which owes its origin to Peter the Great, who, while still a boy, living neglected and without masters, amused himself by drilling the other children of his own age in the neighborhood. These he formed into two companies, and each was afterward disciplined and expanded into a regiment.

The romantic French Foreign Legion is said to be the most cosmopolitan corps in the world. Political victims, deserters, criminals, doctors and professors of all degrees, officers of all countries who have been "cashiered," aristocratic "remittance men," are all to be found in its ranks. During a fight in South Oran, when the doctor was hit and could not attend to the wounded, no fewer than four doctors and medical students were discovered in the ranks of a single battalion, ready to take his place!

Desperadoes, too, find a welcome in the merciless "Rurales" of Mexico. They are chiefly employed in running to earth bandits and other reckless lawbreakers, and, on the principle of "set a thief to catch a thief," converted robbers are eagerly enlisted. Captured murderers obtain short shrift with the "Rurales," and very frequent is the report to headquarters: "Bandit chief caught, and shot while attempting to escape."

A short time ago, when revolutions were rife, a Mexican officer of high rank remarked boastfully: "I could quite easily and successfully lead an army against the President." It was overheard and reported, and an officer was sent with an escort to "request" the boaster's attendance on the President. On the journey down the escorting officer told his prisoner that he had orders to execute him on reaching a certain spot. The prisoner received the news in characteristic fearlessness, insisted on being served with coffee, calmly lit a cigarette, and then made the request that the firing party of "Rurales" "should not make a confounded mess of the job," which was duly complied with.

The Empress' Wager.

About "the Centgardes" of France, so famous for their fine physique and statesque appearance on duty, many amusing anecdotes have been written. Their absolute immovability on state occasions is a byword, and the Prince Imperial, when a child, once poured some sticky sweets down the open top of one of these sentries' boots, and yet the stolid fellow took not the slightest notice. The Empress Eugenie, who is still amongst us, on hearing of this incident, chaffingly bet the C. O. of his corps that she would make the sentry relax his stiff posture. "Done!" said the Colonel; and he was present when the Queen walked up and down, cracking jokes, making sudden noises, and grimacing in order to make a sentry laugh or move. She was quite "done," however, and at last, in sheer desperation, rushed up to a man and dealt him a smart smack on the face. Not a muscle of the sentry's face relaxed.

The Empress then admitted the loss of her bet, and promptly sent the man, by his officer, a sum of money, with a good-natured explanation. The money was, however returned with a message that the sentry "had been honored by having the hand of his gracious sovereign touch his cheek, and that such notice was ample reward for him—a soldier."

WHY MEN FAIL IN BUSINESS.

[Wall Street Journal.]

So many men are inclined to attribute their failure in business to any cause but the real one that special interest attaches to an array of facts bearing on the subject published in Bradstreet's. After pointing out that the failures in the United States during the year 1908 numbered 14,044 as against 10,265 in 1907, the writer, taking those for last year, classifies the cause of failure as follows:

Lack of capital	342
Incompetence	216
Disaster, etc.	189
Fraud	115
Inexperience	40
Neglect	22
Unwise credits	20
Failure of others	18
Competition	18
Extravagance	10
Speculation	10

in each thousand failures.

These classifications, it will be noted, are in some instances purely arbitrary and overlap one another, but not to an extent to destroy the impression of the showing as a whole.

The failures said to have been due to lack of capital—342 out of every 1,000—form the most significant feature of the entire exhibit. They mean that more than a third of those who failed in business last year owed their misfortune to lack of working capital and that they tried to do more trade than their resources warranted. The enterprises represented in this compilation included business concerns of all descriptions, individual and corporate, together with stock exchange houses, and the figures graphically illustrated the dangerous habit of American business men of undertaking operations beyond the supporting power of their available means.

That only 18 out of every 1,000 of the failures in 1908 are attributed to competition indicates that conditions in that respect are far less distressing than a certain class of agitators would have the public believe. A far more disquieting showing is that relating to failures due to fraud. That 115 out of every 1,000 failures should have been due to lawless practices denotes a condition of business morals in which the need of improvement is both large and urgent.

How little the element of gambling, the bugbear of reformers of certain classes, operates as a wrecker of business enterprise appears in the statement that only 10 out of every 1,000 failures in 1908 were due to that cause. In the light of these figures "stock gambling" must be acquitted of many grave charges so frequently made against it, and the last item in the list, loosely called "speculation," has reference to this.

SIDELIGHTS ON AN ERRATIC GENIUS.

I see that the Symphony Orchestra announces a Tschaikowsky programme at a local theater for the Friday after Easter. I never run across the name of that composer that I do not think of his erratic character and bizarre mentality. And if I should pick out the one episode of his life to illustrate his strangeness—aside from the texture of his music itself—I would pick out his romance with Frau von Beck—I believe that was her name. It was one of the queerest affairs imaginable. It had its beginning when Tschaikowsky was budding as composer and continued until the last years of his life.

* * *

It began somewhat like this: An orchestra in St. Petersburg or Moscow decided to play one of the compositions of the young Russian. The woman whom I mentioned heard the first performance. It happened that she was more profoundly impressed with the work than with anything else she had heard from a Russian composer. "Who was this young Tschaikowsky?" she hastened to inquire. She learned that he was born of an old and distinguished family, but was very poor and had broken into the field of music from one of the Government departments, in which he had been toiling as a clerk.

The woman was immensely wealthy. It occurred to her that here was a chance for her to use her money to advantage. She wrote Tschaikowsky a note expressing her admiration for his work and informing him that in order to make it possible for him to devote his life to composition without the necessity of fighting starvation, the usual lot of the struggling musician, she had arranged for a lifetime pension for him.

* * *

That was the starting point. What followed was the strangely romantic phase of the matter. It was stipulated that Tschaikowsky should never come to see his benefactress; he should never know her, but that they should correspond regularly and she could sit at a distance and adore her musical hero. In the "Life and Letters" by Tschaikowsky's brother, Modeste, the correspondence between the composer and the gracious woman is given in full. It is ardent, florid, eloquent. "My adorable and adored one," run the words of the composer. His heart beats for her, his soul sighs for her and all sorts of heart burns are endured for her dear sake. And she waxes no less fervent. You would think that Romeo and Juliet, Hero and Leander, Dante and Beatrice and the rest were living again in these two souls that loved from afar and did not speak except by note.

When Tschaikowsky became famous his benefactress suffered financial ruin and then she hid herself away from him. But shortly before the death of the two—and they died not far apart—there was a reunion, and the mended hearts became whole again.

Is it any wonder that a man capable of playing the hero in so fantastic an episode should compose music so full of eloquent beauty, color and even soulfulness? If he composed music at all his scores were bound to be just what they are. It was as inevitable as day that his spirit in his last moments was to give utterance to the symphony which is properly "No. VI.," but more commonly "The Pathetic." That symphony epitomizes his nature. When he died in 1893, shortly after a triumphal American tour, that work was regarded as a sort of swan song. It is melancholy, but melodious; it voices despair, but is lighted with passages of a stately kind of joy. It is one of the surprises which human nature daily furnishes the world to observe that of all symphonic compositions this "Pathetic" symphony is undoubtedly the most popular among persons of all walks and tastes. It would be interesting to work out the psychology of the matter. But it is an absolute fact, as is proved by the demand for it in other cities, the frequency with which it is played and the size of the crowds that hear it.

* * *

The question whether Tschaikowsky committed suicide or not is the "How-old-is-Ann?" riddle of Russia. Despite his world fame the composer was unhappy. His thoughts ran to the mystery of life and death; he saw things subjectively rather than objectively. Instead of enjoying what the moment offered he yearned for what it withheld. When such a nature expires suddenly there are those who will shake their heads querelously. There are those who shook their heads when Tschaikowsky died and who are shaking their heads to-day. However, the conviction is growing that Tschaikowsky was a victim of the cholera, which ravaged Russia in 1893. His brother seems to establish the fact conclusively. Soon everybody will accept it.

It has been the fate of many a musician to be seized upon by fiction writers and converted into a novel hero. Tschaikowsky met with that experience. Margaret Horton Potter made him the central figure of her novel, "The Genius." Of course, such a man, who lived such a life, supplied her with infinite material for romantic incidents.

To have been a protagonist in a prodigious romance of his own, to have figured in one written by somebody else, to have been a great soul, a brilliant critic, an engaging writer and a composer of music which more and more is winning recognition as the product of rare genius—was Tschaikowsky a failure entitled to despair? Hardly.

POPULAR WEED.

Monarchs Failed In Fight Against Tobacco.

SPRANG INTO INSTANT POPULARITY AMONG WHITES.

SEVERE PENALTIES AT FIRST FOR CULTIVATING IT.

KNOUT FOR THOSE USING IT.

Under one or another of the forms in which it is used by the human family, tobacco is more widely spread than any other narcotic or stimulant, and notwithstanding the controversies that have arisen over its first discovery America must gain the credit or bear the odium of having given it to the world, says the Boston Globe.

While it was introduced into Europe through Spain, the habit of smoking it was acquired and spread by the example of English gentlemen. Ralph Lane, the first Governor of Virginia colony, when he returned to England in 1586 carried with him the weed and the pipes and presented them to Sir Walter Raleigh. Gov. Lane became the first English smoker, but when Sir Walter "tooke a pipe of tobacco a little before he went to the scaffolde" the Elizabethean courtiers followed the illustrious example and through them the habit spread through England and so rapidly to other countries that before the close of the Seventeenth century it was known and used by all nations.

No plague that ever threatened human life ever met with more general opposition than did this now favorite weed in its race around the world from monarchs, statesmen and priests. Legislation was enacted bearing the severest penalties even to the knout and capital punishment for its cultivation or use. Excommunication was a penalty pronounced by the church. Even the "counterblaste" of an English monarch is hurled against this "drugge of late years found out." He tells them of all sorts of things that arise from its use and concludes with "A custom lothesome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and in the black stinking fume thereof, nearest resembling the horrid stinking smoke of the pit that is bottomless."

A party sent out by Columbus on his first expedition to explore the Island of Cuba brought back information that they had seen people "who carried a lighted firebrand to kindle fire and perfumed themselves with certain herbs which they carried along with them." It was the custom of these Indians to kindle a fire, upon which they threw the tobacco leaves and then inhale the smoke through a Y-shaped tube, the two upper points of which were inserted in the nostrils. The habit of snuff taking was reported by a Franciscan priest who accompanied Columbus on his second voyage, and the practice of chewing was first seen by the Spaniards in 1502, while exploring the coast of South America. All over the continent as it was explored the tobacco habit was found to be everywhere prevalent.

The Virginia colony that established Jamestown found it in general use among the Indians there, and it was John Rolfe, husband of Pocahontas, who first began its systematic cultivation in 1612. Gov. Yeardly encouraged its growth as an item of profit to the planter, and two years later his successor, upon landing, reported back that he "found all the public works and buildings in Jamestown fallen to decay and not above five or six houses fit to be inhabited, the market places, streets and all spare places planted to tobacco and the colony dispersed all about as every man could find the properest and best conveniency for planting."

Two years after this, in 1619, Virginia exported 20,000 pounds and gradually increased the trade until it became an important item in the commerce of the country. To-day the world produces more than 1,500,000,000 pounds a year, of which the United States furnishes more than two-fifths of the whole, Kentucky is the banner tobacco field of the world, producing one-sixth of the total.

Connecticut, which to-day is so proud of her tobacco crop, once passed a curious law against its use. For those who already had the habit "it is ordered that no man within this colonye, after the publication hereof, shall take any tobacco publiquely, in the streets, highways or any barnyards, or upon training days in any open places under penalty of sixpence for each violation," etc. The act provided that those who wished to adopt the habit must procure a license based upon a doctor's certificate, for both of which he should pay.

The name tobacco is attributed to the North American Indian's name of the instrument in which he smoked it—tabaca. Of all those who have used it, grown it or in any way became associated with it, Jean Nicot is the only one whose name has been allied with it. He was the secretary of King Henry II. of France, and while on a mission to Portugal saw the curious plant and sent a sample to the queen, and in his honor the botanists gave it its generic name nicotiana, which it may be said for the consolation of users of the weed belongs to the nightshade family, which also embraces the Irish potato, tomato, eggplant and the red pepper.

Daniel Webster, who wished to say something good for the weed wrote: "I suspect that Cato and John Rogers were not unacquainted with the virtues of the goodly leaf, else whence derived they this firmness? * * * O, tobacco, how many throats of bankrupts hast thou preserved from their own penknives!"

STORIES OF THE TOWN.

"Boom towns" offer rare opportunities for those who are there when they happen and are far-sighted enough to take advantage of their possibilities. That suggests a letter that was received by a local insurance company from a Texas man who wanted to become agent for the company. His application was unique and was as follows:

"Gentlemen—I wish to apply for agent's place with you for two new towns which will begin to build pretty soon. They will be placed in two counties in Texas, and we have decided on their names. Each one will have 6,571 lots, and I am quite sure over two-thirds of them will be built on within one year after the division, for each person owning a town lot has a farm to back himself with. So I think there will be a lively insurance business for a while and I would like to get agents as soon as the division is made. I can let you know when that will be, for I own a town lot in each town and I have a pardoner which enable me to work both towns very lively, and I thought I would get agent's place in time so as to be the first in the field."

It is hard to see how the company can turn down an application showing such enterprise as that one.

The solution of the tariff problem, in the mind of the great common people, apparently is one of those things that nobody can find out, and the average citizen usually skips the news stories and editorials that deal with the question, though he realizes in a vague sort of way that it is one which affects him pretty closely. But what's the use of paying your Congressman $7,500 a year and perquisites if you've got to figure out those things by yourself at last?

The situation recalls a story told by H. H. Gibson, a former Louisville man, who was a reporter on a Chicago paper a good many years ago. He was sent to interview John Sherman on the tariff question at a time when that gentleman's views were considered of more than ordinary importance. Mr. Gibson was only a cub reporter and had all manner of difficulty breaking past the cordons of attendants who surrounded the great man's sanctum, but he finally accomplished the impossible and stood in Mr. Sherman's august presence.

He explained his mission in halting accents, and then Mr. Sherman said: "Do you want to know whether I think a protective tariff is the best thing for the American people?"

The scared reporter admitted that that was about it.

"Well, then," said Sherman, "you can go back and tell them that I don't know and I don't believe anybody else does, either."

"I wrote the story that way," said Mr. Gibson, in telling of it, "and I think it was the most successful, as well as the briefest, newspaper interview I ever got."

There is a picture in a downtown window that portrays with great fidelity a basket of ripe strawberries. They are large and red and luscious and have just reached the point where the tiny seeds are almost in evidence. You can tell by looking at them that they are just sour enough to require a dash of sweetness and that if you had a little powdered sugar and a pitcher of cream you could make Jupiter's brand of prime ambrosia look like a chocolate sundae.

A boy about 12 years old passed the window yesterday and saw the picture. He looked twice and stopped to take another look. Then his lower jaw fell and one knew by looking at him that he was longing for some real berries like those in the picture. And the way his hand passed over the region of his tummy indicated that he felt that his capacity would have been equal to the task of taking care of the entire basket.

If the painter of the picture had been there it would have been up to him to have taken the youngster to a restaurant and filled him up, for he had paid the picture the highest possible compliment.

"I want to call attention to a frequent error," said a man who likes to be considered a purist when it comes to writing and speaking English. "Many a time I have attended church services and have heard the minister announce that 'The congregation will please sing the first three verses.' If they had done that it would have left everybody stranded in the middle of the first stanza; for verse means line, or 'turning-place,' and cannot be properly used to mean stanza."

Thereupon he went up head.

THE FALL OF THE HAUGHTY.

[A Hallroom Fantasy by John D. Wells, in the Buffalo News.]

Her nineteen-nine hat and my nineteen-five lid
Once met by mere chance on the tree in the hall;
Her hat is of green, as prevailing styles bid,
While mine has turned green from the service it did
Through many a summer and winter and fall.

Like opulent wealth, wherever 'tis found,
Her nineteen-nine hat became haughty and proud,
And turned up its brim and it flustered and frowned
Upon my poor skypiece, its feelings to wound—
Inviting the laughter of all the hall crowd.

"You're lacking in style!" said her nineteen-nine hat;
My lid felt the thrust, for it pierced to the band!
"You're very passe and, for matter of that,
Just how you can blind the society frat
And keep your position, I can't understand!"

Then up spake my lid in a voice loud and clear,
"Ah, only for me and my savings, Miss Nibbs,
It's a pretty safe wager YOU wouldn't be here!"
You ought to have heard all the hangers-on cheer,
And seen the umbrella hang onto its ribs!

WEST'S WOOL HARVEST ON.

[Kansas City Star.]

The first shorn sheep of the season—several carloads of shivering, bleating, coatless animals from Texas—were unloaded at the stockyards last week. They indicated that the wool harvest of 1909 had begun. From now until the last of July about 10,000 men will be engaged in clipping, packing and shipping this year's production. The professional shearer begins the season's work about the middle of March in Texas. Then he moves to Arizona and from there to New Mexico. After that he moves northward as the season advances.

It's a quick process, that of taking the wool from the sheep, with the automatic steam-driven shearers. The average time required is less than five minutes. An expert clips 125 to 150 sheep in eight hours. He is paid 10 to 12½ cents a head for the work.

Most of the Western wool, or "territory wool," as it is known, goes to Eastern markets. It is packed in large, coarse sacks.

About 70 per cent. of this country's crop of wool comes from the region west of Kansas City, while the New England States manufacture about 90 per cent. of the production. The United States produces about 300 million pounds of wool and imports 200 million pounds annually. The home product is worth about $50,000,000.

IN A ZOO AT NIGHT

Most Animals "Pay Attention To" Their Sleep.

ELEPHANTS KEEP ON FEET WHILE KEEPER IS NEAR.

THROW THEMSELVES ON SIDES WHEN HE SEEMS GONE.

WOLVES ALWAYS HOWLING.

"Ever see animals in captivity asleep?" asked an attendant at the Bronx Zoo the other day of a New York Times reporter. "It's a queer sight that is not often afforded to others than those who have the care of them," he continued. So the man to whom he spoke accepted the suggestion that he "come up some night."

After dark the two walked to the deer ranges where soft-eyed creatures lazily munched the remnants of their dinners; past dens of wolves and foxes, where the former were pacing back and forth and snarling at one another; past ponds for ducks and otters and beavers to the dens of the bears blasted out of the side of the rocky ledge. There they stopped and the attendant pointed to a big black hulk being swallowed up by the falling darkness. There was just light enough to make out that the feet of the animal were tucked under a humped body and that its drooping head was trying to emulate the paws.

"He's been snoring like a steam engine since 5 o'clock," said the attendant, "and he won't wake up until morning. He's early to bed and late to rise. When the wolves howl, as they do several times at night, he's the only fellow in the zoo who isn't disturbed. He just keeps on snoring, does this Kadiak bear from Alaska."

An hour later all but two of the bears were in sound slumber. The hairy-eared bear from Asia dreamed as he squatted on his haunches and propped himself on his paws. The crotches of the dead trees were occupied by black bears curled up in balls. Cinnamon, brown and grizzly bears were scattered over the rocky floors.

There was one wide-awake grizzly. He squatted before the gate of his den and persistently endeavored to pick the lock. Half an hour later he stopped and went to sleep with his paw on the gate.

Not a sound came from the primate's house until the door was opened with a creak. Then every single living thing in there was very much alive, scampering about and chattering. The hay in the cages rattled; the sides of the cages shook as the monkeys swung up and down, and the shelves and perches squeaked under them. Pretty soon they settled down and all were soon asleep again. The little squirrel monkey, which has a tail four times the length of its body, was hanging to a perch and his tail was sticking straight up in the air. Other monkeys lying on their stomachs and with their hands under their chins reminded me of the way human babies frequently sleep. A big black ape was humped up on the floor with his head leaning against the side of the cage and snored away like "a major." The drills and mandrills from West Africa sat up like toy soldiers and a baboon perched high up on his perch looked the picture of content.

The lions were found sleeping like dogs, either on their sides with their feet out straight or on their stomachs with their heads resting between their paws. Two of the tigers had rolled over on their backs and their feet pointed toward the roof of the cage, while their tongues stuck out from their partly opened jaws. The puma was lying on his stomach sound asleep with his head twisted around so that the back of the head rested on the floor, and seemed to be perfectly contented.

The elephants had thrown themselves on their sides and lay as still as mice. Elephants sleep only when they think their keeper is not around. Let him appear and they will stand and lazily swing their trunks in circles as long as he is in sight. Once he has vanished they lose no time in getting back to sleep.

The attendant said the wolves howled about every hour in the night. When they were not howling the wolves lay on their sides dog fashion and slept lightly.

The foxes in the nearby dens, however, were just the opposite. They seemed to sleep hard despite their well-known prowling proclivities when at large. The howling of the wolves did not appear to fease them. As a matter of fact, according to old hunters, the fox is a very sound sleeper once he makes up his mind to it.

THE NATONAL MEAL.

[London Chronicle.]

It is not only in Scotland that breakfast is the characteristic national meal. Travel where you may, the first meal of the day is the one that strikes the foreign note, luncheon and dinner having gradually absorbed cosmopolitan qualities that are not even confined to hotels. But you never feel so much of an Englishman as when Switzerland gives you rolls and butter and honey, and nothing more, with your coffee; or when France makes this into one exquisite crumbling "croissant," with an inch or two from a yard-long loaf, or when Denmark adds cream instead of milk to the coffee and a dangerous piece of pastry to the black bread and round white roll.

Yet our English breakfast became an institution only in the Eighteenth century. Before that only royalty breakfasted off meat, bread and cheese and ale. The commoner, such as Pepys, took merely a morning draught of buttered ale.

ORIGIN OF AN ORDER.

[London Tit-Bits.]

The origin of the Order of the Garter has been much disputed, but tradition has it that the choice of the emblem was determined by a trivial accident. It appears that Joan, Countess of Salisbury, dropped her garter of blue embroidered velvet when dancing with Edward III., and the King, picking it up, tied it around his leg. But, observing the Queen's jealous glances and the significant looks of his courtiers, he returned it to its fair owner with the remark, "Honi soit qui mal y pense!" ("Evil be to him who evil thinks"), adding, "that in a short time they should see that garter advanced to so high honor and estimation as to account themselves happy to wear it."

RED-HEADED

Mountain Girl Appeals To Capital Train-Shedders.

WOMAN AND CHILD DESERTED BY CRUEL HUSBAND.

LOFTERS LIFT DULLNESS DURING LENTEN PERIOD.

TWO WEDDINGS ANNOUNCED.

[Special Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

Frankfort, Ky., April 3.—The lawyers (who are fond of condensing their wisdom into Latin-coated pellets) say of certain documents that they are ambulatory. That is to say, that their spirit, like that of John Brown, goes marching on.

The same thing may be said of the job lot of humanity. Society news may fall; the social doings be "stale, flat and unprofitable," but the doings and the sayings of the job lot of humanity are always interesting.

A tragedy held the boards of the railroad shed one day this week and played to a waiting-room full of all sorts and conditions of people. The rain never dripped from the eves on the heads of two such sorry looking passengers as it did that day on the heads of a young mountain mother and a cute little red head of a girl.

* * *

Red-Headed Babies.

It may be that red-haired babies are especially attractive to me, or it may be that they are so especially attractive that makes them cute to me, but anyway this youngster, sitting on a bundle of clothes wrapped in a wet blanket, and looking out interestedly at the world from a pair of whisky-colored eyes which shone like stars beneath the damp and flopping brim of a boy's hat, looked so bright that we were friends in no time.

When she left she had made so many friends that she can open a small bank account when she gets back to Breathitt. The mother, a very young mother, did not have much to say, but here is the story told by the man who had gotten her a pass and given her a new five-dollar bill.

Gail Hamilton is responsible for the statement, "that the office of male parent is insignificant and devoid of honor." In this particular case the statement is true. The father brought his young wife and baby here several days ago and they lived in a shanty by the river's edge until he deserted her. Saturday night some friendly negroes gave her shelter, but last Sunday night she and the baby slept out of doors. Then the gentleman before referred to came to their relief and sent her back home to her "pappy."

* * *

Villain Goes Unpunished.

The tragedy will not end here, more's the pity, for the villain goes unpunished—like all the real villains, and the mother, God bless her, will have the burden of caring for her offspring. The mother's love in her breast, was as fine, if you please, as any other mother at the shed that morning. There were three red-haired babies in the waiting-room, but this little grotesquely dressed figure in the flopping hat was far and away the best looking of them all.

It made one smile to see these minature men and women as they walked past the wet baby in the doorway carefully hold aside their little dresses, so as not to touch the little child to whom fate had been unkind.

The little girl didn't care. She made friendly advances to them all and when they fell back, with a finger in their mouths, she made up with the older ones present.

When the train pulled out through the tunnel she waved a sticky hand in farewell to all, but the man who had befriended them, bless you, he declared that he could see only a blur of a red head and a wet hat for the mist in his eyes.

* * *

Touch of Humanity.

"We are not dead until every soul that has known us and loved us has passed away." What an opportunity some man has neglected to perpetuate his name by doing something worth while for "the least of these."

"In the mud and scum of things Something always, always sings."

We live in this work-a-day world and never lift our eyes to see the poetry of flowers, or field, or birds or human beings.

On the same train that bore away the little mountain girl there was a little, bent, old man who was seeing his granddaughter off after a visit with himself and wife.

"Your granddaughter," said I, knowing that in all the fifty-four years of their wedded life neither sons nor daughters had come to bless their union. Then the old gentleman wiped his specks on a red bandana handkerchief and told me how he and his wife had kept house for fifty-four years and had reared four orphan boys and girls because they had none of their own. Now these same foster-children have reared families of their own to bless the name of grandfather and grandmother.

Truly they are grand mothers and grand fathers, who can take motherless children to their hearts and care for them as tenderly as for their own. They may have dreamed dreams of the children which would one day bless them, and

"Before the never-lighted fire
Have seen their unborn faces shine,"

but they do not live out their lives selfishly. "All the little fledglings have flown away," he said with a sad smile, "and builded nests of their own, but my wife and I cook, wash dishes and make candy together." Knowing full well they were quite able to employ a servant I asked why they did this. "My," he replied, with a twinkle in his eyes, "my wife wouldn't let a servant muss up her house, and besides, what would we do?" This is so. They keep house with the same interest that they did fifty years ago, and now, with a broken wrist, the old lady makes quilts for her children and her grandchildren and for the poor. He goes to market and sweeps. Life hasn't been a failure to them.

One Dissipation.

Let us hope the Lenten calm is but the forerunner of a season of social storms. So far, this week was broken only by one single social dissipation. The Lofters—like the poor—are always with us. You can't lose them. They have been the bulwarks of society the past thirty days and will be for ten more. They are the remnant on which society will build after Easter and without them we would be bereft of a single social item. All hail to the Lofters!

They met this past week with Mrs. H. V. McChesney at her home on Wapping street. The house looked most springlike with a riotous profusion of jonquils blooming forth from old silver pitchers and from low silver bowls.

During the afternoon a delicious buffet lunch was served in the dining-room. All the afternoon was not taken up in sewing or embroidery, for a great deal of the time was taken up in what a former president of the club, now residing in Louisville, once termed "the lost art of conversation."

Mrs. McChesney was assisted in entertaining her guests by Mrs. S. E. James and Mrs. D. D. Smith.

Two Happy Engagements.

"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love" and a maiden's fancy turns to thoughts of sartorial adornment. The combination has worked out two delightful engagements that will result in two happy weddings in the early summer. Both of these weddings will be of interest throughout Old Kentucky.

One that of Miss Marie Sandford, of New Castle, the pedite little sister of Judge John D. Carroll and wife, and Mr. David R. Castleman, of Louisville, came as a distinct surprise to friends here. Miss Sandford has spent the greater portion of her time this winter with her sister, and has been most admired by the younger set at the Capital. She has been very popular, and when the news of the engagement leaked out it was at first connected with a Frankfort man's name. The wedding of Miss Sandford and Mr. Castleman will be solemnized on the afternoon of April 24 at New Castle.

Mr. and Mrs. J. P. South have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Spicie Belle South, to Mr. Dudley Chase Chaffee, of Peoria, Ill., the wedding to occur in June.

This announcement did not come as a surprise in one respect. The friends of Miss South were also kept guessing as to which one would be the lucky man.

Miss South is one of the Capital City's sweetest and most beloved young women and is a skilled musician.

Personal Points.

Mrs. Will Railey and daughter, Miss Jennie Farris Railey, who have been spending the past winter in Florida, will arrive home on the 6th of this month.

Mrs. Lawrence Cloud, of Cincinnati, is the guest of Mrs. John W. Rodman on the South Side.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Berry are at home from a stay of ten days in New York City.

Mr. Paul Collins, of Louisville, was here a few days this week with his parents, Dr. J. S. Collins and Mrs. Collins.

Miss Nettie Walcutt, of Lakeland, who has been the guest of Mrs. J. C. W. Beckham, has gone to Lexington to visit Mrs. Solomon Van Meter.

Miss Jacquelin Hendrick, a former Frankfort girl, who left here in her early girlhood, and the daughter of Col. Jack Hendrick, is gaining fame in the musical world. Her friends are delighted with her success. The New York World of last week published quite a complimentary article about her with a good likeness of herself. Miss Hendrick and three friends will give a musical at the Waldorf-Astoria and the patronesses are from among the most exclusive families of the metropolis.

Capt. W. F. Dandridge and Mrs. Dandridge, Mrs. Hiram Berry and niece, Miss Clint Cunningham, who have been spending the winter at various resorts, will return home by April 6. Miss Elise Dandridge, who has been spending several weeks with friends in Washington City, may go to Atlantic City for Easter, after which she will return home. Capt. Dandridge and Mrs. Dandridge will sail for Europe shortly to remain a year.

Mrs. W. C. Cruce, of Ardmore, Tex., is the guest of Judge T. J. Nunn and family on the South Side.

GIVES PRESTIGE

To the Hague by Recently-Signed Treaties.

UNITED STATES SUBMITS IMPORTANT CASES.

DISPUTES WITH ENGLAND AND VENEZUELA ARBITRATED.

HISTORY OF PEACE COURT.

Washington, April 3.—Again the good offices of the International Court of Arbitration at The Hague are to be invoked to settle important international disputes, this time in matters in which the American Government is vitally interested. It will not be the first occasion in which recourse has been made to that august tribunal in issues in which this Government has figured, the cases of the Pious fund of the Californias and of the "preferred creditors" of Venezuela which were awarded preferential treatment following a blockade of her ports, both having been passed on by the court and each of importance to the United States.

Neither of them, however, are regarded as of as great consequence as that, primarily, of the interpretation to be placed on Article I of the Treaty of 1818, touching the rights of Americans to fish in the waters of Newfoundland, and, secondarily, the issues to be arbitrated as a result of the agreement recently reached between Mr. Buchanan, the American special commissioner, and President Gomez, of Venezuela, both of which are to go to The Hague.

* * *

Ratified By Senate.

The "compromis" negotiated by Secretary Root with Ambassador Bryce, which incorporates the fisheries dispute to be arbitrated, has been ratified by the Senate and the two nations interested have agreed on the arbitration. In submitting to The Hague so important a principle as that involved in the fisheries controversy both the American and British Governments are giving that tribunal a prestige in the initial stages of its existence which is regarded diplomatically as an international occurrence of the first magnitude and one calculated to have great influence in inspiring similar action by other nations burdened with international disputes, which if not adjusted may lead to serious results.

The findings of the court will be awaited with the greatest interest and impatience by the New England fishing interests, for it means much to that hardy class of men who yearly make the Newfoundland shore their rendezvous and who supply a large portion of the Northeastern markets with sea food. Their treaty rights have been questioned, their work interfered with and they have suffered from the attempted enforcement of certain local laws or regulations the privilege to enact which has been warmly contested by this Government.

The disputes are of long standing and each country, confident of the correctness of its own contentions, is expected to abide by the decision of the court. Because of the long time allowed for the preparation of the case, the submission of arguments, etc., it will be more than a year before the questions in dispute are fully before the tribunal for decision.

* * *

The Venezuela Dispute.

Years of effort and of arguments by the State Department failed of success in reaching a basis of settlement of the disputes with Venezuela, which finally came as a result of suggestions made by President Gomez, after Castro left Venezuela and when that country was being harassed by the action of the Dutch war vessels sent there by Holland following the breaking off of friendly relations between the two nations. Secretary Root received in a cordial spirit the advances made by Gomez and sent Mr. Buchanan to Venezuela promptly with full instructions to deal with the subject of the settlement of the claims and the result of his labors are said to be satisfactory alike to both the State Department and to the South American republic.

The strained situation which had preceded Mr. Buchanan's mission for so long a period was a source of regret to Secretary Root, who has taken a great deal of interest in the well-being of our sister republic to the south, and he pointed out that the American Government had on repeated occasions interposed as a friend in need in behalf of Venezuela to relieve her from disagreeable and dangerous complications with other Powers. That a majority of the disputes are to go to The Hague is regarded favorably, for it removes any opportunity for charges of force or intimidation which might have been made against this Government had they been settled directly between the two countries. The willingness of the United States to thus dispose of them, it is pointed out, demonstrates to the nations of this hemisphere its faith in the honor and fairness of the court, leaving to the fate of that tribunal questions affecting the interests of countries in which this Government in some respects exercises a paternal interest and in whose behalf it always stands ready to uphold the Monroe Doctrine.

* * *

Several Points To Be Considered.

Various phases of three disputes go to The Hague as a result of Mr. Buchanan's negotiations, namely: That of the United States and Venezuela Company which claims it has been deprived of the right to mine asphalt and to build a railroad; that of the Orinoco Corporation, which claims large concessions covering iron mines, asphalt privileges and hardwood concessions; and the case of the Orinoco Steamship Company, which claims exclusive rights of navigation on branches of the Orinoco River.

In the two latter cases the court is to decide primarily whether the judgments of previous arbitrations or decisions of umpires were correct and are to stand and if not then they are to be heard on their merits. Three arbitrators are to be appointed, and as in the case of the fisheries dispute more than a year will elapse before a decision is rendered. On the part of the United States the preparation of the cases will not be a formidable proposition, as there is already a mass of data bearing on them available which formed the basis of the arguments made to President Castro in behalf of arbitration. Although complicated to some extent, after all, questions of fact largely predominate, unlike the controversy over the Newfoundland fisheries where specific interpretation of an existing treaty will form the burden of the work of the court.

* * *

Congress Showed No Interest.

After Castro declined to arbitrate the disputes either separately or collectively the State Department passed the whole question up to Congress, but no instructions were given for the guidance of the department to proceed to force a settlement. There appeared to be no general public interest manifested in the controversy warranting any drastic action and the matter was allowed to lapse. Finally the question was happily solved when President Gomez expressed a desire to resume friendly relations which had been broken off by each country withdrawing its diplomatic representative from the other, and Mr. Buchanan was sent to Venezuela to reopen negotiations for a settlement of the claims.

Controversies passed on by The Hague including those already referred to embrace the following: The matter of perpetual leases, resulting from a disagreement between Japan on the once hand and Germany, France and Great Britain on the other, touching the real meaning and scope of certain provisions of treaties and agreements between them; the right of certain Muscat dhows to fly the French flag; and the inquiry instituted by operation of the court between Great Britain and Russia growing out of the North Sea Dogger Bank incident, when the firing of the guns of the Russian fleet caused the loss of a boat and the death of two persons belonging to a British fishing fleet.

TOBACCO WAREHOUSE BURNS AT HENDERSON.

Henderson, Ky., April 3.—The Newcomb tobacco factory, owned by Henry P. Barrett, burned here this morning. The loss is about $15,000 with about $6,000 insurance. The building had not been used for tobacco purposes for some years. The Lambert Walker Hardware Company had about $2,500 worth of agricultural implements stored therein, all of which were ruined. This firm had $1,500 insurance. Several smaller outbuildings were also burned. The total loss is about $20,000.

GOV. MARSHALL

Will Shy Castor Into Ring of National Politics.

TO BE GUEST OF DEMOCRATIC CLUB IN GOTHAM.

HOOSIER FRIENDS TIP HIM FOR LEADER IN 1912.

PLAIN, COMPETENT, HONEST.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 3.—[Special.]—One week from to-day Thomas R. Marshall, Governor of the State of Indiana, will leave for New York City for his first venture upon the sea of national politics. With him will go the hopes and prayers of the Indiana Democracy, which sees, or fancies it sees, a presidential halo hovering about the horizon of 1912 awaiting some suitable Northern Democrat who will show up big enough to promise it a fitting resting place. This Democracy now believes that it will be able to present in Gov. Marshall the pick of the presidential timber for the next national election, and it is not without a feeling of justly-placed hope that it is preparing to wish the Governor God-speed on his journey.

Gov. Marshall will go to New York City to address the National Democratic Club in its annual meeting in that city. Not long since a special messenger showed up in the office of Gov. Marshall bearing a message to him in which he was invited to make one of the chief addresses on the occasion of the club's meeting, and after he had caught his breath (for Gov. Marshall is a timid man) he said he "guessed he could say something to the boys" and accepted the invitation.

* * *

Democrats Rejoice.

But when the news went over the State that the Governor was to be one of the speakers, Democratic hats were thrown high in the air, figuratively speaking, for, as a rule, Indiana Democrats are pretty careful of their headgear, and visions of the Governor in national politics appeared on the glowing horizon of the party workers. The Democratic horizon has glowed most of the time since the Republican machine made such a fizzle of the campaign last fall, and since the new Governor has assumed his chair in the administration of his duties is showing himself a much bigger man than his stanchest friends had even hoped he would be, the current of political faith which lights up the horizon has been increased a great many hundred kilowats. And unless the Governor disappoints several thousand hopeful Democrats in Indiana when he carries his Jeffersonian simplicity to the National Club banquet hall, he will turn a few thousand more measures of the fluid loose in the illuminating machinery.

* * *

Prominent Democrats.

The Governor will be one of four Democrats in big offices north of the Mason and Dixon line who will sit down at the banquet table. One of the others is the Hon. Ben F. Shively, United States Senator from Indiana, and the other two are the Governor of Minnesota and the Governor of Ohio. That they will stand out prominent in the gathering will be a natural sequence of the politico-geographical positions they hold. It is barely possible (the Indiana Democrats think it highly probable) that presidential timber for 1912 will be selected at that banquet and the particular tree marked by the official timber selectors and branded with the mark of the Jeffersonian hewers who are pretty certain to superintend the hewing process in the next Democratic National Convention.

Brings Together Old Enemies.

A few days ago Gov. Marshall accomplished what has long been held up as the political impossibility in Indianapolis. He caused Tom Taggart and John W. Holtzman, sworn political enemies, to come together, shake hands and walk down the street together, presenting a spectacle which had not been observed in Indianapolis for so many years that even the oldest Democrats had almost forgotten it. The Governor was not interested in the political fights of Taggart and Holtzman, except as it affected the welfare of the party in Indiana. Their contentions promised to cause the Democrats of Indianapolis to go into the mayoralty fight with their forces divided, and the Governor saw therein grave danger of losing the Marion county Democratic representation in the next Legislature, when Democrats are going to be needed to head off the sensational aspirations of Albert J. Beveridge, J. Frank Hanly, former Governor, and a few other Republicans who are itching to follow Ben Shively to Washington, there to don the Beveridge toga. Since the conference, the Indianapolis Democrats have been moving in an atmosphere of harmony and promise to be good all through the city campaign.

* * *

Makes Good Impression.

The sort of impression Gov. Marshall is making out over the State is shown in an editorial which appeared a few days ago in the Ft. Wayne News (Republican), which said:

"No politician can accuse him of ingratitude and none can remind him of certain promises made in the stress of the campaign. Mr. Marshall is thrice happy in his situation, and it is not surprising that he manifests his natural independence of character in filling appointive positions. And by the way, he is filling them very acceptably to the people."

That's it, "acceptably to the people," and because he is thus behaving, the people smile knowingly and nod their heads in the affirmative when a neighbor remarks that Marshall will "likely cut some mustard" when he goes "down East." E. G. DAVISSON.

BACK TO LOUISVILLE AFTER LONG ABSENCE.

OTIS HARLAN,
In "The Broken Idol."

WILL NOT KNOW HIS FATE UNTIL TUESDAY.

Trial of Joseph Gardiner, Kentucky Boy, Delayed At San Francisco.

San Francisco, April 3.—Joseph Gardiner, the Kentucky youth on trial here on a charge of murdering a mulatto sailor on board the whaler Bowhead, will not know his fate until Tuesday. United States Attorney Robert T. Devlin had not finished his presentation of the Government's case when court adjourned last night and a continuance of three days was ordered. Attorney Parker Maddux made the opening address for the defense, and was followed by Attorney Will A. Young, of Kentucky, also of Gardiner's counsel.

The latter lawyer was sent West by the youth's relatives to extricate him from his difficulty, if possible.

Attorney Henry B. Prewitt, Democratic State Chairman, of Kentucky, also came on here in the interest of young Gardiner.

LITERARY CRITIC

ADVOCATES SIMPLIFIED SPELLING BEFORE SCHOOL TEACHERS.

Brander Matthews, of Columbia University, Gives Good Reasons To Indiana Pedagogues.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 3.—Brander Matthews, literary and dramatic critic at Columbia University, calmly informs the members of the Southern Indiana School Teachers' Association that he is an advocate of "orthographic anarchy." He explained what he meant before any of the budding young teachers from the outlying districts had a chance to worry. His anarchy consisted of a red-hot attack on the present methodz of spelling.

"I advocate orthographic anarchy. I won't spell according to prescribed methods. I think everybody else has a right to exercise the same sort of independence.

"A man said to me: 'How can you expect any self-respecting cat to purr with only one r, or an important hen to lay an egg with only one g?' I told him the cat had been keeping warm all winter with fur with only one r, and most good hens managed to scratch a pretty good living with legs containing only one g.

"To-day you think the bonnet of four years ago ridiculous. If you were to see one of three years to come it would probably seem ridiculous at the present rate of expansion. It is the same with orthography. We want to get away from the idea that there is any orthodoxy in orthography. If we had years ago insisted on being conservative we would have had spades and horses instead of plows and wagons. If we go far enough back we will find among our ancestors many so conservative they objected to standing upright."

MEXICAN VETERAN CONDEMNED TO DEATH.

Gen. Maas Convicted of the Murder of Brother of Girl He Wronged.

Mexico City, April 3.—Gen. Gustave A. Maas, who has a record in the Mexican army as an Indian fighter, has been sentenced to death for the killing of former Lieut. David Olivarez, with whose sister it was charged he had been intimate. The trial and sentence of Gen. Maas created a sensation, as the prosecution brought out that he had before kidnaped a girl at Tacubayo.

The verdict was a remarkable one. Not only was the General sentenced to be shot to death, but he must also pay $60 a month to each of the two children of the man he murdered for the next twenty years, and must also pay the funeral expenses of his victim. These sums will come out of Gen. Maas' estate. Gen. Maas is wealthy and has been prominent socially.

DIES FROM ELECTRIC BATH OF OWN DEVISING.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 3.—Conrad Sperka, a young electrician, died suddenly last night in an electric bath of his own devising. He had arranged that the water in his bathtub could be charged with electricity. Last night he was found unconscious in the tub and soon died.

The Coroner investigated to-day. It seems that Sperka turned into the bath a heavier current that he was accustomed to, and the shock killed him. He came from Germany three months ago.

CUMBERLAND BRANCH WINS IMPORTANT SUIT.

Supreme Court of Tennessee Holds That Presbyterian Merger Is Not Effective.

Nashville, Tenn., April 3.—The Cumberland Presbyterian Church in Tennessee this afternoon won the noted church case with which the Tennessee Supreme Court has been wrestling for two years.

The Supreme Court, in an opinion of ninety-one pages, delivered by Justice M. M. Neil, holds that the steps sought to be taken by a portion of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in uniting with the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., were not effective.

It was held that Cumberland Church still exists and that its members still retain its creed, doctrines, etc. It was held that the unionists had allied themselves with another different church and doctrines.

The Cumberlands are given the church property and the unionists are adjudged not to have a right or title to it. Their bill, in which they sued to recover the church's property in Fayetteville, Tenn., is dismissed with costs.

REORGANIZATION SALE OF HOME TELEPHONE.

Clarksville, Tenn., April 3.—The property and franchise of the Clarksville Home Telephone Company was sold at noon by order of the United States Court to State Senator Dancey Fort, trustee for the bondholders for $44,650. The bidding opened at $30,000, the other bidder being Charles A. Ritter, a representative of Chicago capitalists. The company controls independent lines in Montgomery, Houston and Stewart counties. It will be reorganized and the business continued.

EXPELLED FROM CHURCH: ISCH GETS DAMAGES.

Peoria, Ill., April 3.—Rudolph Isch this morning received a $1,000 verdict in the Amish conspiracy trial, the jury holding defendants, Rudolph Witzig, of Gridley, and Michael Mangold, of Roanoke, guilty and finding J. W. Schmidt, of Eureka, not guilty. Isch sued for $50,000 for loss of business through the ban placed upon him when he was expelled from the Amish church some twenty-five years ago.

GOING HIGHER.

MAY WHEAT REACHES $1.22 1-4 CENTS AT CHICAGO.

Beats Record Price of Great Gates Deal of 1905 By Nearly One Cent.

Chicago, April 3.—Wheat for May delivery overtopped the high point reached during the celebrated Gates deal in 1905 when it sold on the Board of Trade to-day at $1.22¼ per bushel, only twice during the last twenty years has wheat sold at a higher figure on the local exchange.

In October, 1888, the price reached $1.23½ and again in May, 1898, during the Lester campaign, a mark of $1.85 was established. The present high level is due largely to an exceedingly urgent demand for the cash grain.

Higher In New York.

New York, April 3.—The May wheat contract in New York touched $1.24⅝ this morning and July $1.15⅞, both new high records. There was heavy covering of shorts due to the strong cash situation, higher cables and the suspension of a Chicago grain house reported to have been heavily short on May wheat.

Nine Saloons Closed.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 3.—An order from the Supreme Court of Virginia declaring the local option election held here last May valid was received today. Nine liquor dealers closed their doors at 11 o'clock this morning. This is the first time Fredericksburg has been "dry" in its history.

FRED WILSON, SR., GETS LIFE TERM IN PRISON.

Madison, Ind., April 3.—The jury in the case of Fred Wilson, Sr., for the murder of William A. Bower at Bethlehem, July 27, 1908, after an hour's deliberation to-day, returned a verdict of guilty in the first degree and fixing punishment at life imprisonment. He will be taken to the prison at Michigan City, Monday.

Surveys For New Railroad.

Barbourville, Ky., April 3.—Surveys are now well under way for the Cumberland and Northern railroad, projected to extend from this section to Beattyville, Lee county, opening the coal fields of Clay and Owsley counties. There is every indication that this line will be constructed at an early date. The total distance is seventy-five miles.

Dead Man Identified.

Bloomington, Ind., April 3.—The stranger found with decapitated body on the railroad tracks here Wednesday, was identified to-day as W. H. Robertson, of Ensley, Ala. The man had delirium tremens and was traced here. It is now thought he killed himself.

The Great Family Constipation Cure

What do you do when constipated? If the head of a family, what do you advise others to do in such an emergency? These questions are important. Constipation is a very serious disorder, because it gives rise to troubles like skin disease, rheumatism, etc. Also, the responsibility of directing the physical welfare of a family is a grave one, and it is important that you should know what to do in the little emergencies of life. Perhaps you have tried purgatives and cathartics and aperient waters and know by this time that they are too violent in their action for the average person, and that, at best, they do but temporary good. You will never get permanent results from anything but a liquid laxative tonic. A mere liquid laxative will not do it, but a laxative and tonic combined, like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, not only cures the constipation in a gradual, gentle way, but builds up and strengthens the stomach muscles so that they can again do their own work. It is a truly wonderful laxative tonic, pure, as attested to the Government, and so sure in permanent results as to win the friendship of thousands of American families, to whom it is the family and home laxative. It will safeguard your health and your family's health. Children like it because of its pleasant taste, and it is equally suited to all ages. You can obtain a bottle for 50 cents or $1 of any druggist, and with it you can cure constipation, liver trouble, indigestion and dyspepsia, sour stomach, heartburn, biliousness and other symptoms of stomach, liver and bowel trouble.

Dr. W. B. Caldwell. Look for this picture on the package.

Medical Advice.

If there is anything about your ailment that you don't understand, or if you want any medical advice, write to the Doctor, and he will answer you fully. There is no charge for this service. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 507 Caldwell Building, Monticello, Ill.

They Were Cured by Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

We have been keeping house for five years and are never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. We find nothing to equal it for stomach troubles, and my children like it as well as candy. One night recently my wife was giving a dose to our baby, and Nelda, our little girl, cried for some, too. Her mamma told her she didn't need it, and then she said, "Can't I lick the spoon?" It is so pleasant to take and the effects are so good that we would not be without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.—Lafe D. Weathers, Mgr. Enterprise Hotel, Indianapolis, Ind.

LAFE D. WEATHERS AND FAMILY.

I had been troubled for some time with a very stubborn case of constipation. At the solicitation of my druggist, Mr. A. B. Hirsch, I finally decided to give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin a trial. I received much benefit from it and continued the treatment until I am entirely cured.—Elmer McMillan, Speed, Mo.

Received your letter, also your sample and booklet, some time ago. I thought I would give the medicine a good trial before saying much about it. I took a sample, and bought a large bottle and am taking it. I have not been constipated since and am feeling fine. I have recommended it to several others. Mother was here a few weeks ago and I gave her a dose and she said she would get a bottle, as it is so mild and easy. She is also bothered with constipation. I recommend it very highly.—Mrs. P. Marx, Peoria, Ill.

Send for Free Trial Bottle.

Readers of this paper who have never yet used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can have a free test bottle sent to their home by forwarding their address to the Doctor. A postal card will do. It puts you under no obligation. It is done to prove to the world his confidence in its merits. In this way, by actual, personal demonstration, thousands have been brought to use it. It is regularly in thousands of American homes. It is The Nation's Safeguard to Health, and the one reliable and agreeable cure for constipation, dyspepsia and indigestion, torpid liver, sick headache, biliousness and similar stomach, liver and bowel disorders. It agrees well with children; they like its taste. The purity of its ingredients is vouched for to the Government. If suffering with any of these ailments send your name to-day for a free trial bottle and you will see how easy it is to be cured when the right means are employed. The address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 507 Caldwell Bldg., Monticello, Ill.

The marriage will take place in the fall.

LITTLE ACTIVITY

Expected In the Social Realm Until After the Closing of the Lenten Season—Many Busy Planning Trips To Europe.

ONLY one more week and the Lenten season will come to a close. Easter Sunday—then Miss Society will shake off the gray monotony of duty and once more be her worldly self. If Easter dawns bright and clear the season will be ushered in with one grand whirl of fashion. The past week has been a very dull one in the social realm, and little else is expected for this week. The time will be devoted mostly to the final completion of Milady's wardrobe, and many Louisvillians are busy planning summer trips to Europe.

Among those planning summer trips are Mr. and Mrs. Claude Barnes and daughters, Misses Alice and Jeanette Barnes, who will leave early in June for Europe. Miss Nettie May Hewitt will sail on April 10 from Hoboken, N. J., and will take the Mediterranean trip. She will be accompanied by her friend, Miss Innis, of New York. They will be absent three months. Mr. Llewellyn Smith and his sister, Miss Ada Smith, of San Diego, Cal., sail from San Francisco on April 16 for Honolulu and the Far East. After a six weeks' visit to Japan and Korea they will continue their trip around the world via the Trans-Siberian railroad, visiting Vladivostock, Moscow, St. Petersburg and Berlin, returning to New York on the Amerika in the early fall.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

MRS. HENRY ALLEN TROXLER will give a miscellaneous shower next Tuesday week, April 13, in honor of Miss Sally Wickliffe Cooke, whose marriage to Mr. Charles Walker Hancock will take place on April 17.

Mrs. Minnie Kaufman Michaels has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss May Michaels, to Mr. Alvin A. Silverman, of Pittsburg, formerly of Louisville. At home on Sunday.

The John Marshall Chapter had a regular monthly meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of its regent, Mrs. David B. Sperry. A splendid paper was read on Vincennes, Indiana, by Mrs. John L. Woodbury.

Mrs. James B. Camp presented the chapter with a rare old book for the chapter library. The book was formerly the property of her father, the late Judge William D. Hoke.

PRETTY SCHOOLGIRLS

May Repeat "Pygmalion and Galatea" In Which They All Did So Well.

EVERYONE was so perfectly sweet and alluring in the cast of "Pygmalion and Galatea," which was played recently by nine of the brightest and prettiest girls at the Girls' High School, that their friends are clamoring to have the play repeated. The name parts were taken by Miss Alice Marshall, as Pygmalion, and Miss Heloise Bullitt as Galatea. Miss Marshall played the young lover sculptor with much fervor, using a magnificent voice with splendid effect. Miss Bullitt made a pretty statue and in the awakening did a bit of acting that might have been a credit to an actress of more experience.

Miss Hall Warren, as Chrysos, the wealthy merchant, had a unique character and played it with much spirit. Miss Emily Smith, as Luciffe, made a gallant young soldier, while Miss Marguerite Smith, as Ogesimos, and Miss Alice Cunningham, as Minos, the two slaves, were also very good.

Miss Elizabeth Grant did excellent work as Cynisco, as did Miss Emma Lee Kremer, as Myrine. Miss Mildred Telford was cast for the part of Daphne, the shrewish wife of Chrysos, and the verdict of those who saw her was that "she was just grand."

PRETTY WEDDING

In Mississippi With Former Louisville Girl As the Bride.

BELOW is an account of the marriage of Miss Eugenia Dixon to Mr. William G. Hardee, as told in a special dispatch from Beulah, Miss. Miss Dixon is a granddaughter of Mrs. A. J. Cassity, of Louisville. The account of the wedding is as follows:

In the plantation home of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Dorsett, sister and brother of the bride, was solemnized the marriage of Miss Eugenia, daughter of Mrs. Jennie C. and the late B. N. Dixon, of Meridian, Miss., to the Hon. William G. Hardee, of Chester, S. C., but more recently a member of the law firm of Jones & Hardee, of Cleveland, Miss.

Much interest has centered around this event, owing to the prominence in the social world of the contracting parties. The bride possesses those rare traits of character and lovely personality that fascinate all who come within the radius of her charmed circle. She is the granddaughter of the late Maj. Andrew J. Cassity, so honored and well known in this and other sections of the State, and whose hospitality so lavishly dispensed on beautiful Melrose will not soon be forgotten by those who passed this way.

Miss Eugenia, being a product of the I. I. and C., is admirably equipped for life's important duties, and as in her young ladyhood she has shone as "a bright, particular star," so as the wife of her distinguished husband she is amply fitted to preside over his home with a grace and dignity that are hers by right of inheritance and education.

Just preceding the ceremony was rendered "The Rosary" and "Angel's Serenade," after which the pretty young sister of the bride, Miss Jennie Dixon, who acted as maid of honor, gowned in Nile green tissue, entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march. The bride, leaning on the strong arm of the one whose name she was now to assume, never appeared lovelier in her going-away gown of Copenhagen blue, carrying a bouquet of white roses. Then the words were solemnly said that made them man and wife by the Rev. Harry Leland Martin, of Hollondale, Miss. Standing near, as silent witnesses, were the mother, Mrs. Jennie Dixon; the bride's five notably handsome sisters, Mrs. E. W. Beadel, Mrs. William L. Dorsett, Mrs. Bayard K. Culpepper, Mrs. Earl D. Rogers and Miss Jennie C. Dixon; Mrs. D. Hope Sadler, sister of the groom, of Chester, S. C.; Mrs. William D. Hurlbutt, a beloved aunt, and quite a gathering of devoted friends. The ladies were, without exception, most handsomely gowned, making the tout ensemble a picture that an artist might love to portray.

Immediately after the ceremony the guests were invited by Mr. and Mrs. Dorsett into the dining-room, which had been transformed into a bower of beauty, and were served a wedding breakfast, whose "viands of various kinds lured the taste of choicest sort au savour." Pink was the color scheme, and the table was conspicuously elegant in cut glass, silver and all the accessories that combine to make a perfect whole.

Elegant and numerous presents were speaking testimonials of the high esteem in which the bride and groom are held.

Amid the tender good-byes, loving good wishes and showers of rice, Mr. and Mrs. Hardee left on their bridal tour, after which they will be at home under their own "vine and fig tree" at Cleveland, Miss.

Try This Formula for Dandruff and Falling Hair.

(From Le Matin, Paris, France.)

In response to request from our correspondent, Mme. Gracone, I reprint formula that appeared in issue of January 15 for falling hair and dandruff. The ingredients in this formula may be found in the drug stores of France, Germany, England and United States, and the preparation is to my belief the most satisfactory and dependable one for the above troubles; also for giving the hair vitality, health and a luxuriant growth.

One ounce beta quinol (liquid), half pint alcohol, half pint bay rum or warm water; mix well and apply daily. Get the ingredients and mix them yourself at home. If your druggist hasn't them he can easily get them for you.

SUPERFLUOUS HAIR

A Discovery Constantly Used By Physicians and Surgeons.

There are many treatments advertised in the newspapers for the removal of superfluous hair, but there is little offered by the manufacturers of these preparations in the way of substantial evidence of their worth. This is not the case with the well-known method, DeMiracle.

Dr. Fowler, who has made a thorough study of superfluous hair growths, speaking of a case in which he used De Miracle, says: "I applied De Miracle, and in a few minutes I had her lip devoid of hair without any pain whatever. I instructed her to call again in two weeks, which she did. I found about one-fourth of the hair roots were not killed by the first application, so I made a second application. I saw her again in about a months and found her lip as clear of hair as an infant's. I can heartily recommend De Miracle for all the uses for which the manufacturers recommend it."

If De Miracle were not the only non-poisonous and the best preparation in the world for the removal of superfluous hair, we could not get the indorsement of so many prominent physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and magazines.

Better take a doctor's advice, don't be deceived by startling statements made by the fake free advertisers. Remember, after you have used worthless concoctions it will be harder to remove the hair. Therefore isn't it better to first investigate all hair removers before you try any of them?

We will send you absolutely free in plain sealed envelope a 54-page booklet, containing full information concerning this remarkable treatment, as well as testimonials of prominent physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and the principal magazines. You should read this booklet before you try anything. It treats the subject exhaustively. Write to the DE MIRACLE CHEMICAL CO., Desk 63, 1305 Park avenue, New York, simply saying you want this booklet, and it will be mailed sealed at once.

Rough Day Laborers In Summer; Makers of Fine Lace In Winter

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

BRUSSELS, March 17.—Six months ago 40,000 rough-handed harvesters from the fields of France returned for the winter to their homes in Flanders to undergo a metamorphosis almost as striking as the change of an ugly caterpillar into a gorgeous butterfly.

These laborers, to whom no tidy housewife would intrust so much as a butter dish lest it should be clumsily dropped and broken, spend their winters in making Brussels lace. Their coarse, hard hands weave patterns almost as delicate as cobwebs, and furthermore, many of the men can lay claim to being artists of high rank, making their own designs with taste that would be noteworthy in graduates of art schools. Their delicate tasks completed, this army of lace-making laborers are now preparing to go back to the fields.

Wages in the agricultural districts of Flanders are so small, and families so large, that in summer the women are forced to do the field work at home, while the men go forth in thousands to earn higher pay as harvesters in France, or brickmakers in Brussels. Love of their native villages draws them back in the autumn, but about these villages there is no work to be had in the winter time. It is then the men turn to lace making, a trade they have learned from their mothers, and at the village schools.

* * *

Pillow Lace Their Specialty.

The lace most made by these Flemish workers is pillow lace, made with bobbins. To an observer unskilled in the craft, the making of pillow lace seems complicated beyond comprehension, but its complication is more apparent than real. The simplest forms of bobbin work can be taught to a child in a few lessons. It is true, years of patient labor are necessary to make one a master of the craft, but in its increasing difficulty there lies half the charm of lace making, for an artistic people. The learner of lace work, who would be a master, at each advance gains knowledge which reveals unthought realms of beauty, and in the end he finds himself no mere mechanic, but an artist who, knowingly, creates things beautiful, and loves his labor with an artist's love.

If it were not that the lace-worker is always anonymous, the fame of the skilled men workers of Belgium would be farspread. The men's work is said to be better than that of women in the simpler kinds of lace. It equals woman's work in the most difficult kinds. In the Jesuits' church at Lierre there is a magnificent altar cloth of lace, made by an inhabitant of Lierre, and offered by him to the church. The donor's wife, when dying, asked him to work a piece of lace for the church, and he, that her wish might be most worthily fulfilled, spent fifteen years in manufacturing his offering. This lace was exhibited at Brussels, where it gained a first prize, and was valued at 15,000 francs ($3,000).

There are many men in Flanders who make the finest lace, but they are generally men of easy circumstances, who do not sell their work. Those who work for gain make lace which is quickly completed, low-priced, and easily sold. Most of the workers are content to make narrow lace such as torchon, for which there is an unlimited demand in Belgium, where the women of the middle and working classes delight in the luxury of lace trimmings.

The children of the Flemish laborders are taught lace-making by the nuns in the village schools, in hours which otherwise would be given up to play, in order that while they are still at school they may earn something. After a few weeks' instruction, the school children make lace of a quality sufficiently good for sale, and the nuns sell it for them to the agents of the great shops, who travel through the lace-making district.

The lacemakers congregate most densely about Bruges, but they are found in every part of Flanders. In Zeevecote, a tiny village near the Belgian frontier, ten or eleven miles from Ostend, there is a primary school, taught by nuns, in which a class of twenty-two boys are taught lacemaking. The boys in this class, whose ages vary from 8 to 15 years, make lace for three hours a day, and each of them already earns by his lace work from 25 to 30 francs ($5 to $6) a month. When these boys leave school, if they give their whole time to lacemaking, and make only the simplest kinds of lace, they can earn about 30 cents a day; a miserable wage, it may appear, but one not far below the average pay of a laboring man in Flanders, which, according to the official returns, is 34 cents a day, without food.

It is to such men as my friend, the cantonnier, or roadmender of Zeevecote—who, as he strolls along the roads on his official rounds, stores in his mind the designs and traceries he discovers in hedgerows and trees, to reproduce them later in his work—that Flemish lace owed its early popularity. The Flemish workers, from the start, avoided slavish reproduction of the Gothic designs of Italian point. They borrowed largely from the flora of their own country, and produced designs of surpassing beauty. Their tradition has been handed down unbroken, and the best lace made to-day is as beautiful as that of centuries ago, when lacemaking was in its most glorious period.

The wife of the Zeevecote roadmender works with him. The lace he generally makes is Bruges lace, a showy lace, quickly made and easily sold, because of its low price. This man also makes Bruges Duchesse lace, a lace which closely resembles the finer and more costly Brussels Duchesse lace, as which it is most probably offered for sale in the many shops.

The earnings of the lacemakers are never large. There are too many intermediaries between them and the ultimate purchasers of their work. The Zeevecote roadmender was glad to receive $100 in payment for a lace gown on the making of which he spent many months. This gown was sold by the agent who bought it from the roadmender, to a Brussels shop, and the Brussels shop sold it, at a great profit, to Princess Albert, of Belgium, wife of the heir to the Belgian throne.

Intermediaries have always reaped the profits of the lace trade. For centuries after its invention, at the end of the Crusades, immense sums were paid for lace work, but from the day it was first made, down to the present time no record shows a lacemaker enriched by his work.

The district of Alost, on the frontier of Flanders farthest from Zeevecote, half an hour's journey from Brussels, is the home of thousands of Brussels laborers, most of whom are brickmakers in summer and lacemakers in winter. In summer guise, these brickmakers of Brussels look a curious race. They stalk into the suburban cafes, near the brick fields, almost entirely naked, save for a generous coating of rich yellow clay. They are mostly small men and their nudity makes them seem like gnomes near the well-dressed citizens whom they pass. During the summer months they live in the brick fields, in a manner little more complex than that of apes in a primeval forest. A few planks, knocked together any way, form their habitations and their cookery is of the rudest kind. They live much on horse flesh, which the butchers sell, and their utensils are borrowed from the neighbors round about.

In September the work in the brick fields ceases, and those who have worked in them return to their native villages, transformed men.

They are no longer naked savages shaping coarse clay with their rough hands; they are artists, masters of a dainty craft, careful of their persons, neat in their dress and proud of the order in their well-regulated homes.

* * *

No Loafers Or Gossips.

Ceaseless activity is all that remains to remind observers of their summer habits. In winter, as in summer, they arise at 4 o'clock in the morning, and are at work by 4:30 or 5. There is no work out of doors for them in the dark winter days, and there is no source of distraction in their villages for these men of sober race. They are neither gamblers nor gossips.

The village ale-houses are cheery places, clean and warm, furnished with comfortable chairs and tables. Customers may make themselves at home in them for as many hours as they wish to linger, by the expenditure of less than a cent on a "drop" of gin, or of a cent on a glass of beer, but it is only on Sundays the workmen frequent them. They prefer to stay at home and make lace, the delightful and easy trade the nuns taught them in the village schools.

These Flemish men work at lace for the joy of working. Theirs is an unbroken tradition from the middle ages. They are independent; they need no more. Yet, like kings and conquerors, they shine in public, on fit occasion, in all the glories of rich brocade and cloth of gold, with trumpets sounding and arms flashing. It is when their villages celebrate the feasts of their patron saints, with ancient pageantry, that the occasions come. The small sums earned by lace-making are turned to account bravely at such times. The winter's savings are also drawn on when the yearly fair comes round, another relic of distant centuries. During the fair all work is laid aside and joy is sought in dancing saloons, on merry-go-rounds, and in the sideshows, where quacks and marvels are to be seen.

The filmy threads of lace seem to bind the worker to his home. Few of the lacemakers wander to lands so distant that they cannot return home when winter comes. During the winter months you will find the kitchen in nearly every village house in Flanders crowded by a family, men and women, grandparents, parents and children, all occupied in lace work. Many of these people send their sons from the primary schools to special lace schools. In one of these, the lace school at Ingleminster, there are a hundred boy pupils.

Thousands of Men At Work.

It is impossible to form an exact estimate of the amount or the value of the lace made by men in Belgium annually, or of the number of men occupied in its manufacture. Official statistics are unreliable as far as lacemakers are concerned. Flemish laborers make no boast of the fact that they manufacture lace, and when the official collector of statistics approaches them they describe themselves as anything rather than lacemakers. There are not more than a few hundred men in the country who allow themselves to be registered as giving their whole time to lace-making. Besides these there are hundreds of thousands of laborers, probably the majority of the million agricultural laborers in the country, who know how to make lace, and it is certain that the majority of the workmen who can do so actually make lace in the winter time, either regularly throughout the dead season or during the periods when their funds are low and no better paid work is to be had.

The value of the lace made by these tireless workers must be very great. It is admitted that lace to the value of over a million francs is exported annually from Belgium, and it is known that this estimate is far below the truth. The value of the lace made and not exported has never been calculated. Whatever the value of the work of the Flemish lacemakers may be, the total amount of their earnings by it must be infinitesimal in comparison with the total amount paid for the lace by those who wear it.

The contrast between the summer and the winter occupations of these Flemish workers, between their horny hands and the delicate lace work they do, is striking, but it is a contrast in things unessential. Though these men are inarticulate they have the souls of artists and weave dreams into the meshes of their lace.

Frogs, Toads and Snakes Prove Good Subjects For the Camera

FROG IN GRASS, MADE ALMOST INVISIBLLE BY PROTECTIVE COLORATION.

HOW the ages have clung to belief in the strange powers and potent spells of snake, toad and newt. To-day we do not brew odd medicines of them, but a great majority of us have a vague horror and aversion to them. Perhaps it is something out of our misty past, something that has come to us like our fear of the dark and our strange way of building strong-walled homes with small windows, as our pugnacious ancestors did, as a means of defense.

It may be that here and there the medicinal idea still lingers, for once, while passing a big barn in the Bluegrass region my nostrils were assailed by a very unusual odor. I saw old grizzled Uncle Eph busy rubbing the leg of a lame mule, and the harder he rubbed the more pronounced the odor became. My curiosity made me question him and he explained by saying:

* * *

Mock-Snake Oil.

"I reckon dis here's de stuff you is a-smellin," and he held up an old battered tin can for my inspection, but I kept at a respectful distance. "Yes, suh, I'm putty sho' hit is, kaze hits 'bout de best stuff fur to limber up a stove-up hawse er mule you ever seed. I 'spect you done heard of snake oil, like de circus folks use to make deyselves limber. Well, when dey ain't any snakes 'roun' fur to mek dat oil wid, you dee' git a whole lot of fishin' wurms an' put 'em in u tin can an' put hit out in de sun ontwil dey kinder turns to oil, an' dar you is."

And Uncle Eph shook the vile-smelling concoction and continued rubbing the old mule's leg, absolutely certain he had a sovereign remedy.

With all of our repugnance toward what we call "creepy things" there must be a feeling that they are wonderfully and beautifully adapted to their mode of life, and they certainly give splendid results to the man with a camera. Most of them are sluggish, heavy livers and can be persuaded to pose rather easily, at least such has been my experience. Of course, one has to overcome in a measure the repugnance that is so common, and probably the best and only way is to touch some snakes—little ones.

Almost everyone has a conviction that all snakes and "creepy things" are very cold and clammy, but it is far from the real truth. All reptiles are the same temperature as their surroundings, and that is the explanation of snakes "sunning" themselves on rocks and logs.

* * *

Silky To the Touch.

The body of a snake is not at all moist or clammy, but dry, smooth and rather silky to the touch. A snake on a cool morning is cool, but on being held in the hand for fifteen minutes will have the temperature of the hand.

I have drifted far off from the photography of snakes that I might do something toward breaking down the awful prejudice which exists against our reptiles. I may say in conclusion that practically all of our snakes here in the central States are absolutely harmless and some of the smaller ones are so timid they cannot be persuaded to strike.

In the first installment of this series I spoke of the value of making a perfect record of some fact observed in nature. I can emphasize it now in some photos of a small gartersnake. One of my boys had picked the little fellow up and we were discussing his mode of walking or crawling or whatever one may choose to call it, and something was said about snakes climbing into trees and bushes. We had often seen a snake moving about from branch to branch in small trees, but the question was, could a small snake climb into a rather large tree? It was suggested that this small snake be placed against the side of a huge elm tree and have his tail pinched to make him hurry. It was tried and proved a great success for the snake carefully braced himself by bending his body to fill up the cracks between the rough bark. He climbed slowly but easily.

When he reached a point where the bark was comparatively smooth and there was some danger of falling, he paused. This was the chance I had been waiting for and I was glad I had a focusing camera and not a kodak for "a snap." With no direct sunlight to bother me with heavy shadows and contrasts, it was a simple matter to push up within three feet and get a beautiful picture showing his posture perfectly and every scale and marking on his graceful body.

If a toad or a beautiful leopard frog is so lively he will not sit still, it is possible to walk after him and keep him going until he is willing and anxious to remain in position. I have sometimes even caught one that I needed and handled him for a few days to teach him a few things. The one whose picture accompanies this article was kept in this way and as he happened to be a very vigorous jumper it took considerable patience to get him to be a good subject.

I have frequently placed a small piece of newspaper on the exact spot I intended to pose my subject, gotten my camera focused, put my subject in place when I was ready and snapped. At times one may be able to corner a lizard or snake by forcing it to the end of a twig or the top of a stump. The small picture of a little "blue-swift" was gotten in this manner.

A SPREADING VIPER.

The leopard frog in the rank grass shows how beautifully Nature has colored him to make him melt into his surroundings. Our common little tree toad, the one who is constantly heard and rarely seen, is another specimen of Nature's protective coloration. I was fortunate enough to find one of these little gray fellows on an oak twig and tok his picture as he sat crouched close up against it, certain that his gray, brown and greenish-black mottled coat would make him invisible. When touched he would make surprisingly long leaps and cling to a leaf, even if caught only by one hind foot. I put him in a tumbler and he easily climbed its slippery side. In looking through the glass at his feet it was plainly to be seen how he clung, for on the end of each long toe was a little round disk that could be pushed close. The air being excluded it would hold snug. The tumbler was placed upon a white cloth and in twenty minutes our little gray-green toad was almost the color of dirty putty. One of the boys wanted to have a real good look at him, so he turned over the glass and put his face close down. The toad glanced up and seeing a chance of escape above him leaped suddenly. Billy yelled, but was caught and held while I got his photo, with the toad still clinging to his nose.

A TREE TOAD.

TREE TOAD ON BILLY'S NOSE.

VALUE OF PICTURES INCREASED BY THEFT.

THE value of the two famous oil paintings — Arnold Bocklin's "Fishing Satyrs" and a cattle picture by Troyon—which were stolen from Baron Leopold von Lieben in 1905 and have just been restored to their rightful owner, has greatly increased after their strange adventure. The Baron paid something like £1,500 ($3,600) for them. Now they are worth at least £2,500, and it is very doubtful whether he would sell them for twice that amount, says London Tid-Bits.

Probably few masterpieces that have fetched huge sums would have attained anything like their present value but for the fact of the romantic adventures connected with most of them. Take, for instance, Murillo's painting of the "Appearance of the Christ Child," which hangs in the baptistery chapel of Seville Cathedral. The famous canvas, although carefully guarded, was missed one morning. It had been cut out of its frame. So prized was the work that the Government sent copies all over Europe in the hope of tracing it. Some years elapsed before it was found at Cadiz. In the meantime the value of the painting increased so rapidly that the authorities refused an offer of £42,000 for it.

It is a well-known fact that but for their vicissitudes the paintings of Gainsborough would never have been so valuable. The bidding for the stolen "Duchess of Devonshire" was so excited that it was finally knocked down to a dealer for £13,100. But Gainsborough's painting of Mrs. Robinson was valued at £15,000 when it was restored to its owner after a romantic adventure.

Another great picture with a curious history is Holbein's "Field of the Cloth of Gold," which now hangs in Hampton Court Palace. It was offered for sale by Cromwell, but when the would-be purchaser came to view the work he discovered to his amazement that the head of Henry VIII. had been cut completely out of the canvas. Of course the sale was stopped. Some years later the Earl of Essex confessed to the theft. The picture still hangs in the historic palace, clearly showing the mark of the knife.

A similar mutilation is to be found among the art treasures of Lord Crewe. Many years ago one of his ancestors had a picture painted of his son and daughter. In later years the son quarrelled with his father, and, by way of revenge, cut his sister's portrait out of the canvas. It was not till a century later that the missing portion was restored by a dealer.

Oldest Stone House In State Still Occupied.

WHAT is claimed to be the oldest stone house in Kentucky is located about two miles from Paris, "Mt. Lebanon," as it is known, was erected in 1785, of gray limestone, which was found in the vicinity, and is estimated now to have cost something like $20,000.

It was built by Thomas Metcalfe, familiarly known as "Old Stone Hammer," for Gen. James Garrard, second Governor of Kentucky. Mr. Metcalfe afterward himself became Chief Executive of the State.

Aside from its age "Mt. Lebanon" has other claims to distinction, one being that in it the first session of the Bourbon County Court was held Tuesday, May 16, 1786.

The first book of the court, which shows a record of the proceedings, is still in existence in the County Clerk's office at Paris. The records show that John Edwards was then appointed County Clerk; Benjamin Harrison (for whom Harrison county was afterward named), Sheriff, and James Garrard, who at that time was a Justice of the Peace, was appointed County Surveyor. The Governor of the colony of Virginia, of which Kentucky was then a part, afterward confirmed the appointments. Here, also, was admitted for the practice of law, as the first attorney of the county, John Allen. At that time the clerk was John Edwards, who later became the first United States Senator from Kentucky.

Gov. Garrard was born in Stafford county, Virginia, January 14, 1749. He served as Colonel in the State militia of his native county during the Revolutionary War, and was also elected to the Virginia Legislature. In 1783 he moved to Bourbon county, Kentucky, and two years later he erected "Mt. Lebanon." He was quite prominent in the affairs of the county for many years, serving several terms as a Representative in the Legislature. In 1790 he was one of the committee that was appointed to lay off the town of Paris, which was at that time known as "Hopewell." At his suggestion the name was afterward changed to Paris. He served two terms as Governor of the State, being elected in 1796 and 1806.

He died at "Mt. Lebanon" on January 19, 1822, in his 74th year. His remains rest under a marble box tomb in a burial plot near the rear of the house. Here also were interred the remains of his wife and daughter. The State of Kentucky erected a monument at his grave.

Some years ago an effort was made to have Gov. Garrard's remains removed to the cemetery at Frankfort, but owing to considerable opposition on the part of his relatives this plan was abandoned.

The photo shown herewith is an exact reproduction of the original Mt. Lebanon, with the exception of the gable and portico, which have been added in more recent years. The walls are eighteen inches thick, and the stone blocks are regular in size, six inches in thickness by 10x22 inches in breadth and length. The stones were all carved by hand, and to-day, after an existence of nearly 130 years, the structure remains intact.

Gov. Garrard's direct descendants have continued to occupy the house as a residence up to the present time. The interior is finished in hardwood, and is noticeable on account of its elegance. At the period in which this structure was erected, it was considered the finest residence in the State, and to-day is looked upon as a structure of more than ordinary attractiveness.

George Washington, Jr., the grandnephew of George Washington, was married to Gabriella Hawkins, the granddaughter of Gov. Garrard, in this house. The present owners of the structure are the great-grandsons of Gov. Garrard, and the estate has been converted into a well-known stock farm.

WARFIELD WEBB.

"MT. LEBANON" AS IT IS TO-DAY.

KANSAS CITY HAS CACTUS CONSERVATORY.

ENOUGH time has elapsed since the cactus craze of 1830 for nearly everyone but the historians to have forgotten that the prickly "vegetable camels" ever were as popular as orchids or tulips. So a cactus conservatory, such as John L. Heckel has in the rear of his home is considered unique nowdays, says the Kansas City Star. Luther Burbank has been cultivating a spineless cactus as food for cattle; and the Government appears from recent dispatches to be about to lease San Clemente Island, off of Los Angeles, for twenty-five years to a company which purposes to grow this new product on a large scale. But only a few enthusiasts use the cactus for an ornamental plant or watch it to see the few flowers that bloom on most of the varieties once a year.

Mr. Heckel says, however, that the public is to be pitied for not knowing any better. He is raising about twenty-five varieties—more than 100 plants in all—in his cactus conservatory. He likes them so well that he has waited in patience nine years for one spiny plant to bloom—and still waits. He declares that most of the fascination about his pets is that no one knows when they may decide to bloom. Cactus plants have been his hobby for ten years.

The conservatory is not more than ten feet square and is so full of spines that one scarcely can look in without wishing he had a coat of mail before entering. Most of the plants are twice or three times as large as the pots in which they are growing. The reason for this is that the rule book says that "when grown in pots these plants require sandy soil and most perfect drainage; broad, shallow pots are the best; and if those of an ordinary pattern are used, they should be as small as the plants will admit."

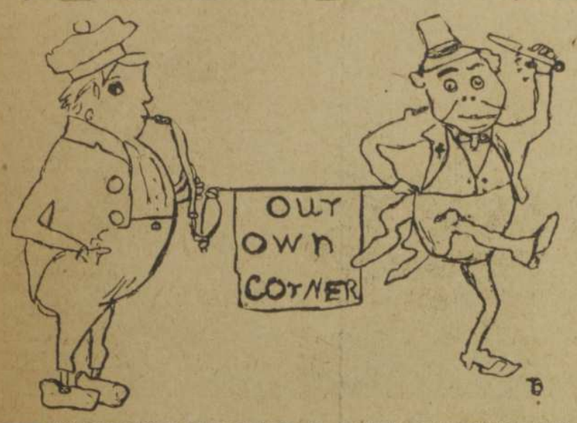

The variety of the forms in which are growing the cacti Mr. Heckel has is so wide it is startling. There are thick, prickly globes two feet in diameter growing beside thin plants that look like rat tails; straight, tall Corinthian pillars standing beside snake cacti which are as gnarled as hawthorne trees; little burrs that could be covered with a thimble and vigorous stalks that in the desert would grow to be seventy feet in height and two feet in thickness. The shapes in many instances are so symmetrical that they remind the spectator of fancy mechanical drawings. There are even some rectangular stems. By grafting the globes may be made to grow on the tops of pillars, and other strange combinations formed that have all the symmetry of lathe work and carvings in wood.

Mr. Heckel once took a bloom of the star cactus—which is a star of yellow with black dots, another star in its center—to Clinton B. Sloan, an architect. Mr. Sloan measured it with delicate measuring instruments and found that the star was mathematically perfect in symmetry.

The beauty of the blooms of the cactus plants was what first attracted Mr. Heckel's attention to his hobby. He has never seen them growing in the desert lands, so his heart interest isn't sentimental. The blooms include some of the most delicate and some of the most gorgeous flowers known to botany. White, crimson, yellow and green appear, sometimes in striking contrasts. The plants themselves often are either grotesque enough or beautiful enough to be raised for their own sakes, whether they flower or not. Mr. Heckel has in the reception hall of his house a screw palm—a palm with sharp saw teeth edges—that droops its bright green swordlike leaves in curves like water from a fountain. They are more than four feet from stalk to tip. A rare specimen called the Old Man cactus has in place of bristles long white hairs. The night-blooming cereus finds a place in the conservatory as one of the nobility among the cacti.

"Nearly all of the species," says the rule book for cacti, "are found in exposed situations in a country where not a drop of rain falls for months at a time; hence, in cultivation, they require little care, will endure any amount of ill treatment and will thrive and blossom where other plants starve. The plants themselves are always a bright living green summer and winter, while their individuality is so marked and their manner of growth so curious and unique that no one who has cultivated them can fail to appreciate and admire them."

FAERIE LAND—A FANTASY.

Methought I was wafted to Faerie Land,
Borne aloft on invisible wings,
Through immeasurable space, to that bright, airy land
To which my memory clings.

Away from the world to that bright, starry band,
Or earth called the milky way;
But known to the angels as Faerie Land;
Brighter than brightest day.

There the Faerie Queen upon a golden throne
Listened to sweetest cadence.
Amidst grandest splendor. The brilliance shone
With brightest radiance.

I gazed; the wonder in my eyes,
In silent ecstasy.
I saw beautiful faeries, and lovely Peris
In gorgeous fantasy.

Then the sight grew dim—faded away.
To me it seemed,
And I awoke—'twas bright day,
To find I dreamed.

POSSUMS VS. TEDDIES.

Several Teddy Bears were standing in the window of a fashionable toy store. They were always the center of interest when a group of children stopped to look at the window. The Teddy Bears were very proud.

One day a man reading a paper stopped at the window, and the largest bear, who was standing near, read something which almost made him faint.

"Look, just read that," he said, pointing to a column at the head of which was::

"Bill Possum will soon be here. Teddy Bears going out of style." The Teddies all turned a shade paler when they read this and they all said: "What do you think of that?" so loud that the man reading became frightened and ran away.

The next week they were all taken out of the window, all except one little Teddy, who hid in a corner, and in their place were put—the Possums.

That night the little Teddy crept out of his hiding place and went to the shelf where the other bears were and told them all he knew of the Possums.

"They are the proudest things I have ever seen. They are always talking about how they put us out."

"Well," said the others, "we know they won't take, for girls and boys like us too well. Anyway, we hope it is so."

THREE BOYS IN A BOAT.

Or Mysterious Adventure In the Everglades of Florida.

BY RHAME HARRISON.

We traveled this way for a quarter of a mile or so, I suppose, always keeping one direction, the one in which the dog continued to bay, when abruptly we found ourselves in what seemed to be a clear, open river. It was bold and deep, but narrow, and just across the aspect was high hammock land of exquisite growth, the timber being tall, white-bodied trees of immense proportion, as beautiful as the magnolia in their slick evergreen foliage. It was a strange tree to us then, but we afterward learned that it was the Madeira, or Florida mahogany. That growth was interspersed with palms and ferns.

The dog still barked and we went on in the direction indicated, when we made a sudden curve in the river, and lo! what a picture loomed into view.

Ernest and I each dropped our oars in stupified abasement, for even as we looked the scene before us was transformed into a veritable Garden of Paradise. Hundreds of electric lights burst forth before our entranced vision in all colors of the rainbow, blazing upon myriads of gorgeously colored flowers, and innumerable fountains played and gleamed in the vari-colored lights.

The residence sitting well back in the shrubbery and flowers was not such a palace as one would expect to find accompanying that fairylike garden, but though small, it seemed to be substantially constructed of the beautiful mahogany logs. It would have been too dark to discern anything now, for it was still cloudy but for the artificial light. By this time we had reached the landing, and the dog barked furiously and rushed down to the river bank. Thereupon the form of an old man appeared in the doorway, and the man peered curiously in our direction.

For a few seconds he seemed confused and irresolute as to what course to pursue, but finally he strode rapidly down to the landing.

"We have just happened upon you here very unexpectedly, I assure you," began Ernest, "but we are lost and in dire distress. One of our companions is very ill, and we have no succor to offer him."

"Ah, he seems quite ill—poor boy," said the old gentleman kindly, a little brokenly. He looked like a Spaniard, and bore the evidences of being a gentleman, a cavalier.

"Bring him to the house at once and we'll see what we can do to bring him 'round."

We lost no time in following instructions, and our cavalier, with a remarkably light and agile step for one of his appearing age, led the way through the vine-clad veranda into an entrance hall, and then opened a door leading into a room luxurious as those of the Orientals in its rich hangings and tapestries, rugs, cushions and divans. The house also was brilliantly lighted with electricity.

"Now, first thing, he must be gotten dry and comfortable. I know with the rains we've had your outfit is wet." And he proceeded to get a pair of warm pajamas for us to put on Frank.

"While you change his clothing I will get him a concoction," and the old gentleman tripped lightly out, returning presently with a cut-glass pitcher and goblet containing a fluid as pure and sparkling as champagne.

"Drink, my dear," he commanded, presenting the glass to Frank's parched and fevered lips.

Frank grasped it ravenously, and quaffed the last drop, whereupon he immediately opened his eyes and looked about with the light of reason for the first time in days, but much bewildered at the unexpected surroundings.

"Where am I?" he asked, getting up. He had been too weak to raise his head and Ernest and myself were astonished to see him arise as though nothing had been the matter.

"Do you feel better, Frank?" I asked.

"Better?" he ejaculated. "I never felt better in my life. Why, I'm not sick, am I? But what has happened? I feel good, good! I never did feel so good. Why, I feel as light as air, and my blood fairly tingles with the pleasure of health and joy and strength. What was that I drank? That's what makes me feel so good! What was it?" And he turned to Monsieur for explanation.

Ernest and I were too astounded to comment, for as we watched the glow of health returned to his pallid cheek, and his erstwhile sunken eyes sparkled with more than their accustomed brightness.

"You would think I prevaricated, young man, if I told you that what you drank was the elixer of life from the supposed fabled fountain of immortal youth," replied the old man, smiling.

"No, no, I would not doubt you. I would not. Nothing that makes one feel like that! Nothing would be too good to believe of it," cried Frank, grasping Monsieur's hands in both of his and looking curiously into his eyes.

"And you found it? And how long has it preserved you? Oh, my! my! I've always known it really did exist. The very one that Ponce de Leon searched for!" murmured Frank excitedly.

Monsieur smiled at his enthusiasm, but vouchsafed no further information.

"Well, I believe a draught would help us all. These other boys are tired. Then, after that refreshes them we'll try to get some of the substantials for the inner man."

He poured from the pitcher the sparkling water that beaded like champagne, indeed, and we all drank with the same experience it had produced upon Frank. Never had we felt so thrilled, so exhilarated, so perfectly delicious in our whole existence. The sensation actually defied description.

"Will just a drink of it prolong life?" queried Ernest, the thoughtful.

"I hardly think, but I am convinced that if one continues to drink it life will go on indefinitely," he replied, "though the idea of its preserving perfect youth in looks, you perceive, is overestimated."

With that he led the way to the kitchen.

"My servant, my man Friday is away. I am momentarily expecting him. I thought that you was him when you came up. Do you know that you are the very first persons that have ever found my hermitage, and it puzzled me immensely at first when you succeeded, but I've concluded that it was only owing to the unprecedented amount of rain. You would never in the world have found our entrance, the only one, except in the extreme high water, as in this instance. However, boys, though it's been more years than you would credit, since I've seen or spoken to a human soul except Pedro, I trust I have not forgotten how to be hospitable. Now make yourselves comfortable. Feel and act just as though you were at home. Walk around and do as you please."

Frank, now completely restored to his usual health, proceeded to assist with the preparation of supper, and a veritable banquet it was. The old man's pantry was abundantly supplied. His garden consisted of every known vegetable and his orchard of every variety of fruit that would grow in this clime, as well as his flowers, every variety indigent to this soil.

"That's my life! my recreation! My fruits, my flowers and vegetables, my poultry and my stock. I'll show you my Jersey cows, my hogs and chickens in the morning."

When the bountiful table was spread with its ample supply of cut glass and silverware and its snow white napery, we were as astonished as if we had suddenly been transformed and ushered into Fairyland. Pedro must have excelled in the cullinary art, for the store of home canned fruits, jellies and preserves was superb, but the crowning surprise was when the tea and milk were served; they were iced.

"Now, I'm completely nonplussed," exclaimed Ernest. "I've been surprised beyond measure the entire evening and continually expecting to find myself awakening from a dream; but pray explain, Monsieur, how it is you have ice here?"

"Well," responded Monsieur, quietly, "it is just a hobby for me to want all the luxuries and pleasures I can afford. I love to tinker with machinery and so does Pedro, so we put in a small ice plant as well as an electric plant and manufacture it, just to humor a whim."

"And knowing, too, that you will live on and on here indefinitely. It's not like we poor mortals that know we've got to die just as we get ready to live," remarked Ernest.

"And I suppose, too, you've had several centuries to do all of this fixing up in," said Frank.

"I've been walking in your grove and vineyard, and I'll be dog goned if those trees and grape vines don't look like they're at least 200 years old."

Monsieur only smiled and helped Frank's plate to a liberal supply of fried chicken.

After an excellent night's rest we arose to find a continual round of surprises and new beauties and wonderful things. About noon a commodious motorboat, with seven and one-half-horse power engine, steamed up to the dock, manned by a real Indian, as we thought, in full native array. We were alarmed for a moment until we saw that Monsieur exhibited a placid exterior.

"Ah! there is Pedro returning from Miami," and we sauntered down to the boat. "He is Indian then?" I questioned in astonishment.

"Don't Let Us Fight Without a Flag, Colonel."

By HENRY S. EMORY.

THE name of Sergt. John Jasper has always been mentioned in American history among the brave soldiers of the Revolution; but the grand record of this uneducated youth was not fully known until it was revealed at the centennial celebration of Fort Moultrie by Gen. Kershaw, of Confederate fame.

John Jasper was born on the Black Mingo, or Black River, in South Carolina, and was among the first who enlisted in the celebrated Francis Marion's company when less than 20 years of age, and at once he displayed that daring courage that placed him in the front rank of that little army of Revolutionary braves.

Sir Henry Clinton and Maj. Gen. Cornwallis, with 3,000 British troops, composed the land forces for the attack on the city of Charleston, S. C. Five English men-of-war were anchored within that beautiful bay. Sullivan's island, in the harbor, was the rendezvous of the Colonial troops. Among these was the Second Regiment of South Carolina Infantry, commanded by Col. William Moultrie. Against any further approach of the enemy these men erected a rude fort on the island and named it Fort Sullivan. It was constructed of palmetto wood and sand, which would not to-day resist a single minor shot from a battleship or a cruiser. On the southeast section of this rude fort was planted the flag which has from that day to this been the pride of South Carolina. It was a blue field with a white crescent, on which was emblazoned that strong American word—Liberty!

When the fort was nearly complete and the full force of the English army was known a strong pressure was made upon Col. Moultrie and his men to evacuate their position, they being assured that the whole command would be annihilated. But no words of entreaty or threats could induce officers or men to leave the rude garrison they had so zealously and faithfully erected. Sergt. Jasper was one of the garrison, and when he saw the bright Palmetto flag placed thereon he said he "would defend it with his life."

On June 28, 1776, the British troops and men-of-war opened their batteries on the little fort, and for a moment defeat seemed certain. The quaint old Gen. Horry, in one of his private letters, wrote: "Such a sudden burst of flame and thunder could not but make us feel very queer at first, especially as we were young hands, and had never been engaged in such an awful scene before. But a few rounds brought us all right again and then, with heads bound up and stripped to the buff, we plied our bulldogs like heroes."

All day this engagement continued, and never for one moment did the Colonial troops think of retreat or surrender. It was when the fire was the hottest that an incident occurred which infused fresh energy and courage into the hearts of those American soldiers, and at the same time gave Sergt. Jasper a name that will live as long as American history is read.

The flagstaff was struck by a ball from the enemy, and, after tottering for a moment, fell forward, and the crescent flag seemed lost.

A feeling of despair naturally came over every soldier in the fort, and many believed that it was an evil omen. This feeling, however, was soon dispelled. Sergt. Jasper cried out to Col. Moultrie, "Don't let us fight without a flag, Colonel!" and with consummate bravery he leaped upon the parapet and thence down to the beach amid a perfect storm of shot, andrecovered the flag. Attaching it to a sponge staff, he remounted the wall and deliberately fixed it on the southeast bastion.

Not long after Sergt. McDonald fell mortally wounded. As he was being borne from the platform he exclaimed, "I die, my brave fellows, but do not let the cause of liberty die with me." Sergt. Jasper exclaimed, "Let us avenge this brave man's death." Night closed this gallant defense, and, although the cannonading was continuous and of great severity, the Americans sustained the loss of but eleven men killed and twenty-five wounded.

Two days after the battle, Gov. Rutledge, Gen. Lee and a large company of patriotic friends from Charleston visited the fort and complimented the heroes of the hour. On this occasion the young wife of Maj. Elliott presented to the regiment a pair of colors, one of blue, the other of red silk, beautifully embroidered by the women of Charleston. As she handed them to the Colonel and Lieutenant Colonel she said:

"Your gallant behavior in defense of liberty and your country entitles you to the highest honor. Accept these two standards as a reward justly due to your regiment, and I have not the least doubt, under heaven's protection, you will stand by them as long as they can wave in the air of liberty."

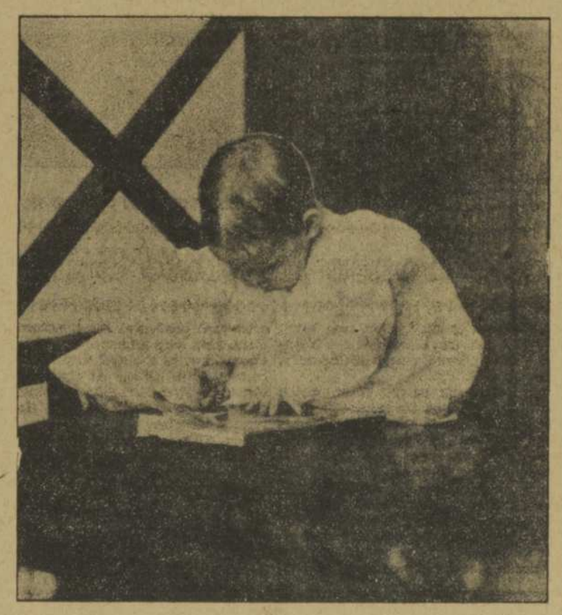

Col. Moultrie replied, saying that, "The Second Regiment would always carry them into action, and that they never would be tarnished by any act of theirs."

Now, see how nobly that promise was kept! On October 9, 1779, at the siege of Savannah, one of those flags was fixed on the British lines by Lieut. Bush, who was immediately shot down. Lieut. Hume attempted to set up the other and was also killed. Lieut. Gray, in supporting them, was mortally wounded. It remained for Sergeant Jasper to accomplish this heroic work, but in doing so he received his death wound. He brought the standard off, however, yet the pair were finally taken by the British troops at the fall of Charleston. Sergeant Jasper sacrificed his life for his flag and country. His last words were: "Tell Mrs. Elliott I lost my life supporting the colors she presented to the regiment."

Thus died one of the bravest men in martial story. He is spoken of as a modest, quiet and obedient soldier, and what better character is wanted in public or private life, in business circles, or in the quiet home? On the occasion of Gov. Rutledge's visit to the fort in Charleston harbor he presented Sergeant Jasper his own sword as a mark of his distinguished respect. He also offered the young soldier a commission, but with many thanks he declined them both, saying that "his lack of education unfitted him for any higher position than the rank and file."

BIRDS ON WING AND FOOT.

Birds are endowed with greater powers of locomotion than are the lower forms of life generally. They can fly and they can walk, and a very large number can swim.

Fishes can only swim, though one does not forget the capacity of the "flying" fish, which, however, does not fly in the sense that birds do; quadrupeds can walk and most of them can swim, but the powers of flight are absolutely confined to birds and insects.

The gift of flight is one of the most wonderful in the world of creation, and this faculty has been bestowed upon birds and insects for a very special reason, which we need not now discuss.

You may have observed that the flight of birds is altogether different from the flight of insects. In the former the wings are of bone and sinew clothed with fine feathers, varying in size and shape.

In the insects the wing is composed of a thin, gauzy material stretched across a slightly-built frame-work, very much in the shape of a fan.

You can see the wings of a bird move or flap when it is flying, but your eyesight will have to be very keen if you observe the movements of the fly's wing, which goes in a particular direction at a high rate of speed.

And yet both bird and insect can lift themselves easily from the ground and take any route they please. This subject bird and insect flying is most interesting. I cannot, however, say more now by way of comparing and explaining these methods of aerial movement.

If you are observant I dare say some of you will have noticed that there are birds that hop and birds that walk when afoot.

The sparrow when about the fields and gardens always hops, and so do the thrush and the blackbird.

The starling runs, and if he gets his eye on a worm that is disappearing in the soil he runs very fast to drag him out.

The wagtails also run, and they can trot around so quickly that they easily take the gnats and other small insects on the wing.

The rooks and daws walk sedately, as do the wild pigeons, but the finches are mostly runners.

Some of the birds very rarely are seen afoot.

I doubt very much whether any of my readers have ever seen a swift on the ground. These beautiful birds, now wintering in tropical countries, have such wing-power that they never seem to want to come down from the clouds to rest. But they do come down, all the same; and I dare say you have seen them visit their nests during the breeding season. If you are near the locality where the house martin or the swallow builds, you may have seen these lovely birds gathering mud with which to construct their nest.

I have watched them frequently, and have noticed, as you may have done, that they walk with difficulty, as if they had lost control of their little feet.

The reason that swifts and swallows walk so indifferently is because they have little use for their feet.

They live entirely upon insects, which they catch in the air.

The bills of the swallow and the night-jar are short and wide, so that they can take the insects easily on the wing.

The cornerake does not fly a great deal during his stay in summer, not because he cannot use his wings, but rather because he is a capital runner.

He has learned to keep low among the growing grass for safety, and when flushed very rarely uses his wings.

That he does fly, and fly well, however, is evident in the fact that he migrates as regularly as other birds one might name.

When limbs are not used, however, they cease to develop, and, in course of time, even disappear altogether.

The apertyx, a New Zealand bird, has no wings, and the penguins, which lives in the polar region, has only short, stumpy wings, which are of very little use for flying.

The birds seen at this season are practically all ground feeders, so that when we see them on the wing they are not in pursuit of food, but removing from one feeding ground to another.—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

HELPING THE DOUBTING.

Bob Fitzsimmons, in the course of one of the lessons in physical culture that he has been giving to the police of Plainview, N. J., paused and said:

"I don't take much stock in feints and tricks. I like best, open, straightforward work, both in boxing and wrestling. With tricks, as a rule, one only gives one's self away. It is like the case of a beggar.

"A beggar, you must know, sat on a cold and windy corner with a sign on his breast, 'Deaf and Dumb.'

"Two men stopped, and one, a kind-hearted chap, stopped, looked at the beggar and said:

"'I'd like to give this man something, but how am I to know that he is deaf and dumb?'

"'Read the sign, sir,' the beggar whispered cautiously."

OLD JACKSON'S MONEY;

Or,

Some Chapters In the Life of a Waif.

CHAPTER IX.

IN JAIL AND OUT AGAIN.

"NOW, my boy," began the stranger who had been admitted to see Tommy Clark in his cell in the county jail, "I want to tell you that Constable Stevens has made a great fool of himself in arresting you, and that I shall have you out of this in a day or two. Don't be afraid of me. I am your friend. I am the State detective at the Auburn State prison, and I am after a prisoner that escaped a few days ago. I believe that prisoner choked old Jackson to death. They told me a lot of things at Glenwood, but I want to hear all about it from your own lips."

Tommy believed in the man from the first and was willing to talk. He told his own history first, and then brought the story down to the night of the murder. When he gave the words the old man had used about having a brother in prison and thinking he was dead, the detective smiled and said:

"Now, we are getting close to it. He did have a brother in our prison, and it was his brother who escaped. I have been on his track ever since the first hour he got away. The man was sent up for life. Go ahead."

Tommy gave him further particulars, as I have given them to you in advance, and when he had finished the officer ceased to write in his note-book and said:

"There isn't a doubt in my mind that the red-whiskered man was Henry Jackson, the man I'm after, but I want to be more than sure. He was in disguise, but you have given a fair description of him. Did you take particular notice of his hands?"

"Of only one hand, sir," replied Tommy. "That was the hand that rested on the back of a chair when he told me to get out. The little finger was gone at the first joint. I was going to tell Constable Stevens so, but he arrested me."

"He's my man for sure! He lost that part of his finger in the machinery several years ago. The whole case is as plain as the nose on your face, and we'll show Stevens up to be the biggest fool in the State. The fellow escapes from prison. He has friends on the outside who procure him clothes and red whiskers. He wants money so help him leave the country, and he visits his brother, who was old Jackson. He sneaks into the house in the afternoon when you are at school, but not getting any money, he says he will return in the evening.

"The old man is afraid of him and carries his money-box out and hides it in the old barn. That is where we shall find it. The convict comes back, sends you away and renews his demands for money. Old Jackson refuses to come down and he chokes him to death and searches the house for himself. He gets nothing, and was probably half a mile away when you got back with the cowardly constable.

"And he went away on horseback?" added Tommy.

"No, I don't think so. He told about the horse as an excuse to get rid of you. He would hardly run the risk of stealing a horse, knowing that he would be followed for that, too. No, he went away on foot, and I shall telephone and telegraph everywhere, and have no doubt of picking him up in a day or two. He cant go far without money. Take the whole case, and it's so easy that a boy 10 years old could unravel it. I never heard of such a fool as that constable."

"But when am I to get out of jail?" asked Tommy, who was now full of courage.

"To-morrow. You will be arraigned in court for examination, but I shall have a lawyer there to look out for your case, and be there myself. Don't you have any fears, and meanwhile don't talk to anyone. I'm now going back to Glenwood to search the old barn for the money-box."

The next morning at 10 o'clock, when Tommy Clark was arraigned in court, there was such a crowd that not all could get into the room. Constable Stevens had told his story so often and so well that nine out of ten of the spectators said that the boy must be guilty, and that he must also be a hardened young ruffian to commit such a crime. They looked to see him remanded back to jail and be tried in a higher court, but there were some surprises awaiting them.

In the first place, the doctor who had examined the body, said that the finger-prints on the throat had been made by the large, strong fingers of a man. Then the prison detective exhibited a red beard that had been picked up near the house. Then came the money-box that had been found buried in the soil under the old barn. The case against Tommy Clark fell away until nothing was left of it, and the justice of the peace discharged the boy from custody and severely criticised Constable Stevens for his actions. I cannot refrain from adding that though the constable tried at once to sneak out of town, he was held in a crowd and bombarded with bad eggs, and that the people in Glenwood made so much fun of him that he soon resigned his office and moved away.

I haven't told you of the biggest surprise of all, because it really had nothing to do with setting Tommy free. Unknown to the boy, and weeks before the murder, old man Jackson had made his will and left everything to Tommy. The will had been drawn by a lawyer and duly witnessed, and could not be broken. In it the old man said that he had no blood relations living, and this was proof that he thought his convict brother dead.

What was the value of that will to Tommy? Well, I can give you the exact figures, for I have had the paper in my hand. People had credited Old Man Jackson with being worth at least $50,000, but he was really worth twice as much. He had real estate elsewhere that they knew nothing about. Yes, it was true that a big fortune had been left to a lad that was a pauper in a poorhouse only a few months before, and when this fact came out Tommy Clark was picked up off his feet and carried through the streets on the shoulders of a man, while a hundred others followed after and hurrahed for his luck. I own up that I was one of the hurrahers. I always like to see a boy come out right-end up.

Japan a Land of Tiny But Thrifty Farms

Whole Families Work In Fields. Intensive Agriculture Brings Big Return From Comparatively Small Area.

By FRANK G. CARPENTER

OSAKA, Japan, March 12.—During the past two months I have been traveling through the farming districts of Japan. They should be an object lesson to the United States. The country is kept like a garden, and it is as fat as the valley of the Nile. A great part of it, however, is covered with forests, much of it is mountainous, and, all told, the cultivated parts are half as big as the State of Ohio. Nevertheless, this small area is now feeding more than 50,000,000 people, or more than one-half as many as we have in the United States. It produces every year 100,000,000 bushels of rye, barley and wheat; 250,000,000 bushels of rice, and nearly 100,000,000 pounds of tobacco. It grows 56,000,000 pounds of tea, 10,000,000 bushels of silk cocoons, as well as buckwheat, millet, beans, indigo, cotton and hemp. The rice crop alone is worth $200,000,000 per annum.

I can give you no idea of the intensive cultivation which is going on here. The whole country is divided up into patches, ranging in size from that of a bed quilt to tracts of an acre or so, and every bit of it is as clean of weeds as a Government flower bed. There are no fences, and one looks over a crazy quilt, made up of patches of many-colored crops, bound together with the green grass which forms the boundaries of the fields. The Japanese farms are, on the average, not more than two acres in size, and only 15 per cent of all the holdings are of more than four acres.

The ownership is widely scattered. There are, altogether, about eight million families engaged in agriculture, and many of these have their whole living from two acres of ground. Others have small tracts of their own and rent more. As it is to-day, only about one-half of the land is worked by the owners. The rest is farmed by tenants who pay a proportion of the crops or high money rents.

* * *

No Barns Or Haystacks.

But come with me and take a look at the farming country. It is nothing like that of America. There are no barns nor haystacks. There are no big fields and no cattle nor horses. The ordinary Japanese farmer would look upon a Pennsylvania bank barn as a temple, and worship in it if he saw it. He would look upon our sheep as so many wild animals, and a Percheon horse or a Shorthorn cow would be as much out of place on his little tract as the traditional bull in the china shop. This is so, notwithstanding there are something like 2,000,000 cattle and horses in Japan. Most of them, however, are used for freighting or as draft animals to carry goods over the country. They are always kept shut up and one never sees them roaming about or feeding alone in the fields. The cart is the chief farm vehicle and it is more often hauled by men or bullocks than by horses.

On the other hand, the American farmer would be lost if he came to Japan. If he brought along a reaping machine, his horses would tramp down his neighbor's crops, while turning it around in his fields; and, as for a thresher, the people would mob him for taking away the work from the laboring classes. He could not use his plows unless he bought up a whole county, and his fences would be useless to say the least. He would be surprised at every step at the methods of good cultivation. He would see wheat, oats and barley planted in series and transplanted again in rows o hand's breadth apart. He would see these crops weeded as we weed onions, and would eventually see them reaped with sickles close to the ground. After cutting, the straws are laid end to end in little sheaves and tied with a wisp at the bottom. Each sheaf is then pulled apart, and hung over a rope or a pole, like washing, to dry. Later on, the heads of the grain are cut off with a knife, and thrashed out with a flail. In many place the grain is winnowed by throwing it up into the air, and in others the farmers use separators or hand-fanning mills turned by a crank.

Plowing With Mattocks.

The work of preparing the land is quite as hard as the planting and harvesting. The most of the country is dug over again and again every year. It is chopped with mattocks, which have blades four or five inches wide and as long as your arm. These are so made that the man or woman who uses them must bend double while digging. I have seen women with babies tied to their backs thus working in the rice fields. Their kimonos are tied up over their knees, and they wade through the mud as they set out the plants. I know of no crop which takes so much work as rice, and this is the money crop of Japan. It ranks here as wheat does with us, and Japan is rich or poor according to the rice crop does well or ill. In times past the royal taxes were paid in rice, and to-day the financiers watch the growth of this crop as our people do corn, cotton and wheat.

The greater part of the rice crop is raised by irrigation. The fields are made at different levels, and the water from the hills is run by canals from one to the other. The ground is prepared during the winter. It is covered with manure and made as level as the floor. Along about April 1 it is broken up with a hoe or spade and then flooded.

In the meantime the rice plants have been grown from the seeds in nurseries. They are taken up and scattered over the water as needed. Then the men, women and children of the family tie up their clothes and wade out in the mud. They set the plants out in rows of bunches of four or six plants each. They are so close together that it takes from 1,500 to 3,000 bunches per acre. The water is left on and the rice rapidly grows.

* * *

Picturesque Rice Fields.

The planting is done about June. The rice soon appears above the water and within a few weeks the whole of the country is a beautiful green. Almost every plant is watched. One sees big hatted farmers dressed in blue gowns trotting along through the fields. If they see a plant out of shape or not deep enough in the water, they will reach down and fix it and in this way every rice stalk yields its best product. As to the amount of labor required for such cultivation, if you will imagine one of our farmers sprouting his wheat in a seed bed, and then setting out each plant with a dibble and weeding and cultivating it, you will get some idea of it.

The harvesting of the rice is even more difficult than harvesting wheat. After the grain is cut, it has to be pulled from the straw and be husked before it can be used. If you will take a sheaf of oats, and then pull them over a cross-cut saw, fastened to a piece of wood about the height of a table, so that all the grains are torn off, you will have a fair idea of how the Japanese get their rice from the straw. The grains are still in the husks, and the husks have to be taken off before it can be used. This is mostly done by hand, the grains in the shell being put in a mortar and pounded with a wooden pestle until the kernels are free. Some of the farmers have rice mills, worked by water, and others hulling machines, worked by hand. Much of the rice is winnowed by machinery, small hand mills being used.

A good rice field ought to produce forty bushels to the acre, and some of the best lands here produce more. Japan has altogether almost 200 different kinds of rice, and it raises some of the best rice of the world. Its finest varieties are so valuable that much of them are exported to other countries, the nation importing poorer kinds at lower prices for its own food.

In the Farm Villages.

The Japanese farmers seldom live on their farms. They have little villages of wooden houses, thatched with straw. Here they come at night and from here they go out in the morning to work. The people generally work in gangs. You seldom see a man alone in the fields. A whole family, father, mother, boys and girls, all work together. There are many hired hands, and the wages paid are exceedingly small. It is a poor part of the United States where a farmer is not worth 50 cents a day and his board, or where he gets less than $15 a month, if employed the year round. The wages here without board are 16 cents per day for men and 10 cents for women, with much less for children. The work goes on from sunrise to sunset, and it is fully as hard as any on our farms at home. Hands employed by the year receive proportionately less. Including board, men are paid about $58 a year, or less than $5 a month; the women get about $50, or a little more than $4 a month. In a Government report of 1906 I see that male farm laborers were getting less than $20 a year, and females less than $10. There is a steady rise going on in wages of all kinds, and these cannot remain as they are.

In some cases, farm laborers hire out to work only on alternate days, devoting themselves to their own little tracts of land during the rest of the week. Boys are often bound out to farmers for terms of from five to seven years, their pay being little more during the time than their board and clothes. Of late, I understand, there has been a considerable movement of the farming classes to the cities, and just now there are many who are emigrating to Korea and Manchuria.

Indeed, the farmers of Japan are rapidly changing. There are public schools everywhere and the boys and girls of the country communities attend them. Nearly every man can read and write, and most of the landholders know what is going on as to scientific cultivation. The Government is doing a great deal along the lines of agricultural education. It has big agricultural colleges at Tokio and Sapporo; and there are thirty-six smaller colleges which are teaching theoretical and practical farming in the towns and prefectures. There are special colleges in Kyoto devoted to the art of silk culture, and instruction is also given in tea raising and in the other specialties of Japan.

The Government has 310 traveling lecturers, who go from town to town and from district to district preaching advance agriculture to the farmers and instructing them as to insects, fertilizers and various crops. Some of these men are present at every agricultural show, and attend also to the experimental farming carried on at the public expense.

Japan has now more than 200 experimental stations, and there are other experimental stations established by the farmers themselves. The first of these stations were organized by them from our Agricultural Department, and there have been many American professors in the colleges. Among the experimental stations is one for the study of the tea plant and of all modes of curing the leaves and preparing them for the market. There is also an imperial silk farm and imperial cattle and horse-breeding establishments.

* * *

Stock Farming.

Within the past few years Japan has done a great deal to improve its live stock. It had practically none of much value at the time that Commodore Perry came here. It has now a million cattle and a million horses, and one can buy good beef at all of the ports. When I first came to Japan it was impossible to get anything else but tinned butter. There are now numerous dairies, and fresh butter, unsalted, is sold in most of the cities. The masses of the people use neither butter nor milk. They live upon fish, rice and vegetables, which they eat with a sauce called soy.

The most of the soldiers who went from the farms to Manchuria to fight the Russians there made their first acquaintance with beef in the consumption of canned meats from America, and it is probable from this that a demand for meat may spring up.

As to cattle, the Government has now an imperial breeding farm which is supplied with animals purchased by experts who were sent abroad for the purpose. The favorite cattle are Ayrshires and Simmenthals, a number of each being kept.

The Japanese are doing all they can to improve their horses. The Emperor has a number of studs and horse farms, and his men are importing animals for their improvement every year. He has Arabs, trotters, thoroughbreds and hackneys, altogether numbering about 500 stallions and mares. There is now a horse administration bureau, which is under the control of the Cabinet, with an ex-Minister of State as its chief. The business of this is to improve the Japanese stock, with the especial object of furnishing better animals for the army. I understand that 1,500 stallions of foreign breed are to be purchased and distributed to the chief breeding centers, where they are to be paired with native mares. The improvement programme is to extend thirty years.

At present most of the horses here are stock ponies of Mongolian breed. They have been somewhat crossed with Percherons, and as a result they are very strong and hardy. I see some of them hauling enormous loads on carts through the streets of the cities. They are always hitched up single, and the driver invariably walks, leading the horse.

As to imported horses, a number were brought here from America in 1872, and after the war with China systematic introduction of foreign stallions began. At present there are 1,274 such animals in the various Government depots and studs.

* * *

Agricultural Societies.

I am surprised at the interest that the farmers are taking in improved agriculture. They have something like 1,600 different societies, and new methods are being discussed in every town, village and farming district. They are alive to the use of artificial fertilizers, and of late have been importing a vast quantity of sulphate of ammonia. They understand the use of manures better than we do, and by applying them directly to the plants are able to get better results. Every bit of stable manure is saved, and notwithstanding the comparatively small number of animals, that now used in a year is valued at almost $25,000,000. Another fertilizer which is largely purchased is fish guano. This is made in boiling down herring for their oil, the refuse being sold to the farmers. Such manure brings in millions of dollars a year, and just now a great deal is coming from Sagha lien, the lower part of which Japan got from Russia. The herring fisheries there are valuable, yielding an oil cake which is shipped to Japan.

One of the most important fertilizers of the Japanese farmer is night soil, which is used to the amount of $20,000,000 annually. This is saved in city, village and country, and it has a regular market value.

* * *

State Helps Farmers.

This country has a live, up-to-date department of agriculture. It is associated with the Ministry of Commerce, and it deals with almost everything that comes out of the soil. It has branches devoted to insect diseases, to fertilizers and to sericulture. The station is doing all it can to make two blades of grass grow where one has grown before, and it is trying to open up new areas to cultivation. Japan has been farmed for more than 2,000 years, and it is difficult to find much good unoccupied land. Every available foot seems to be used, but by changing the hills, and more particularly by consolidating the holdings of owners who have small tracts in the same district, much has been done. As it is now, the fields are of all shapes. Here one spreads out like a fan, there one is square and further on is a triangular patch. The country is made up of patches of all shapes and sizes, but none contains more than an acre or so. The Government has persuaded the farmers of certain localities by means of the exemption of taxation on their lands for certain time to unite or exchange their holdings, so that they may make rectangular fields and thus do away with many of the boundaries and paths. This has not only increased the area, but has brought about better farming and bigger crops. Some land has been redeemed in the Hokkaido, or as we call it, Yezo; and there is something like 700,000 acres of new land there. Lands are being opened up in Formosa, and an attempt is being made to fill up the waste lands of Korea.

* * *

Industries In Homes.

At present the farming country is overstocked with people, and most of the farmers have some sort of house industry which they carry on while not engaged in cultivating the soil. In this way the winters are not wasted as in our country, and the nation materially adds to its manufactured products.

This phase of agriculture is encouraged by the government.

Here are some of the occupations that the farmers follow during the idle seasons. They make starch, macaroni, jam and dried fruits. They manufacture straw braid, mat facings and the mats used for rearing silkworms. They make baskets of all kinds, bags for charcoal, straw ropes, straw raincoats and straw hats. In many of their houses weaving goes on and in some they manufacture silk and paper. Some of them burn charcoal, others make lime and others refine camphor.

One feature of the government help is a part of the Japanese banking system. There is one big bank, the Hypothetic, with a capital of $5,000,000, which loans out money to farm districts and to farmers' associations and even to individuals upon real estate security. It gives long-time loans, payable by installments, at a low rate of interest, and it also issues savings bonds in denominations as low as $2.50, for the encouragements of thrift.

And then there is the Industrial Bank of Japan, with a business of somewhat the same nature, which has a capital of about $8,000,000, and a number of agricultural and industrial banks, each of which has a capital of $100,000 or more, which work in combination with the Hypothetic Bank in loaning to farmers and to the cities, towns and villages upon long time and at low interest. All of these banks pay good dividends and are adding to their surpluses.

USING MUSIC TO CURE ILLS OF THE MIND.

UNIQUE in New York, if not in America, is the orchestra at the Manhattan State Hospital for the Insane, Ward's Island, New York. For every patient in it is crazy.

Dr. Mabon, the superintendent, determined to test the proverb "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast." He began with experiments of the effect of music on his insane patients, and now the experimental stage is past and the treatment has become a part of the routine work, says the New York World.

The first experiments with music were made on the island several years ago during the administration of Dr. Emmett C. Dent.

This first experiment was a failure from the standpoint of being a benefit. But it was a success from another point of view, for it showed plainly that patients must be divided into classes for this treatment, as well as for any other, and that music suited to one species of insanity was not beneficial to another.

Then began the systematic study of the effect of music upon the different forms of madness, and, now under Dr. Mabon music is an established mode of treatment, not an experiment.

When it was discovered with what efficacy music could be utilized in the hospital an appropriation for pianos and pianolas was asked and granted. As a result nearly every ward was supplied with such an instrument and the patients have free use of it. Of course this does not apply to wards in which the acutely insane are confined, or those who are physically too ill to bear noise.

If it is discovered that any patient has played any instrument before entering the hospital, that instrument, if possible, is obtained for him or for her, and if he plays well enough he is placed in the orchestra.

The patients who have places in the orchestra are those who are spasmodically insane, or those in a convalescent condition. They play for their health, as it were, and two or three women already have been raised from the depths of melancholy by music, and gradually played back to a nearly normal state of mind.

"Patients," said Dr. Mabon, "show the effect produced on them by music in various and odd manners. There is a ward, that of the melancholia patients, in which it is more than interesting to watch the work. One who has been associated as long and closely with the insane as we doctors have realizes readily that the patient suffering from melancholia presents a difficult field for work, more difficult, one might say, than the actual maniac. If you will come this way, I'll soon illustrate to you what I mean."

The doctor led the way to a bright, cheery ward and called for the orchestra. The six patients who make up the orchestra were summoned from their respective wards. About the room sat women, silent, motionless, with no interest in life, apparently bodies bereft of souls, waiting to receive again the divine spark that would make them moving, thinking beings.

Various methods were resorted to by way of attracting their attention, but few could be moved from their absolutely blank attitudes.

"These," said the doctor, "are acute cases of melancholia. These women will sit this way from one week's end to another, and I contend that it is a great feather in the cap of any mode of treatment that can rouse them from this condition. Now, watch!"

Mr. Miller, the pianist, who suffers from spasmodic attacks of insanity, seated himself at the piano, the other five men patients took up their instruments, a 'cello, two violins, a clarinet, a cornet. The director of the unique orchestra tapped with his baton, and a quick short note was struck. Then followed the prelude of a march. At first not a head was turned by any of the women in the ward, but after fifteen minutes of playing one of the patients rose and began to walk about, another turned her head from the window, at which she had sat looking out into a world all her own, and two or three began to keep time with their hands or feet.

"That," said Dr. Mabon, "is what music will do for the melancholy patient. Remember, this is not the first time an orchestra has played in this ward, far from it. The result you see to-day, accomplished after fifteen minutes of playing, is merely one of the results of many months of hard work with those patients, and music is simply one of the features used in conjunction with the regular medical treatment given each patient. Music is the most successful medium we have discovered through which to obtain attention and stir action. With each concert we notice a change for the better, and the response comes more quickly. At first there was absolutely no notice given to the music. It was like playing to a blank wall, but as far as I can understand, and as far as any of us know, it is the vibrations set up in the soul and body that produce the favorable effect.

"What would a minor strain do? If the injury would not be so great I would show you. A minor strain played in this ward now would undo all the work accomplished in several weeks. I do not mean simply a minor chord, but a composition rendered in that mode which would produce a great melancholy. We know this from experiment.

"It is the same vibration working in the human being that works in the building and causes it to tremble and vibrate in response to the strains played on a violin. If we could take patients separately and play to them, fitting the music exactly to their registry of vibrations, we could accomplish wonders. But this is a large institution.

"Another remarkable side of this treatment is this: Nearly all the patients have come from the tenements, while the insane of better grades of life usually go to private institutions. So we have here, not the person who has been used to good music, not the man or woman accustomed to refined surroundings, who has been made sensitive and open to suggestions, but the men and women who know little or nothing of music. To this class of patient music has been a mind-saver and a restorer of the senses. There in the orchestra you see five persons who were actually insane, and on whom the music treatment was tried. They are all but one convalescent now."

All this time music of a stirring and lively nature was being poured into the ward by the orchestra. It presently stopped, and the women who had given slight signs of attention lapsed into their former states of indifference; the woman who had been walking about went over to the orchestra and stood looking at the instruments as though she expected more. Then she moved away and continued walking about for several minutes. Finally she sat down again and gradually lapsed into her old melancholy attitude.

"Some time ago that woman was the worst case of melancholia we had had in a long time. That gave us hope," said Dr. Mabon. "If you will come we can show you an effect directly opposite."

The doctor led the way to a ward where women were restless and continually moving, some talking to themselves, some making grimaces, all of them cases of the maniacal form that must be kept from excitement.

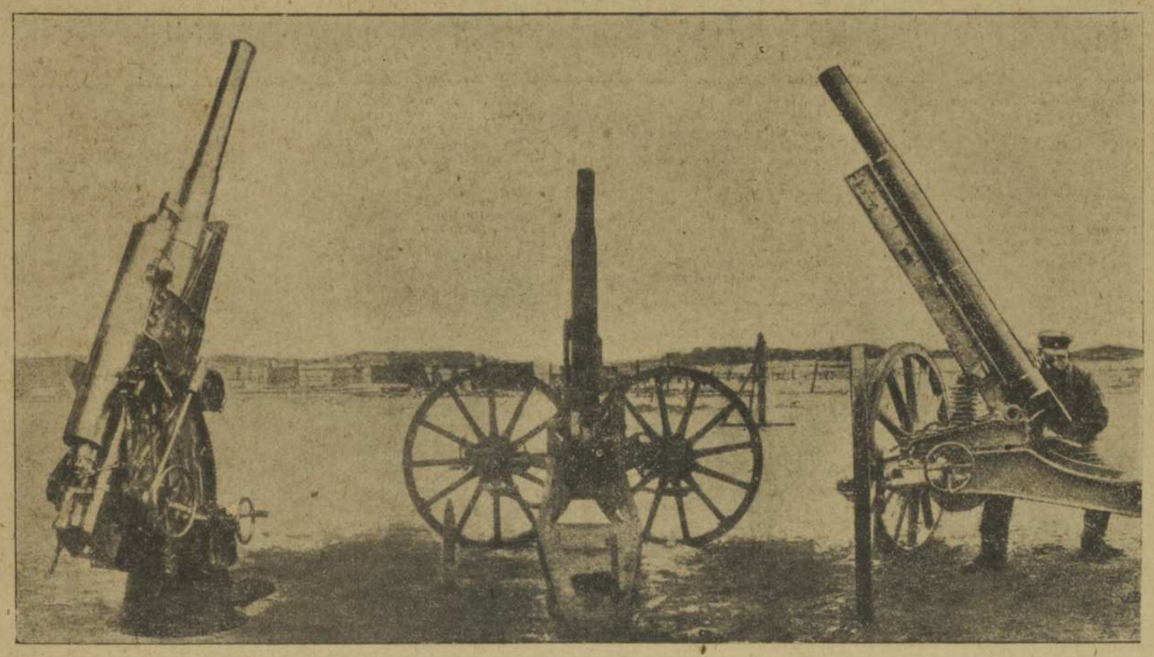

The orchestra was assembled and nurses took their places near some of the more active patients. The music began, a soft, soothing strain which ran gradually into a beautiful arrangement of the delicate second movement of Chopin's "Marche Funebre." Then followed the pastoral in the "William Tell" overture, and other music of a like nature, calming, soft as summer breezes, without a staccato note.

Some of the patients became more excited at first, some of them continued their grimaces and gesticulations, others sang, one women beautifully, as the "Ave Maria" was played.

"That woman," said one of the nurses, "when she is well enough, sings in the choir; she has a beautiful voice; it was her disappointment in the musical world that drove her mad."

Some time passed before a noticeable change came over the ward, and the lulling tones of the violins and deep 'cello finally did their work; but the patients became gradually quiet, and in three-quarters of an hour one would have thought that a sedative had been administered to many, if not all, the patients.

German Artillerists Prepare For War Up In Air.

NO SOONER has the aeroplane attained some measure of practical efficiency than weapons of defense have been thought out to guard against the probable uses of the new flying machine as a weapon of war. The new guns have been designed by German gunmakers, Erhardt and Krupp, and consist of modifications of modern quick-firing guns altered to suit the conditions of firing at a higher angle than has been necessary in warfare hitherto, says the London Sphere. In existing guns the barrel has been pivoted on trunnions placed nearly midway between the ends of the gun; now, owing to the high altitude to which the barrel will have to be tilted, the trunnions will be placed near the rear end of the gun. By a system of swivel-bearings the gun can be turned rapidly in any desired direction, and by the turning of the wheels of the gun carriage at right angles the whole gun can be turned in a circular way round the tail of the gun carriage, which is fastened to the ground by a pin. The new gun is sighted by a telescopic sight fitted with reflecting mirrors which enable the aim to be taken from above. Two types of weapon have been devised, one a 6.5 and the other a 7.5 centimeter gun.

The two guns are here shown as they will appear in actual warfare against airships and areoplanes. The Erhardt factory has devised a special shell which will fire the gas of the balloon as well as penetrate the envelope. Shrapnel shells will probably be used against aeroplanes. Considerable doubt has been expressed by many authorities as to the possibility of hitting an airship with a projectile, and it is therefore thought that the use of shrapnel, which covers a larger area when exploded, would be better than an ordinary shell exploded on contact with the object aimed at.

As regards dirigible balloons Count Zeppelin declares that an airship rises only under compulsion to a great height than 5,000 meters. If it keeps below this height the Erhardt gun can reach it. Captive balloons have proved incontestably the superiority of shrapnel as a destructive agent against dirigibles.

M. Camille Flammarion, the noted French scientist, writing on the possibilities of warfare and the air, says: "As to the frontiers themselves, how would you locate them? They are compatible with space of two dimensions, with surfaces measurable in square meters, but not with limitless space, so to speak, of three dimensions. If two aeronauts were to seek a hand-to-hand combat the duel would not be carried out horizontally but vertically, and the victor would be the one possessing the lighter balloon."

THE BULBS WE PLANTED

The Capricious Sacred Lily of the Chinese

Hyacinths the Most Satisfactory Bulbs

Freesias Earn a Well-Merited Popularity

Answering to the Subtle Call of Spring

Like Florida Cane Brake, Spear Shaped with Never a Blossom

IN SETTING pen to paper below the title inscribed above, I confess to a mighty temptation to moralize upon the glamour of human hopes and the varying results that attend upon our planting.

Pushing this aside, I fall a victim to the more sensible inclination to indulge and now an extract from a bewitching letter from a Chicago woman who treats of bulb culture, together with a variety of other topics. If I had a valid excuse for publishing her communication entire, our members should have it. As it passes from theme to theme, swiftly and gracefully, getting honey from each, the rest of the epistle must wait until occasion justifies the publication.

Have I ever told in the Exchange the story of the boy who asked his mother "if the old moons were not cut up into little stars when they got too small to be used as moons"? It is one of my pet anecdotes, and I apply it to the letter in hand. The little stars—all bright—will twinkle forth in due time.

GOOD LUCK

As a beginning: "I will give my experience in raising Chinese lilies, in answer to M. A. R. (Chicago).

"My younger days were passed in California, and every year our Chinese house servant gave us the bulbs, and said if they bloomed by New Year's Day we would have 'good luck' that year.

"If you grow them in water, they will never bloom again in water. If, however, you plant them in the ground after they have finished blooming in water, they will come up every year, and at the end of five years (!) they will blossom again, and every year after that. I did as he told me, and found all true. He said, also, that if they were planted in earth the first time, they would always bloom yearly. I never tried that, so I cannot vouch for the truth of it.

A SHOWCASE FERNERY

"The description and the picture of your fernery made me homesick. I made one, when in California, of a showcase, which may be a hint to those who cannot afford to have an expensive one made. I went to the woods every spring and brought home fresh moss and ferns. It was a constant source of pleasure.

"Some one asked some time ago for the name of the author of a poem beginning:

God might have made the earth bring forth
Enough for great and small,
The oak tree and the cedar tree,
Without a flower at all.

"It was written by Mary Hewitt. I have the whole poem of eight verses, which I will copy, if the person referred to has not received it."

With this true-hearted flower-lover, I am thanking the Giver of every good and perfect gift today that He did not leave the buds and blossoms out of His plan of creation. For in cottage window, in city flats with but one lookout toward sunshine, as in conservatory and greenhouse, the bulbs we planted ten weeks and more agone are answering to the subtle call of spring. The most crudite naturalist knows no more than the illiterate dullard by what mysterious means that call is conveyed to the very heart of the frozen earth.

Had we buried our bulbs in boxes of sand and left them in windowless cellars, they would have felt—I can hardly say "heard"—the summons and stirred restlessly in their sleep and darkness. In the reflected sunshine where stands my fernery, and nearer the window, a row of flowerpots and bulb glasses, leaves and blossoms (what few there are of these last) lean joyously toward the outer world. I could fancy that I detect an air of anticipation of longer days and a daily slant nearer to their ledge of the vivifying beams which mean warmth and growth the world over.

MAINLY BULBS

Hyacinths are the most satisfactory bulbs for the amateur window gardener. They are hardy and sweet natured, as well as generous of fragrance. No other bulb that I know of—if we except the capricious sacred lily of the Chinese—takes so kindly to water. It is better to set them in colored glasses than in clear. The light dailies so long with the roots that the flowering is neglected. I had never heard this until I found out for myself that the blossoms borne by the plants in uncolored and transparent glasses were insignificant by comparison with those set in the colored. I am told that the blue rays are more beneficial to root-growth than any other color.

Apropos of roots, I saw yesterday a curiosity in the form of a sweet potato which was set in the mouth of a Mason fruit jar just before Christmas. The tuber is held in place by a bit of twine, two-thirds of it being submerged in the water that fills the jar. It had not been in this position three days, when hair-like roots shot out from the lower part of the potato, and in a week the top of the tuber followed suit with delicate sprouts, developing into tiny leaves in a fortnight. Now the jar is full of a twisted mass of rampant rootlets that seem to press impatiently against their prison walls, struggling to get into the light. Long, attenuated vines hang down on the outside of the jar. Some are two feet in length, some three. All are disconsolate in expression, and the wee leaves are almost white. This, although the jar stands in the full sunlight all day. The strength of the tuber had expended itself on the roots stimulated by the unchecked sunshine.

Some of the Chinese lilies we established, according to rule and order, among clean pebbles in bowls of water that have been refilled daily have towered aloft into a jungle that looks like a Florida canebrake of spear-shaped leaves, rankly green, but with never a symptom of blossoming. Perhaps they bloomed in water last year, a fact of which the honest florist from whom we bought the bulbs could not have been ignorant. In which case, we must wait four years longer after we plant it in the earth before we may expect another flowering. The revelations of the Chinese butler on this head (or want of head) may well make us cautious in our purchases next autumn. Each bulb should be labeled with the date of the last blooming, and whether this was done by water or on land.

Freesias have earned a well-merited popularity since their introduction into American gardens a score of years ago. They are easily raised in the window parterre that boasts a fair supply of winter sunlight. I have potted them into pale but odorous flowering in my jardiniere, where the slant rays did not visit them until March 1. They take kindly to house culture when planted in rich earth and allowed what may be called a living income of sunshine. They are graceful in form, in color a creamy white, with sometimes a dash of warmer orange at the heart, and exquisite in the delicate apricot perfume that is pervasive, yet never cloying.

It would be interesting to know how many of the bulbs we planted at Christmas or thereabouts blossomed at Easter, as we meant them to do. May we not hear from our house gardeners on this point? I promise not to moralize upon the several reports, and to yield hearty sympathy in each experience, be it discouraging or hopeful.

THE HOUSEMOTHERS' EXCHANGE

WITH the approach of spring and housecleaning the subject treated of in the following helpful letters takes on new and personal interest for our practical housemother:

In reply to "W. D. N." who complains of sticky floors, I would say: Get one pound of orange shellac and one quart of painter's alcohol. Dissolve the shellac in the alcohol, shaking it now and then. When entirely dissolved it is ready for use. Apply to the floor with a wood varnish brush in thin coats. Two applications are better than one heavy coating. It will dry quickly, staining the floor just a trifle darker than it was before and leaving a beautiful gloss. It is easy to keep clean.

I am using this upon my own floors in preference to any other preparation I have ever tried. A. S. (Chicago).

Renovating Floors and Furniture

Our next helping hand comes from a practical and intelligent, therefore a trustworthy, painter and decorator.

I am sorry for the housewife who treated her new maple floors with linseed oil, followed by a hot bath of the same.

To remove the oil: use any good paint remover on the roughest, acting strictly according to directions.

After washing with benzine or gasoline over the floors (with No. 3 steel wool), then stain to your taste.

Next (for maple) a thin coat of shellac, followed by two coats of some good floor varnish. Rub the first coat of varnish with No. 1 steel wool until the finish is deadened. Then finish the second coat. Be sure that the first coat is dry before applying the second.

To renovate old furniture that is yet in good repair:

Use the paint remover as directed, scraping off the old finish with a putty knife or old plane bit. Stain with wood dye. You may buy it at any paint shop. If the wood is open-grained, use a paste filler for oak, ash, walnut, etc.; sandpaper or rub with steel wool until smooth; coat thinly with shellac to finish with one or two coats of furniture varnish; rub with No. 0 steel wool; finish with a flannel rag saturated with linseed oil and diluted in turpentine. Be careful to remove all traces of the oil. Polish with chamois skin.

Many a treasured heirloom may be reclaimed by this process.

To hang paper upon a painted ceiling or wall:

Dissolve a pound of sal soda in a gallon of hot water; apply with a coarse or whitewash brush. This will soften the paint so that the paper will adhere to it.

To remove spots or stains from woodwork or from furniture:

Sandpaper or use No. 2 steel wool. Rub down to the wood. Mix four ounces of oxalic acid in a pint of hot water; let it stand until crystals form. With this wash the bleached surface; shellac and varnish.

Fifteen years' experience as a painter qualifies me to advise further upon any question of painting or wood finish. I hold myself ready to answer any queries on these subjects. R. D. A. (Woodland, Ill.).

The address of the writer is in my hands. He is more than kind in putting the results of his experience at the service of the Exchange.

Inexpensive Dishes

I offer the following recipes for good and inexpensive dishes:

Tropical "What is It?"

(This will serve a party of four generously.)

A quarter of a pound of dried apricots, washed, soaked and thoroughly cooked in enough water to cover them well and allow for swelling. While they are still hot, sweeten abundantly with sugar. There should be plenty of syrup. Mash or rub through a sieve. Cook if they are cold, and add three firm bananas, peeled and sliced thin. Stir together lightly and serve ice-cold with cream or custard. (Cream is best.) Send around plain cake or cookies with this dish and you have a nice dessert.

Mother Hubbard Rice Drop Cakes.

Boil half a cup of raw rice in plenty of salted water. Drain well. There should be two cupfuls of it when cooked. Mix with it one beaten egg, half a cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt and half a cupful of shredded cocoanut (use the kind that comes in bulk and is not sweetened. It costs 20 cents a pound.) Beat the above-named ingredients together and drop by the spoonful upon a lightly greased griddle. Fry five minutes, turn and brown the other side lightly. You will need little grease, as the cocoanut is rich in oils.

We eat this as a vegetable, with fish or with cold meat. Sometimes I add a teaspoonful of sugar, season with cinnamon before cooking and serve with syrup as a luncheon dessert.

If you like these items, say so some time, and I shall be glad to hand again. "MOTHER HUBBARD."
(Ann Arbor, Mich.).

We should be ungracious, as well as unreasonable, if we did not like the novel, economical and tempting recipes. They commend themselves to me unreservedly. The "drop cakes" would be particularly nice if baked, and not fried, upon the soapstone griddle, the merits of which I chanted a few weeks ago.

"We" mean to try the "What Is It?" tomorrow. We are fond of bananas sliced and ice cold, eaten with sugar and cream. The acid of the apricots will be a pleasant addition.

A Dash of Criticism

Now for a dash of honest criticism that should temper any self-complacent glow quickened in me by other letters too long, too numerous and too complimentary to be printed:

It seems to me, if your Exchange could tell a person what they wish to know and not the same thing over day after day, it would be of more benefit to the paper and its readers.

Over a week ago I wrote inquiring if you would tell me what would bring the luster back to amber beads, after they had been in alcohol. By mistake I tried to clean them in alcohol, and, as they are the real amber, it turned them dull.

Kindly reply in the paper.
"AZHAH" (Marquketa, Iowa).

It is not an easy matter to get upon one corner of one page of a great paper that has a thousand interests to look after, the substance of a daily mail that never falls under the 100 mark and sometimes runs over 200. Yet I answered your query within a week after it reached me. In case you have not chanced to note my reply, I now advise you to rub the beads with a bit of flannel dipped in amber oil.

One woman, who has a superb set of amber, says that she soaks her beads in the oil once a year "to feed them." The proud owner of a beautiful chain of finely wrought gold, setting off the gleam of large and lustrous opals, tells me that this is no figure of speech, for that she "feeds" her opals periodically with the best quality of olive oil.

It sounds like a fairy tale to me. I should not venture either gem in the oil bath. The owners of the jewels may be all right and I altogether at fault. I wish our practical jewelers would tell us if our precious stones twinkle and sparkle the more brightly for this "feeding."

Wants to Make Milk Chocolate

I should like to get a recipe for sweet milk chocolate—the hard-cake kind, such as we buy, or I should appreciate the favor if you can tell me where it can be bought. I inclose the name of a brand we like. Where would I be likely to find it, if I cannot make it?
A. MacN. (Los Angeles, Cal.).

As we used to say when I was a child, "some how or some how else," it goes against the grain with me to refuse a California correspondent. I don't try to account for the feeling. I was never in that fair and far-away wonderland, much as I have longed to visit it; but my California constituents have a warm corner, all their own, in my heart. Therefore it is with sincere regret that I reiterate what my correspondent has never observed, namely, that business addresses are not given in our Corner. As I am ignorant of the brand she names, I cannot give her the information by post which she desires. I am the more sorry since she inclosed a stamped and self-addressed envelope for the address.

Can anybody tell how they make the hard cakes of milk chocolate for which "A. MacN." longs?

Making Oatmeal Light

I note a request from "Mrs. A. M. R." (Chicago), for the words of an old song: "Do They Miss Me at Home?" I inclose a copy. If she has already obtained it from other sources, drop this into the waste basket.

About the same time that the above-named query appeared there was one from a southern woman who wished to know how to make oatmeal so as to have it light. Tell her from me to make it in a rice kettle. Put in rolled oats and salt, pour in boiling water, cook until the bulk is increased about one-third and the mixture smooth. Then stir no more while cooking. Boil thirty minutes. It will be as light as mush can be made.
J. M. W. (Searchlight, Nev.).

"Mrs. A. M. R." had the coveted ballad before your copy came to hand. Instead of tossing it into the remorseless maw of the tall basket at my elbow I have laid it away for the next applicant for the song of long, long ago. I am reminded in the reading that I used to sing it when I was a girl. The melody throbs along the lines as I con them.

It isn't such a far cry from the song of the fireside to breakfast oatmeal as our romantic readers might think. Whether is be true or not that gems must be fed, it is certain that hearts and intellect pine and sicken when the body is not properly nourished. So, may I add to your recipe for oatmeal mush mine for Oatmeal Porridge.

Soak a cupful of the best Irish oatmeal in cold water enough to cover it. Keep it thus for three hours or more. Then turn into the double boiler and add salt to taste, taking care not to put in too much. There should be just enough to take off the "flat" taste.

Pour in a quart of boiling water, stirring well from the bottom; set at the back of the stove and let it cook for at least two hours. The Scotch say that "parritch" (of which they always speak in the plural) could not be overdone were "they" to cook for twenty-four hours. Stir up from time to time and, should it stiffen too much, add boiling water.

Before dishing, beat it for five minutes—hard! This will make it light and of jelly-like consistency. Not a grain should be distinguishable from the rest.

Prepared in this way, there is no raw taste to the porridge and it bears no resemblance in looks and flavor to the stiff paste that disgusts those who have seen it under no other guise with this most worthy breakfast cereal. I once had a Scotch cook who left the "parritch" in the farina boiler on the range all night long. I never tasted better and smoother. It was more like jelly than mush.

TASTY SANDWICHES

THE day has passed and forever when a sandwich meant two thick slices of bread, inclosing what the boys call a "hunk" of cold meat. Now the popular delicacy is made of bread cut to wafer-like thinness and shorn of all suggestion of crust. The "filling" may be simple or composite, as taste may dictate, and the ingenious housewife will devise many delicate combinations to be spread between the two layers of her sandwiches.

Ham Sandwiches.

Chop lean ham and beat into each cupful of the minced meat a tablespoonful of salad oil, a teaspoonful of vinegar, a saltspoonful of French mustard, six olives chopped fine and a teaspoonful of minced parsley. Work all to a paste and spread on thin slices of white bread.

Lamb or Mutton Sandwiches.

Mince cold roast lamb, or tender mutton, fine, and season with salt, pepper and tomato catsup. Add a few minced olives and make all into a paste with mayonnaise dressing. Spread between thin slices of bread. Cut these sandwiches into diamond shapes.

Brunette Sandwiches.

Slice Boston brown bread very thin, butter lightly, and spread with Neufchatel or with cottage cheese. Have ready crisp lettuce leaves, dip each in a bowl of French salad dressing, then lay on the already spread brown bread. Press another slice of buttered brown bread on this, and the sandwich is ready. These sandwiches must be kept in a moist atmosphere until it is time to serve them.

Beef Sandwiches.

Chop rare cold roast beef very fine, taking care to use only the lean portions of the meat. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and a saltspoonful of horseradish. Mix and make into sandwiches with thinly sliced graham bread. These may be eaten by persons of delicate digestion, and are both appetizing and nourishing.

Marion Harland Recipes.

Divinity Candy.

[Kindness of Mrs. J. E. S.]

HAVE two saucepans and put into one three cups of granulated sugar, a cupful of thick syrup and two-thirds of a cup of water. Into the other pan put a cup of granulated sugar and a gill of water. Allow the contents of both pans to cook until the syrup in them will spin a thread when poured from a spoon or make a soft ball between the fingers when dropped into very cold water. When both are ready the syrup in the first pan is slowly turned over the stiffly-beaten whites of three eggs, a constant beating going on during the process. Then the second syrup, into which has been stirred a cupful of chopped nuts, is added and the frothy mass is turned into buttered tins to cool. When cold enough mark into blocks with a very sharp knife.

* * *

Salt Rising Bread.

[By Request.]

Dissolve a half teaspoonful of salt in a pint of boiling water, take from the fire and beat in gradually enough flour to make a very soft dough. Continue this beating for ten minutes, cover the pan containing the mixture and set in a warm place over night or for eight or nine hours. Into a pint of lukewarm milk stir a teaspoonful of salt and add enough flour to make a good batter. Stir this into the dough and mix well. Cover and set to rise in a warm place until very light. Turn into the mixture enough flour to make as stiff as bread dough, and knead thoroughly. Make into loaves and, when these are light, bake.

* * *

Tapioca Pudding.

[Kindness of H. K.]

Soak four tablespoonfuls of tapioca in enough cold water to cover it. When soaked, add to the tapioca a half cup of sugar, the beaten yolks of two eggs and a pint of milk. Cook in a double boiler, stirring constantly, until smooth and quite thick. Do this cooking in a double boiler. When cold put on the ice until chilled. In the bottom of a bowl put bananas or stewed or preserved peaches, and pour the tapioca pudding over them. Beat the whites of the eggs stiff, sweeten them to taste, and heap on top of the pudding.

* * *

Orange Marmalade.

[By Request.]

Slice and seed two dozen unpeeled oranges and two lemons. Shred both fruits very thin. Measure the juice, adding enough cold water to make three quarts of liquid. Set all in a covered crock all night. In the morning cook all together in a preserving kettle, simmering very slowly. When the peel is tender, add a pound of granulated sugar for each pint of juice, and boil until the skin looks clear. Take from the fire and, when cool, put in glasses and seal.

* * *

Cheese and Bread.

[Kindness of Constant Reader.]

On crustless slices of stale bread put a layer of cheese. Have each slice of bread slightly buttered and lay another slice on top of the layer of cheese as for sandwiches. Beat an egg and stir it into a cup of sweet milk and add a pinch of salt. Lay the bread and cheese in a buttered dripping pan, pour this custard over it and bake in an oven to a good brown. Serve hot just as it is. This is a delicious breakfast dish.

* * *

Macaroni and Rice.

[Kindness of E. P. R.]

Put a quarter package of macaroni and a scant half-cup of rice into three quarts of salted boiling water, adding an onion cut small. Boil hard until soft and full, then add a half-cup of cream or a cup of milk, a piece of butter the size of a walnut, a half-teaspoonful of salt, two dashes of pepper, a half-teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce and two tablespoonfuls of Chili sauce. Heat all together and serve. This is a fine luncheon or supper dish.

* * *

Chocolate Cake.

[By Request.]

Cream together a half cup of butter and a large cupful of powdered sugar. Add eight tablespoonfuls of grated chocolate dissolved in a half cup of hot milk. Whip in the beaten whites of five eggs, a pint of flour that has been well sifted with a heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, and flavor with vanilla. Bake in a loaf tin.

* * *

Welsh Rarebit.

[Kindness of Constant Reader.]

Melt a tablespoonful of butter, add two cups of cheese, cut fine, and stir in a saucepan over the fire until the cheese is melted. Add the beaten yolks of two eggs with a half-cup of sweet milk or cream, a quarter-teaspoonful of salt, the same quantity of mustard and stir until smooth, then serve on toast.

* * *

Egg and Celery Salad.

[Kindness of E. P. R.]

Boil hard and peel two eggs, then cut them fine with a silver knife. Cut two small heads of celery into cubes and mix it with the eggs. Salt slightly and cover with a French dressing for a half-hour before serving, setting the dish in the ice. Serve on lettuce leaves.

* * *

French Dressing.

[Kindness of G. P. R.]

Three tablespoonfuls of the best olive oil, three dashes of paprika, a half-teaspoonful of salt, one tablespoonful of Tarragon vinegar. Beat until an emulsion is formed and pour over the egg and celery.

* * *

Cream Salad Dressing.

[Kindness of a Reader.]

Put into a saucepan the beaten yolks of two eggs, a tablespoonful of butter, one tablespoonful of sugar, one-third of a cup of milk, pepper to taste, one-third tablespoonful of dry mustard and one-third cup of vinegar. Boil, stirring steadily, until as thick as rich cream. Serve very cold.

* * *

Bacon and Apples.

[Kindness of S. D.]

Fill a baking dish with pared and sliced apples and sugar to taste. Cover with slices of bacon and bake for a half-hour.

CHOCOLATE APPLE CUSTARD.

Stew apple quarters until clear, but do not let them cook to pieces, and line a pudding dish about two-thirds full. In another bowl mix one cup of hot milk, four whole eggs, two tablespoons of grated chocolate and about two tablespoons of sugar. Flavor the apple sauce with lemon and the custard with vanilla. Pour the custard slowly over the apple sauce, put the pudding dish in a pan of water and bake in moderate oven until the custard is done. Serve with whipped cream. This makes a delicious dessert for six or eight people.

FIG. A—SIMPLE AND SERVICEABLE CASHMERE GOWN.

Pleasing Style For the Middle-Aged.

ELDERLY has no place in Dame Fashion's dictionary. The slaves of her lamp, the pattern people and all others who create new and beautifying effects, take only blooming cheeks and coquettish natures into account. Gowns, mantles, coats and bodices for all ages are charming and youthful.

Private makers, of course, must consider the needs of the individual customer, but even then the costume or wrap designed must go to the young model for inspiration, a softening of tones, some simplification or elaboration here and there, accomplishing the needs of the customer no longer young. Faint tones, especially gray, velvet and black, are seen in these doctored editions of a prevailing mode, and if the customer has taste of her own she helps the maker with suggestions as to what she can wear and what she cannot.

Middle-aged women of good taste often refuse the jaunty hats first offered them, preferring the more suitable bonnet even if it is a degree less stylish. But bonnets designed for even elderly heads are now very smart, and if the head gets the right one the result is far more youthful than if a hat were worn. A very broad, flat effect, with small flower and narrow velvet or ribbon put on compactly, are the earmarks of the newest bonnets; and where these are absolutely rejected, a heavily-trimmed toque sometimes bridges the difficulty between the thing too young and the thing too old.

Feather boas, lace and net collarettes, and little shoulder mantles of silk or lace, provide suitable wraps for those who dislike being without some species of covering.

The models illustrated this week are suitable for women of any age, though the two gowns are best adapted to slim figures. With each a feather boa or shoulder mantle would give a quiet touch for street wear, and either a smart bonnet or small hat would be suitable headgear.

Figure A demonstrates a pleasing model for cashmere, which is a material to be found in every city and town of the United States. This gown is so simple and serviceable that every woman must recognize its advantages. The bodice and skirt are separate, but the button trimming is arranged to give a semi-princess effect. The waist is closed at the back with hooks, and the bands and buttons are of satin, covered buttons of this sort being at this moment extremely fashionable.

The little chemisette of tucked muslin gives the simple touch fashion likes, but this may also be of net, lace or silk. The long-closed sleeves shown are much in vogue, but since there are wearers who still insist upon elbow lengths, the model allows for both styles. The five-gored skirt is a useful one for cashmere, and the entire design would accommodate itself to a number of other modest wool or silk materials. Light-weight serge, summer flannel, pongee and many wash textures, such as gingham, linen and light-weight duck, are also feasible.

If cashmere is used, pale gray, fawn color, mauve and violet are all modish and rewarding tints.

Figure B shows an elegant afternoon or evening toilette suited to a well-preserved dowager. Satin is preeminently the choice material for this elegant gown, though a glistening mes-

FIG. B—FOR AFTERNOON OR EVENING.

saline or soft surah silk would create a more youthful look. If satin is used, black, from its very practicability and general becomingness, would be first choice, with trimmings of black appliqué and the guimpe of some handsome lace or fine figured net. The blouse and the guimpe and undersleeves are made in one, with the girdle attached to the lower edge of the bodice. Under this the skirt belt, which is a little above the normal waist line, is placed, and if wanted, there may be hooks and eyes under the girdle to hold the waist and skirt together.

Plain skirts with this full effect at the bottom are much worn, and since the odd bodice is by no means shelved, a lace or net waist and this graceful skirt would effect the look of a second costume. There are numbers of all-over laces which are extremely reasonable in price, but remember always that big, elaborate patterns are more aging than the small, simple ones.

Silk-covered buttons, pipings, tiny stiff bows and neckties in color are all seen on many of the white net and lace waists. The bows, which are very small, are placed in rows of three at the front of the collar and sometimes down the front of the bodice.

If satin or silk cannot be afforded, cashmere or veiling would do for this dress, and if the latter has a satin stripe bordering it would not affect elegance. In fact, the bordering could be used in place of the guipure here employed upon the bodice, and so lessen expense.

Figure C is a suggestion for one of the several house gowns required by every woman for looks and comfort. While loose and comfortable, it is yet gracefully shaped with a fitted back and the loose fronts held in at the waist line with ribbons. Figured challie, dimity, summer lawn, dotted Swiss and flannel are all correct materials, according to the use made of the gown, and if the more fragile textures are used a very charming effect can be made with lace insertions and edgings and daintily tinted ribbons.

If the wearer has white hair and a good complexion, a violet and white dimity and some inexpensive valenciennes lace would accomplish a becoming effect. Some new wash ribbons for tub materials are in the palest flower tints with self-toned satin spots or figures.

Figure D is a useful dressing jacket, which could be made of flannel, challie, dimity or lawn, and with long or three-quarter length sleeves. For breakfast uses such a jacket is perfectly suitable, and with the addition of a flat pocket on the left bust, and with the tail worn inside the skirt, and the waist well belted, it could substitute a shirt waist for some hurried marketing occasion. In such an event a soft bow tie would be required to give the negligee collar a proper look.

MARY DEAN.

The Home Gardener

A SPACE twenty by fifty feet may, under intensive culture, be made to yield fresh vegetables for a small family through half the year. With forty feet by fifty, or fifty by one hundred, there can be a garden spelling riotous plenty, says a writer in the Circle Magazine.

Have the spading done as early as possible, use thoroughly rotted manure, and supplement it with some good commercial fertilizer, either broadcasted and raked in or put in hills or drills.

It is a waste of seed, strength and time to plant a garden in poor soil. The seed will come up, the spindling plants will be harder to work than if they were luxuriant, and the resulting crop will be mostly conspicuous by its absence. So, if it be impossible to do more, make small rich beds, four feet wide and as long as the manure holds out, and sow them crosswise with such things as radishes, lettuce, cress, parsley, beets and onions. Make the rows a foot to eighteen inches apart or sow the radishes broadcast. Lettuce also yields more for broadcast sowing. Pull out the thriftiest as soon as edible and leave the rest to grow. Radish tops make excellent greens, something better flavored than mustard. By sowing thickly you can have dishes of greens.

Say the garden is forty by fifty feet, this is something like what the planting of it should be: Dwarf early peas, medium early and late peas; beets, early and later; beans in succession, including bush limas, carrots, radishes, tomatoes, cucumbers, peppers. Do not venture upon corn unless it be sweet corn planted on the pea space as a second crop, to come in just before frost. Make an asparagus bed all across one end of the plot, setting two-year-old roots, and fertilizing the bed heavily in early summer just after cutting ceases.

Peas are so hardy they may be planted before snow is past, provided, of course, the ground is right when they go in. Make it fine and light, cover the seed at least three inches deep, then tramp the earth over them, setting the feet so one track touches the other. A quart of seed will sow a hundred feet of drill the proper thickness. An ounce of best seed will sow the same row length.

The Sweet-Smelling Herb Bed

IN our grandmother's time there was always a bed for old-fashioned herbs in the vegetable garden. There, against sunny walls, or in prim hedges around things of a more practical nature, grew the leaved and flowered plants which made elegant perfumes, hot drinks for the cure of various ailments, seasonings for fowl and game, and which even went, in some wistful sprig perhaps, to declare love or the passing of it to faithful or delinquent lovers.

There, with parsley, marjoram and thyme, grew lavender, angelica, rue, rosemary and balm; herbs for disordered stomachs, herbs for elegant sentiments and homely usefulness.

An herb bed is the next best thing to an entire garden for the woman who loves growing things and wholesome outdoor exercise. Many herbs call for a different time of planting, and naturally climate must be taken into account. But an addressed envelope, inclosed in a letter asking for a leaflet on herbs, would bring help from the Agricultural Department at Washington. The tiniest patch of ground would reap a harvest of the deliciously smelling plants, but if this is not available a box in a sunny window would grow several varieties. Chives, which are capital for seasoning salads, may be raised in a clay flower pot.

For kitchen uses, fresh herbs, such as parsley, thyme, tarragon, sorrel, sage and marjoram, are invaluable, these imparting a taste far more delicate than the dried plant. Lavender, the flowers of which are so much used for perfuming linen, and for the making of toilet water, is a very hardy plant. Each year will increase the lavender plantation, too, if slips or young shoots are regularly planted in the spring. Hot water poured on lavender flowers and allowed to stand a while was once taken in teaspoonfuls as a medicine. The flowers were also preserved and eaten as a sweet.

Angelica and borage, two old-time favorites, are eaten to this day in various countries. Candied angelica is one of our own confectioner's great delicacies, and, when pushed for something green, the stalks of the plant may be blanched and eaten as celery. The Laplanders extol the virtues of angelica for coughs and other chest disorders. Borage, which is a hardy annual, is used in Italy, when the leaves are young and tender, as a raw or cooked salad, and in France its flowers like those of nasturtium for ornament salads.

Caraway, coriander and anise-seed are useful for cakes and bread and cordials, and fever-few horehound and cumin are excellent for the medicine chest.

The situation most suitable for an herb should have a gentle slope toward the south. The worst soil for herbs is that of stiff, clayey description. But as a general recommendation for the right sort will not suit all herbs it is best to go by a garden book.

THE DUTCH RAREBIT.

A simple, but delicious luncheon dish appropriate for Lent is the Dutch rarebit. Take a number of eggs, depending on the number of persons you desire to serve. See that they are thoroughly boiled, but not left in the water long enough to turn dark. Remove the shells and cut the meat into small dice. Use your chafing dish or a pan over a slow fire. Into this place a lump of butter and a little flour and allow to melt, not brown, then add a teacup of milk, salt, pepper and a little tabasco. When the dressing comes to a boil pour in the chopped eggs and allow to cook for a few minutes. Serve very hot on slices of buttered toast.

Simple Treatments For Middle-Aged Hair.

"MY HAIR is growing very gray," writes a mother of several children, some of them "grown." It was once a beautiful brown, she goes on to say, and inclosed a lock to show how "streaked and ugly it is now." What dye or bleach should she use? She is only 45. She does not want to look too old.

I took the little ring with its touch of silver, pinned against the gentle letter, and lo! it cried out to me:

"Look, I am beautiful still; tell this foolish woman not to hurt me with bleaches and dyes."

What a pretty ring it was, and how sentimental it made me feel! Fine hair, with a rich burnish of soft brown still, yet with the silver threads making it all the more charming. That illusive thing in me called CONSCIENCE, which may lie at the core of even the most hardened beauty doctor, awoke. I saw where my duty lay—I must preach a pleasant sermon.

As a general rule, I stand ready to send such formulas as my readers may request. But when it comes to the mother of grown children, I will tell her first of all the injurious effect of chemicals on the hair, due to her of their dubious taste for a lady of her dignified position.

A mother of sons and daughters may be as young as many a maiden—Cleopatra, who successfully stands the test of dyed hair, may even look more youthful. But dyed mother-hair and tall sons and daughters are not usual combinations, and, with all the rest, the hair of 45 being less vigorous than that of younger persons, there is danger of losing it entirely. In most of the hair dyes and bleaches the principal chemicals used are nitrate of silver and lead, and these, in the long run, are as injurious to the texture and life of the hair as a flaming torch. They also stain the skin and are likely to cause colic and spasms of the limbs, all of which is more perilous to the middle-aged than to the young and strong.

The hair is still more seriously affected by the bleach than it is by any dye used; and that very popular agent, peroxide of hydrogen, will, if persisted in, utterly ruin it, as many a foolish woman has found out. A little peroxide put in the rinsing water with an occasional shampoo, is all very well; but the peroxide user is like the morphine fiend, she must go on till destruction comes to her.

However, there are simple ways and means at least of restoring color somewhat; so let this mother of the once beautiful hair not despair, if she is bent upon hiding the, to her, detested threads of silver.

As nervous exhaustion is indicated by the rapid "graying" of hair in a youngish person—what is 45 but actually young nowadays?—internal medicaments are sometimes necessary and the family physician should be consulted.

For dark or reddish brown hair a good darkener is red wine and sulphate of iron. Dissolve seven grammes of the sulphate in an ounce of distilled water, then add a pint of good claret, and steep it for ten minutes (do not boil). Wet the hair thoroughly with this and massage the scalp and let the mixture dry on. Another simple lotion recommended to restore color, and even arrest falling hair, is made of two ounces of green tea and two of garden sage, freshly dried.

These herbs are put in a cooking vessel which can be tightly covered, and over them three quarts of boiling rainwater are poured. The lotion then simmers over a slow fire till reduced one-third; then the mixture is set aside for twenty-four hours, and after that is strained and bottled. The head is wet thoroughly every night with it and the usual massage night and morning follows.

Other fairly simple agents will gradually darken the hair. Tannic or gallic acid, mixed with olive oil, glycerine or lard, is said to be very good. This mixture is applied like a dressing, and always with massage. Pure olive oil, or even castor oil, mixed with rosewater, are healthy and darkening dressings for the hair always.

Always wash the hair thoroughly and let it dry before using any lotion. Also comb and brush it every night, massage the scalp frequently, and never use metal hairpins. Finally, remember that a smoothly and becomingly dressed head lessens the look of age, even if the locks are as white as snow. It is ill-kept hair, the straying, matted locks and cheap metal ornaments, which are aging. Shell makes the best hairpin, and nine times out of ten smooth bands of hair are more becoming to a middle-aged woman than a crimped and fluffy effects.

If the hair is scanty, buy a false braid or puffs, matching these, gray hair and all, to the natural growth. A careful grooming, and a look of fair quantity are fashion's chief requirements. Dyed hair is abominated by the sticklers for pure taste, but false hair goes unchallenged.

None of the lotions here given is an actual dye. They are merely substitutes which lend themselves excellently well to the workings of nature, and as to this woman, the head which crowns a healthy body is the best to look at every time. Good food, sleep, rest and freedom from anxiety are the best hair restorers the world owns; and when strict cleanliness and a becoming arrangement are added to these, a head is bound to be good to look at, however touched with gray.

TURNIP AND BEET TOPS.

These simple greens are superb for freshening the blood and giving tone to the stomach. They may be cooked together or separately, and with pork or bacon or merely in salted water. Two hours is about the time needed for tenderness, but the time really depends upon the delicacy and freshness of the tops. Buy only the freshest ones, for withered greens are neither digestible nor palatable.

Three bunches of young white turnips cooked together with their tops and a pound of bacon may make a delicious creole dish called "pepper pot." A half-dozen of the long, slim, sweet red peppers are put in whole, and an hour before serving the "pot" dumplings of cornmeal are added. The science of this dish lies in the way it is cooked. It is boiled down till not a drop of water is left, everything lying at last in a plentiful bath of the bacon fat. You may be sure it is hot with pepper. It may indeed make you cough several times. But, oh, how delicious!

Spring Gowns In Paris Ateliers

IN THE ateliers of the great designers it seems indeed springtime, writes a Paris correspondent of the New York Tribune. One forgets the cold outside. Among tall, green growing plants, great jars of blooms and flower-decked mantles tall manikins pose themselves or walk up and down, gowned in colored silks, satins, transparent voiles, gay, flower-printed sheer mousselines and bordered foulards. Softer than ever—if that were possible—are the stuffs of which these new gowns are built. They are proof, too, that the close-clinging skirts have been definitely abandoned. These new ones are mounted in much fullness, plaited, or gathered to the edge of a yoke, which may be of any shape desired—pointed on the hips, round, in an even line, or slanting short from the back to a knee-length point in front. The top of a yoke ends often at the normal waist line, under a belt, dipping ever so little in front, in the old graceful line once so much liked, or the yoke mounts onto the bodice a few inches, or rises to the depth of a tunic. Then a sash is folded to cover the joining of the skirt and yoke, and tied to a bow at one side with short or long ends. The effect is straight, curveless, like that of a child's gown. Gowns of foulard silk or voiles have long or short skirts, plaited from the belt, all unnecessary fullness being cut away to give the extremely close effect over the hips; below the fullness spreads wide. Or these materials are shirred in close rows to shape a yoke. On the corsage a low-necked yoke is shirred also; there is a wide band of shirring at the tops of the sleeves and again at the wrists, leaving fullness to fall from the elbows.

Nearly all the afternoon gowns turned out by one well-known house on the Place Vendome have the neck finished with a flat turnover collar of plain white linen, of embroidery, of fine lace, or of mull lightly frilled. This same house shows Marguerite gowns. The double skirt is of two materials. The upper one is lifted high at one side into a pretty fullness, held by an ornament, a bow, or a chatelaine pocket of embroidery. The sleeves are extremely tight, and point over the hands. The bodice is closely fitted, but with a curveless waist line, and is cut at the neck in a small square, filled with folds of soft white mull.

There are new skirts, hung in soft plaits from a deep yoke, that in the movement of the walk allow glimpses of another color, in bright contrast, hidden inside the plaits. On a short skirt, hung in flat, double box-plaits, each edge is hemmed with a line of black. Wholly fascinating are new gowns with a quaint, pointed corsage. A tight-fitted lining is covered, seamless, with cleverly handled wrinkles. The long sleeves are of extreme tightness, perfectly molding the arms.

Skirts of dinner gowns, gathered in a round waist line, and open in front to show a tablier, suggest a pannier in the way the front breadths are carried back, looped over the hips, to disappear in the folds at the back. A graceful draping is achieved by two lightly gathered breadths of soft material, hung on each side, open back and front. They are gathered together at the ends into a loose knot, ending in a heavy passementerie ball.

Coats are varied. They continue to be altogether charming, preserving their long, loose lines, full of grace. There are short ones, too, under the old name of bolero, that are youthful and jaunty.

The tailored costume for practical uses is little changed. The short skirt, shaped on flaring circular lines, or laid in nice, flatly pressed plaits from a becomingly adjusted skirt yoke, is worn with a three-quarter single-breasted long coat with small revers, a flat collar and moderate coat sleeves. Later this model will be copied in tussore and in heavy linens for summer journeys. Coats with a side closing that have lately appeared are not likely to prove a success. In spite of their novelty women of taste look at them askance. They have a clumsy appearance and lack the length of line generally desired. Of course silk serge in willow green is a long, loose-fitting coat topping a long plaited skirt of green voile. It has a chasuble effect, with its narrow back and the side seams split to the belt line. The edges have large buttons, from one to another are lacings of coare silk cords. A wide shawl collar finishes the neck and extends to the waist line, where it fastens with one button. The tight sleeves, split a few inches at the back, turn into a pointed rever, held with one button. Lace frills fill the openings and a lace jabot to match fills the open space at the neck.

'Kerchief Fads

HAVE you seen the newest importations in handkerchiefs?" asked one keen shopper of another. "They are simply the cutest things imaginable, and so small they can easily be carried not only in one's glove, but in a watch case. They are made of the finest sheer linen and consist of absolutely nothing but a monogram and some perfume. Goodness knows," she added ruefully, "they cost enough to begin with, and when one loses about one a day handkerchief expenditure becomes perfectly ruinous." These dainty accessories, to which the word "pocket" now is rarely attached, give what the well-dressed woman considers a finishing touch, says the New York Press. There is a wide range in the cost of such articles, those edged with lace or richly embroidered commanding high prices. Among the fastidious initials or a monogram of more or less elaborate designs are regarded as indispensable to mark the property as personal, and of course materially increase the cost. It is no unusual thing for the fashionable woman to buy a moderately priced handkerchief and then order an embroidered monogram costing three times as much.

Joy For the Plump

THE ever-increasing rumor that sweeps across the Atlantic from Paris and warns us of a change in feminine styles which shall do away with straight lines and introduce panniers and petticoats should prove welcome news to those fleshy unfortunates who have suffered untold humiliations this season because of their billowy build, says a writer in the New York Press. Unable to reduce her avoirdupois speedily enough for the sudden advent of the empire and directoire gowns, the stout woman entirely lost her position in the passing show. She has, it is true, provided the comic element in a period of such sameness in dress that all women looked like modifications of one another. Her curves have contributed the only variety to an era of parallel lines. Certainly the time of the pannier costume, when Watteau reigned supreme in the world of fashion, was one of grace and beauty, and a few of his celebrated plaits will be a welcome change from the flat or bunched-up backs that so long have obsessed the public vision. In this case a step backward in the modes, from those of the Directory to those of the beginning of the Revolution, will be regretted by few.

IF PERPLEXED IN MATTERS OF DRESS, BEAUTY OR ETIQUETTE, write to Miss Dean, Miss Morton or Miss Standish, care of the Courier-Journal, inclosing a self-addressed and stamped envelop for reply. This is a quicker method than having your question answered in the columns of the paper. Besides, you receive a personal, intimate answer. Be careful to address your return envelope accurately. Letters come back to us every day, stamped "insufficient address" or "party cannot be found."

Etiquette For the Wife and Mother.

EVERY mother of dignity inspires respect in the hearts of her family. Along with natural affection and the reverence which mere parenthood creates, there is a courtesy displayed toward her on occasions which might almost be called formal.

For example, no grown son who has any regard for the prejudices of the mother will smoke in a parlor where new curtains have just been hung. If he has been brought up like a gentleman he will not smoke at all until he has asked permission.

The daughter who is beginning to have admirers, or who may be married and have children of her own, is equally solicitous for the mother's comforts. No visitors are brought to the house who may give the head of it displeasure. No guest is invited to luncheon or tea until the mother has been consulted and given her consent. She is served first at table, given the most comfortable chair in the drawing-room, listened to respectfully, admired, feted, adored.

A husband who knows what is due his wife will insist upon all the household's respecting her slightest wish. He knows that for an establishment to have dignity the wife and mother must be sovereign ruler in her own home. With the words, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," the parlor curtains were made hers; the dining-room table, with its modest or elegant appointments, were handed over to her with a deed signed by the church. She is a queen, crowned and enthroned, and if there is a family of grown children, for whom she has died many times, as it were, she often wears the nimbus of a saint.

Who are the women who fail in having all this? They are the wives who are not themselves always courteous to husbands or solicitous of their comfort. They are the mothers who did not begin with little exactions of politeness when the children were young.

The trifles of behavior which go toward building up the dignity that inspires home respect are countless. No day can pass in the early moments of married life without attention to them, and while insisting upon courteous forms from children, while conducting oneself in a way to hold the love and honor of the father and husband, the mother must remember that she is working not only for the future of her family, but for the good of all society.

In the home where love and regard rule, there is no likelihood of finding criminals, blackguards and disheartened workers. The very sweetness and dignity of the mother tell of the rightness of the world, give courage, faith and hope, and have their influence upon all who come near. She is the upholder of good government, not the one who fosters anarchy, to its ruin.

Let us begin with the training of husbands.

"Husbands in the main are rather harmless animals if properly managed," remarks Fanny Fern, an ancient and excellent exponder of feminine behavior. Skill and tact, she goes on to declare, are essential qualities for the capture of men, for the hand that would guide things must be always gloved. Being the lords of creation, the hard-worked breadwinners, men naturally resent the idea that the little while at home must be filled up with nagging over trifles. A certain amount of secrecy is necessary for the ragged ends of domestic government. The failings of the cook, the housemaid and the nurse are food for silent thought, the settlement of them the home trials which must go on behind closed doors, as far as the husband is concerned.

Tired John must be met at night with a whole-hearted mercy. The bathroom must be free for his frantic ablutions. There must be a smile, a pretty dress, a good dinner and—when he gets rested—some gentle and trickling talk.

Nothing profound may be indulged in till John is a man again, and the store, the cotton gin or the tobacco factory are far away. A hungry and tired husband does not care a rap if Mars is inhabited, or if hypnotism can make good children of bad. He wants merely to discover the curative properties of appetizing food, the wallowing comfort of the easy chair, and to be made to feel that he is "boss" on his own little planet.

Woman's power over man lies in just this consideration, in the hundred and one little deeds whose roots spring from her heart, and this tenderness—for it all means only that—no husband short of a bear can resist. He may fly off at a tangent for a brief breath, and over nothing, of course. But be silent yourself. Only give him a wistful or smiling look, and after the poor dear has walked around the block he will come back a changed and sanctified being. A clever wife of my acquaintance always says softly when her lord shows signs of heated discussion at home, "Look out, darling, or you will have to walk around the block!"

What does he do? Why, he grins all over, and in five minutes has kissed her seven times.

Children are never too old to be managed with the same sweetness, and the wise mother is she who never lets her fault-finding assume a hateful aspect. "I wouldn't do that, dear, if I were you," with some apt illustration as to the danger of the deed, is lecture enough for a well brought up son or daughter.

The mother who does all this, who never fails in tenderness and courtesy to the husband and children, who is decorous, forbearing and kind in all her home behavior from the day of the church blessing to that of her death, will reap a harvest of confidence, love and respect.

In fact, all the comfort, peace and security of the home depend upon the feminine head of it; so since the home is the most sacred spot of all earth, why not show our best manners there?

CHICORY.

Chicory is one of the most wholesome of the spring salads. The heads with white hearts are the tenderest, and, if liked, after taking off the rough leaves, they may be carefully washed and left whole for the salad. In this case a green dish and a garnish of tender radishes make a pretty effect. For invalids chicory is sometimes boiled in salt and water till thoroughly tender and then drained and served with a cream sauce.

"A Rag and a Bone and a Hank of Hair" Forms Central Theme of Three New Dramas That Will Stir Up New York Town.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

NEW YORK, April 2.—Vampires! Women vampires!! The ancient superstition was that those creatures who came out of their graves at night to suck the life blood of slumberers were masculine, usually if not invariably. Some modern American playwrights, however, have created three vampires, for simultaneous exhibition here in New York this week, who are not buried men kept alive by such hideous nourishment, but sirenic women with a plenty of warm blood of their own to live with, and robbing their victims of hearts and souls, honor and money. Hengette Crosman is the vampire in "Sham," and you know what a healthy, hearty beauty she is; while the vampire in "The Conflict" is not less wholesome, and so there is nothing grewsome in those two women's vampirish absorption of subsistence from their befooled dupes. They take in like soft human sponges rather than harsh ghouls. Their kind of grafter is not rare in the society of fashion and culture. Katherine Kaelred is a much more dreadful vampire in "A Fool There Was," as I will tell you.

Sir Philip Burne-Jones, English painter, made a picture which he labelled "The Vampires." The spectator read in it, at one look, the awful story of a man's destruction by a woman. A young fellow lay limp and wan across a bed. He wore an evening suit lacking the coat, as though he had fallen, spent of strength, when almost dressed for a night's dissipation. Upon his legs sat a beautiful young woman, in a decolette gown of exceeding elegance, as though he had taken her in his lap in fondling admiration, and then had fallen back in a collapse of death. Her face bore a startled look, but no trace of pity or remorse, and her eyes glared into his eagerly, hungrily, gloatingly, as though she would revive him with one more kiss, and so draw from the heart a final draught of his life blood. It was a dreadful picture, as you may have seen when it was brought to this country for exhibition.

Rudyard Kipling, then a journalist unknown as poet or novelist, saw his friend's painting before it was shown publicly. He was acquainted, too, with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the actress, who had posed for the siren vampire. Kipling wrote while taking his first view of the pictorial parable:

"A fool there was and he made his prayer
To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair;
But the fool he called them his lady fair,
This vampire woman who didn't care."

Painting Inspires Drama.

That is the germ, as a mutual friend gives it to me, that grew into one of Kipling's famous poems, although he didn't own up to it for awhile (owing, I believe, to Mrs. Campbell's wrath at its curt summary of her visual points) and to this day it is not included in any authorized collection of his verses. Now the picture, the poem, or both together, have inspired Porter Emerson Brown to write a drama. The audience reads in the programme the Kipling poem in its extended form, before seeing the play, gazes at the Burne-Jones picture after it is over, and goes away profoundly impressed with a tragedy that is being enacted here, there and everywhere in American life.

The drama that lies between those first and last ends of "A Fool There Was" has none of the painter's or the poet's genius; yet it serves very well its purpose of illustrating the destruction of men who are fools by women who are sirens; and Robert Hilliard, with a histrionic patience more than his friends have theirs waiting for his big opportunity, seems to have got it in the character of the vampire's victim. The layout of the action is like this: A New York husband, happy with his wife and child, goes to England on a diplomatic mission of importance. He meets the vampire at the outset of the voyage, but don't see him during his stay abroad, but are told that he is bedeviled by the woman, and when he tardily gets back he has been recalled in disgrace by our Government for neglecting his duty, he is dominated absolutely by the evil creature, and she has absorbed his blood of heart and essence of soul—yes, and vim of body, too—like a veritable vampire fastened on the breast of a sleeping person, and he is a mere wreck morally, mentally and physically. Hilliard does not shirk the artistic obligations of his undertaking. He evades no detail of abject enthralment by the wanton dulls to the point of effeminacy, emasculation, and palliates his matrimonial dishonor in no particular, but gives a bravely true depiction of the once upright husband as a now thoroughly despicable wretch. And all the while the friend who champions his miserable wife and strives to reclaim the husband is the play's likeable man. Hurrah for Hilliard, say I, for putting aside the actor's love of heroics and choosing instead a duty to dramatic art.

* * *

By No Means a Weak Play.

Don't take me to mean, in denying Artist Burne-Jones and Poet Kipling's genius to Author Browne, that "A Fool There Was" is a weak drama. It is very strong in many respects. Its final act, in which Hilliard stills the house to pinfall silence with a feebly resolute struggle to get away from the wanton and back to his wife, is wonderfully engrossing. He is a pitiable wretch, who keeps himself alive with brandy. The friend comes to beseech in vain. Denunciation is no more potent. Vituperation neither. Then the friend, in a forlorn hope to rouse the wretch to some of his former manliness, strikes him in assumed anger, knocks him to the floor, and kicks him as he lies there, unresenting, unresisting and declaring that he deserves it all. His child comes in. That revives the husband's pure love against his foul passion. The wanton elders, takes up the little girl and is about to kiss her. That rouses his sense of decency, and he rescues his offspring from the pollution. At last he is going to tell himself from the beautiful ghoul? No. Left alone with her again, she exerts her seemingly superhuman power over him. The actress Katherine Kaelred, is a stranger from Australia; not young and beautiful, yet not of the tall, sinuous, dark type to be suitable to the role and a proficient artist, has been rehearsed to denote in weird, uncanny ways—by crouching poses and darting movements—by cooing ejaculations that run into fiendish laughter and embraces that quickly shift to ghoulish grasps—until no one is surprised to see him fall lifeless into a low, wide chair, and she pounce down upon him like a famished vampire from her grave, to feed on her victim unconscious on his couch. But he is dead.

The man who is done to death by a vampire woman in "The Conflict" is one of those fools whom the adage says no police can save like-and that's so—and as this old fool is 94 years old, while the killing creature is a show girl three-quarters of a century younger, you see what a superlatively idiotic and doddering senile old fool he is. He hasn't been like that long before he is put to half an year ago he was a physically well-preserved man with the mind of a philosopher unimpaired. We get acquainted with him as a veritable sage, prone to cite himself as an example of well-living, rewarded by almost a century of vigor for having wasted neither time, strength nor money on wicked women. He has looked as abundantly white of whiskers as Shakespeare's frosty and wise Polonius and Adam combined, and his teachings of temperance have been eloquently oracular. Such is Caesare Resapha before he falls down to a show girl whom the playwright doesn't show to us; but we are told that she is no great shakes as a professional beauty nor extra entrancing on her own personal account.

* * *

"Show Girl" This Vampire.

The truth is that old Caesare Resapha wouldn't stump for wealth to poverty, and from health to death, but that the vampire girl is wished onto him under the following peculiar circumstances: Caesare is a business antiquarian. His store is like a museum, except that he makes no charge for a sight of his curios, but sells them to collectors at prices that don't look like a bargain-sale advertisement's figures. In that traffic he has made a fortune. He has had a long while in stock, however, an article that he can't sell nor easily give away. It is a piece of wild ass' skin inscribed in ancient Arabic with the assertion that its owner may have any wish gratified except for a prolongation of life; and that, at the granting of each desire, the piece of skin will shrink and the wisher's term of life will shorten. Caesare won't monkey with that donkey hide for himself; but at length he finds a Raphael de Valentine who, blinded by the glamour of the uncanny thing on trial instead of carrying out his resolve to drown himself.

And it works, for when Raphael wishes that a hitherto cold beauty may warm to him she hurries to him in a frenzy of love, and when he wishes that he may be saved from passionate incineration he becomes comfortable in temperature, but at each of these answers to his desires the skin is sudden smaller, and he has a physical convulsion portending his payment for the favor with a portion of his life. He hates Caesare for imposing the talisman on him, and the next time that the antiquarian boasts of his own reward of strength in old age for not weakening to women's wiles in his earlier years the owner of the magic skin decides to blow in another section of his life on vengeance. He wishes:

"My wish is that Ceasare may fall in love madly with a chorus girl," says Raphael, "and lose his wealth, health and life on account of her."

Raphael is tortured by the customary passion and alarmed to see the magic parchment contract as usual, but it joyed to note also that the Antiquarian at once selects a destroying showgirl.

The Wild Life Begins.

Old Caesare has worn a seer's sort of robe in his Paris shop and borne himself with dignity. Now at a seashore resort he is clad in the latest clothes of a French beau; his hair is cut close and his beard shaven down to a jaunty mustache, and the actor, N. Sheldon Lewis, seems to have aimed at a grandfather of Mansfield's degenerate Baron Chevrial in aspect. He is a pitiful embodiment of senile decay in lechery. He tries to strut but can only totter—to throw out his chest, but can only slump his back. He can't be gallant to his infatuator and is jealous of the young fellow who can. His fortune has gone with his health. He retains his mental balance, though, and deplores the money that the siren absorbs from him along with his life blood. Collapsing on a park bench, he sends a trusty chap to guard her from lusty admirers, while he—poor, anaemic, nerveless old wretch—watches through a field glass her maddening coquetry in a game of tennis. She is flirting. That rouses his ire. He crushes in his palsied hands a bunch of her dressmakers' and milliners' extravagant bills, vowing that he won't pay them with his last remaining money. He totters off on shaky legs, threatening to chastise the fellows who are making free with his show girl, and in a minute the word comes that, with life leeched out of him he has fallen dead at the spurning feet of his vampire.

Isn't it an odd chance by which two such plays of social vampires and their victims are presented simultaneously in New York, not to mention a third yet to be described? I have given full attention to old Caesare and his showgirl in "The Conflict," because they struck me as the salient figures; and they are not the creations of the play's maker, Maurice Samuels, but of no less a celebrity in literature than Honore de Balzac, whose novel of "La Peau de Chagrin" has here been dramatized. The Raphael who acquires the magic piece of an ass' skin, the hero of both book and play—is acted by Robert Drouet, while the two actresses who get into a conflict over him are Helen Robinson and Florence Lester, and those three kept the audience breathlessly attentive to the Balzac tale—for three acts only. Thereafter they were laughed down and out by Samuel's, up-to-date showing of the antiquarian's metamorphosis from a sage Solomon to a whippersnapper dude Johnnie centenarian. A farce of French lecherous decrepitude hadn't been intended; nor yet a burlesque of "A Fool there Was" or "The Vampire;" but the people chose to take for fun as much of the play as they would take at all.

Henrietta Crosman In "Sham."

Contrastingly human and gracious is Henrietta Crosman in her processes of vampiring in "Sham." She personifies that very numerous young woman who, with silk desires and cotton resources, with the tastes of wealth and the restrictions of comparative poverty, undertakes by falsities and deceptions to float along on the social stream until she gets into a harbor of mock security. Hengette Crosman is a facile comedienne, and that fact was regarded by Geraldine Bonner and Elmer Harris when they scened a play for her. The first act displays her in a flat, the adornments of which as she tells us gleefully—she has wheedled from admirers as gifts. For instance, there is a costly clock. She got that, after being late at an appointment with a man, by gazing at it in a shop window and saying: "Bless me, it's half an hour slow. My clock is worn out, you know, and so I couldn't tell the time."

"Will you let me send this one home to you?" he said; and in telling it she added: "He was a Scotchman, too," which tickled the audience terribly.

It is the end of a month, and the bell is rung frequently by bill collectors; but they don't worry Henrietta, for she makes it diversion to bamboozle them. She expects to have a wealthy husband soon, and what does it matter if she does owe $8,000 that she can't pay till then? In the meantime, she calls herself Miss Sponge and Miss Graft, but never Miss Vamp ire—at least, not until she needs to choose between a millionaire suitor whom she doesn't love and a moneyless one whom she does love. Well, she thinks she has the family heirloom pearls, her dead father's wedding gift to her mother, and she decides to sell them, pay her debts and marry the poor suitor; but on taking the jewels from the safe deposit box she finds that her father long ago substituted imitations, and she is without any resource at all, while her lover is a denunciatory despiser of people who keep up social pretensions by means of sham.

It is a pity that "Sham" tapers in instead of broadening, and dissipates its interest in a weakly happy climax. The young woman's debts are paid by rich relatives, thus enabling her to marry the right man considerably sooner than act should be written right off, for as it is, Henrietta Crosman is finely entertaining from 8:30 to 10:15, and with good matter to hang up to it her venture would be wholly successful. However, she doesn't slump with the authors, and at the point of the highest achievement she emits her habitual cuss word.

Henrietta Crosman started with Augustin Daly and soon became so much a duplicate of Ada Rehan as a dashaway comedienne of the legitimate grade that there wasn't room for her there. During some ensuing years, she acquired uncommon facility with Western residents and touring stock companies. Her advent in New York as an exploited actress was in "Mistress Nell," where in the exuberance of an Irish young girl she leaped through a window to escape her enemies, crying "To hell with all of yez!" Hadn't Lester Wallack's habit of interpolation one profane word in each of his gentlemanly roles warranted her in giving an expletive explosion for a climax? The next comedy noteworthy with her was "Kitty Bellairs," and therein, as another lass with Irish accent and vim, she gave startling zest to an act's end with "Bless you all!" I guess she has come to regard a cuss word as her mascot. Any way, on deciding in "Sham" to be no longer a vampire, but to honestly buy all she consumes, she cries out to her clamoring creditors: "I'll pay every damned one of you!"

FRANKLIN FYLES.

IN HER MELODRAMA DAYS.

Miss Rose Stahl, of "The Chorus Lady" fame, has interviewed herself with the following interesting result:

Wait a minute. Honest, I've got to laugh hard before I tell you this, for it was awfully funny and I can remember it distinctly even though it was quite a long ways back. How long ago, did you say? Never mind. Anyway, it was one of the blood and thunder and reinstated right affairs, with villains and heroes and a misunderstood woman, and, yes, there was a chee-ild. I had been in possession of the mysterious bug which directs your thoughts stageward from the age of 16 to 26, for some months at the time, and after talking to every one of the ushers at the local operahouse, and finally getting introduced to the manager, I succeeded in securing an interview with the manager of a traveling company and was engaged for a small part—a very small part it was, at that. You must understand that for some time I had been distributing my hitherto unexploited histrionic talent upon the natives of our village, for that was something of local genius, and in consequence, when it was found out that I was to appear in a real play, the town elite gathered at the temple of mirth to give me a fitting ovation. I had just two lines to say, and after five minutes of rehearsal the evening of the performance, the stage manager told me, to my great delight, that I was "up in the part," and, in fact, that I was letter perfect. One of my lines read: "Mam, the master is coming in," this comprising my duty in the first act, and in the second I was expected to declaim, with fine oratorical effect, in response to a cue from another actress, the words: "Missus, those last eggs we got from the grocer were simply awful." All would have been well, but in my excitement I forgot this line, and it had to be repeated to me from the wings so loudly that the whole house heard it. Then the omnipresent gallery wag shouted: "Never mind, kiddo. They've got nothing on you." Well, I got one of the biggest laughs I ever have secured in all my stage career, and, although I remained with that company all season, they never got over kidding me about that "egg" line.

Attractions At the Theaters This Week.

ELECTRICALLY lavish is the musical comedy, "Three Twins," which is booked to appear at Macauley's to-morrow night for a half week's return engagement. A staff of four electricians, including a chief, is an important part of the company and the numerous illuminated displays in the production require their constant attention. The chief electrical feature is a gigantic merry-go-round and swing which is made brilliant by 1,200 colored bulbs. The placing of this great piece of stage mechanism, weighing three tons, into position requires the exertions of nine men for a space of about four hours—its dismantling about the same amount of time. It is in actual use on the stage for a little over one minute, which is an illustration of the vast painstaking exertions put forth by modern amusement enterprises.

The faceograph is another popular element in the list of things electrical. By means of a complicated system of lights and mirrors the features of one of the prettiest of the chorus girls are reflected on a rear "drop," vastly enlarged, and with the tints of her complexion exactly portrayed. On the sheet the girl is seen to smile, pout or roll her eyes, her lips moving with the words of the song, "The Girl Up There." The chorus girl in question has to insert her head upside down within a small compartment wherein are powerful reflectors.

HENRY W. SAVAGE'S famous original New York "The Merry Widow" company and production will be at Macauley's for the last three days of this week, with a matinee on Saturday. This is the splendid organization intact that was engaged in the record-breaking run the Lehar operetta enjoyed at the New Amsterdam Theater, New York, an engagement that continued for fifty-two consecutive weeks and brought total receipts well in excess of $1,000,000. Mr. Savage purposed sending this New York company only a few of the larger Eastern cities, en route to the extended spring and summer engagement scheduled at the Colonial Theater, Chicago, but at the urgent request of Col. John T. Macauley she consented to arrange the forthcoming brief visit to this city. The very extraordinary success won in Louisville a few weeks ago by Mr. Savage's excellent Southern touring organization may be taken as advance assurance that this notable Gotham company will be greeted here by overflowing audiences.

Concerning "The Merry Widow" itself it is unnecessary to speak in any detail. It is enough to note that not only has Franz Lehar's brilliant work captivated the American music-loving people as has no other operetta in the memory of the present generation, but that all Europe has likewise fallen under the magic witchery of these alluring and haunting melodies. Three hundred cities, covering all part of the civilized world, have declared themselves wholly subject to this merriest, most melodious and maddest of her winsome footlight sex.

The personnel of this cast comprises Frances Cameron, Charles Meakins, Franseska Kasper, Robert E. Graham, Teresa Van Brune, Fred Frear, Louida Hilliard, William C. Weedon, Edith Jones, F. J. McCarthy, Charles Edward Wright, Stanley Jessup, H. J. Rehill.

COMMENCING Monday afternoon, Mortimer M. Theises' "Wine, Women and Song" will be seen at the Masonic, where it comes for a week's engagement. "Wine, Women and Song" possesses all of the popular requirements, fun, song hits, pretty girls, really funny comedians, beautiful costumes, stage setting and electrical effects, and good, light music. Bonita still heads the well-known cast. She is beautiful, talented, amiable and possessed of magnetism. The comedy was especially devised to give scope to the abilities of the many comedians and comediennes of the company. In fact, there are few productions on the road which offers such a variety of highly amusing features as "Wine, Women and Song." Among them are Max Armstrong's Pony Ballet, Theises' Harmonists and the sketch called "The End of the World," or what Tooltsy says. Besides the same limitations produced last season, many new ones have been added, and "Wine, Women and Song" is said to be bigger, better and brighter than ever.

The usual Monday, Wednesday and Thursday matinees will be given.

THE OPERATOR," an intense dramatic playlet, will be presented by Lyster Chambers and Clara Knott as the feature attraction of the Mary Anderson bill, starting with to-day's matinee. This tabloid drama is said to contain on an average a thrill a minute. The unfolding of the story and the intense dramatic situations are said to have an irresistible appeal. Staley and Birbeck's transformation musical novelty, introducing "The Musical Blacksmiths," is an ingenious and effective production. It combines tunefulness and clever amusement in its mechanical and electrical transformation effects.

"Mrs. Murphy's Second Husband," a comedy that has been a laughing success around the world, will be presented by Gracie Emmett, the jolly Irish comedienne, and her company of players. Her supporting company includes Miss Elizabeth Rathburn, Ben J. Miles and Lon W. Carter. Among the other attractions are the Nichols Sisters in a hilarious blackface specialty; Dave Nowlin, the man with the flexible voice, in a series of imitations and mimicry; Lewis and Green in Oscar Lewis' new comedy creation, "Engaging a Cook;" the Worthleys, in a singing and dancing diversity; Jack Hawkins, the college athlete and novelty jumper, and the latest subject in motion pictures, entitled "The Assassination of the Duke de Guise" and "An Awful Shock."

* * *

ONE of the quickest and most decided transformations ever seen in the amusement business in Louisville will be the change of the Avenue theater from a melodrama playhouse to a vaudeville and moving picture show. The regular season closed last night and this afternoon at 1 o'clock the doors will be open again under the new regime. Manager Frank Shriner has prepared some surprises for the patrons of the house. There will be four good vaudeville turns, a complete programme of moving pictures and an illustrated song, all for a small admission.

The vaudeville bill will be headed by Miss Alice Mortlock and company in a comedy sketch called "Billy's Girl." Charles E. Weber will appear in his eccentric juggling turn, and Sam Hood, billed as "The Man from Kentucky," will offer a funny blackface act which is said to be a veritable "scream." The three Reymunds will present a musical comedy sketch called "Miss Little's Twins," which is said to be a sure cure for the blues. The Avenue will be run as a vaudeville and moving picture theater until the opening of the regular dramatic season next August. There will be two performances in the afternoon and two at night. The picture programme will be changed on Sunday and Thursday of each week.

"MORROCCO BOUND" is a two-act satire, which will be presented at the Buckingham Theater this week by Miner's American Burlesquers, one of the biggest shows of the kind on the road. There is said to be a distinctive plot, which permeates the playlet, which, by the way, has been cleverly written, and is replete with song numbers and humorous situations. The dialogue is of the kind that sparkles with laugh and jollity. There is a bevy of good-looking chorus girls, who contribute much toward the pleasing rendition of the piece, which, it is said, is a continuous round of delightful entertainment throughout. In the vaudeville part of the show will appear Gertrude Dyke, "the Little Wight Nest;" Chappel Baker and "the American Quartette," presenting "Uncle Sam's Boys;" Chick and Chicklets, "wizards of the wheel," and Francis and Doherty, in a comedy singing and dancing act. Motion pictures are popular at this house and the patrons look forward to something good each week. The opening performance of this show will be at a matinee this afternoon.

AN ITALIAN PRUNE STORY.

Edmund Breese, who is appearing in Charles Klein's latest play, "The Third Degree," at the Hudson Theater, recently victimized himself. It happened in this wise. A friend of his, knowing Mr. Breese's fondness for the great Italian national dish, spaghetti, told him when he went to an Italian restaurant he could be assured of the best of service if he made use of the following Italian expression: "Una per tutti e tutti peruna," which was explained to Breese as meaning "One for all and all for one." Anxious to air his knowledge of the Italian language, Breese invited a number of his friends to accept his hospitality at an Italian table d'hote. When everyone was seated at the table, he turned around to the waiter and said: "Prunga per tutti," and the waiter replied: "Si, si, Signo." When the dinner was over and the check was presented to Breese for payment, he noticed that there was an item of $2.50 for prunes. Insisting on an explanation for what he considered an outrageous charge, he was informed that he had given orders in Italian to the waiter to serve prunes to everyone present.

HOW WILTON LACKAYE KNEW.

Wilton Lackaye has a host of travel anecdotes. It seems Lackaye and an American friend on boarding an English railway train had entered a compartment which bore the imprint, "No Smoking," and found therein a fussy, dogmatic descendant of John Bull. Lackaye immediately began smoking to the Englishman's evident annoyance. As soon as a guard appeared on the scene, the Englishman entered a formal protest.

"This gentleman has no right to object," remonstrated the actor. "This is a first-class compartment, and he is traveling on a third-class ticket."

The guard hastily instituted an investigation and Lackaye's statements were fully borne out. The Englishman was hastily ejected.

"How did you know he had a third-class ticket?" inquired the actor's American friend.

"Oh, it was the same color as mine," came forth from amidst clouds of smoke.

For Art's Sake Frohman Produces Drama "Strife"

To Please Barrie He Stages John Galsworthy's Powerful Play and Gives It a Wonderful Production In London.

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

LONDON, March 24.—It begins to look as if John Galsworthy were going to have an important chapter to himself when the stage history of our day comes to be written. His first play, "The Silver Box," as produced at the Court Theater, was one of the notable achievements of the Granville-Barker regime, although it was a rather depressing work and not exactly popular. The second, "Joy," was too complex. Its psychology too intricate, its intentions too subtle for present stage use. Perhaps it was ahead of English time and nearer to German requirements. The third, "Strife," which was put on last Wednesday for a trial series of matinees, gives definite evidence that Galsworthy is a dramatist worth more than local attention, and that "The Silver Box" was not merely a lucky fluke.

Evidently the tip had gone forth that the occasion would be interesting, for all the available "intellectuals" were present from Bernard Shaw to Beerbohm Tree, and among Americans from Winthrop Ames, manager of the New Theater in New York, to Chester Bailey Fernard, of "Cat and Cherub" fame.

The play deals with a struggle between the board of directors of a tin mine and their workmen, who have been on strike until they are starving. But there is no physical violence. It is a conflict of ideas and forces, and not of persons, and consequently is disappointing to those who want the limelight focussed on stars. In the circumstances it speaks well for Charles Frohman that he had the courage and good will to produce it. My guess is that he never would have done it if J. M. Barrie had not insisted on it.

* * *

Something About the Play.

We are led to conclude from the argument at the directors' meeting in the first act that the board would yield to the men's demands if it were not for the grim old chairman, who organized the company, has fought the men to their knees many a time before and does not propose to give in an inch now. His son, who is on the board of directors, threatens to vote against him; his daughter, wife of the worried manager of the works, appeals to him on the ground of humanity; a gaunt deputation of workmen demand not mercy but justice, but all in vain. The old man is adamant. He is a fine old fellow, fighting gallantly for what he believes to be a principle, and the men respect him while they curse him.

Then we get the other side of the picture. The strikers, like the board of directors, are almost in revolt against their leader, a haggard, gleaming-eyed socialist. Their union has declined to support them, and they are at the end of their savings. But their leader will budge no more than the chairman. With him it is a matter of principle, worth more than their starved bodies, worth more even than the lives of their wives and children. His magnetic power carries them, but at the moment of his victory the news comes that his wife is dead of cold and starvation. Wild with suffering, he leaps from his platform and dashes through the crowd to his home. The tide turns, and the men vote to appeal to their union to effect a compromise.

* * *

From Capital's Standpoint.

Then we get back to the directors, for a parallel scene. The board votes down the chairman, another old man, broken and bowed, resigns. The strikers, without their leader, come to announce that they, too, will compromise, and then their spokesman rushes in, and learns that he, too, has been overthrown. The picture of the two strong men facing each other in their defeat is one that stays in the mind long after the play is over. As played magnificently at the Duke of York's on Wednesday by Norman McKinnel and Fisher White, it was a big dramatic moment. The representative of the union points out that the compromise just accepted was the very one that both sides had violently rejected before the strife began, and the curtain falls on the old question of what will happen when an immovable body meets an irresistible force.

If the measure of the play is the height of the acting to which it gives rise, then "Strife" is a big play, indeed. It was produced by Granville Barker, and the stage management was a model of its kind. Infinite care being given to every detail.

Marie Dressler Drops $10,000.

Marie Dressler seems to be in a sorry fix over her defunct Aldwych Theater venture, which ran only ten days. From all the information I have been able to gather, she lost close to $10,000. Personally, she has retired temporarily from the scene, and her solicitors are trying to secure time from her many creditors to fix up her accounts. At present, there is only $3,000 in sight to meet debts of $7,500, and it is proposed that the American comedienne be given an opportunity of raising money on future engagements. Presumably, Marie will go back to the halls—where there is big money and no chances to be taken.

At a meeting of the creditors it was said that the actress had sold all her jewelry to pay the salaries of her company, many members of which were up against it" when the suspension of the piece was announced. They had been rehearsing for five weeks without pay, and then received only ten days' wages. A fund for their relief has been started, and something like $250 has already been raised. JOHN AVA CARPENTER.

GREATEST OF DRAWING CARDS

[New York Morning Telegraph.]

All good things must come to an end sooner or later, and so it happens that David Warfield's record-breaking tour in "The Music Master" will reach a full stop early next season.

David Belasco already is making preparations for the next play in which Warfield will appear. As to its nature no man as yet may say, for Mr. Belasco works in secret, with the transoms closed and the keyholes plugged.

To be sure "The Music Master" has not outlived its usefulness, and doubtless will not for another generation. In this connection it is proper to give the receipts during one week of a Warfield engagement at the Academy of Music. They run as follows: February 18, $2,864.25; February 19, $3,179.50; February 20 (matinee), $3,200; February 20, $3,169.75; February 21, $3,200; February 22 (matinee), $3,683; February 22, $3,460.50; February 23 (matinee), $3,425; February 25, $3,425.25. The grand total for the week was $23,711.25. The previous week, without a holiday, or extra matinee performance, the receipts were $25,149.25, and the highest price for seats, excepting the Saturday was $1.50.

In Washington Warfield played a week to $20,894, and there are other engagements quite as interesting from a statistical point of view.

"These figures are absolutely authentic and prove beyond all dispute that Warfield in "The Music Master" is the greatest drawing card in the history of American theatricals.

ABOUT "A BROKEN IDOL."

Otis Harlan, who has been distributing laughter in generous quantities in various leading comedy roles since the early days of the Hoyt farces, and who has been entertaining Chicago audiences for the past nine months in the new musical comedy success, "A Broken Idol," will come to Macauley's Monday, April 12, for an engagement of six days. "A Broken Idol" is the new laughing song-play success by Hal Stevens, Williams and Van Alstune, the scenes of which are laid in California. The action of the play occurs during the Chinese New Year festivities. Among the novelties introduced is a balloon ascension in which the prima donna of the company, Miss Alice Yorke, makes a complete circuit of the atmosphere of the auditorium in a big white silk balloon.

The cast includes among others Misses Margaret Robinson, Birdie Beaumont, Carrie Perkins, George Richards, Otis Harlan, Thomas Rosseirs, David Andrada and Lawrence Comer.

PADEREWSKI ENDS HIS TOUR.

The rheumatism in his right arm from which Mr. Paderewski has been suffering most acutely for the last ten days and which compelled him to cancel a number of his engagements for the week of March 15 and, I regret to say, does not seem to yield to treatment and his physicians have ordered him peremptorily not to touch the piano again for at least a month. On account of this Mr. Paderewski has been compelled with much regret to cancel the eight or ten engagements which remained of his original schedule and will return to Europe immediately.

"GOING SOME" TO BE TRIED.

The Messrs. Shubert announce that the new comedy by Paul Armstrong and Rex Beach, which is to have its New York premiere at the Belasco Theater on Monday, April 12, following the engagement of Blanche Bates in "The Fighting Hope," has been named "Going Some." The end is still snarky open for a few days out of town before going to the metropolis. J. Wallingford Speed is the name of this principal character, a young Yale athlete who, while visiting a ranch in New Mexico, gets into many humorous complications with the cowboys, in addition to forming a romantic attachment for a charming girl from Smith College.

MUST HAVE KNOWN PART.

John F. Sheridan, who died of heart failure at Sydney, Australia, had played "Widow O'Brien" 5,000 times. He was born in Providence, R. I., in 1844. The variety team of Sheridan and Mack toured America for fourteen years. When they parted Mr. Sheridan was engaged to play an insignificant part in "Uncle Ole the Curse of Rum," by George Fawcett Rowe. Through the failure of one of the ladies of the company, says the New York Clipper, Mr. Sheridan was asked to take up a petticoat part, and his immediate success in it formed the turning point in his career. "Fun on the Bristol" was written for him.

SIXTY YEARS AN ACTOR.

Herman Vezin, the veteran actor, celebrates his 80th birthday immediately. He will then have been on the stage sixty years. Vezin was born in Philadelphia, the son of Huguenot settlers. He took a degree in Pennsylvania University. His first appearance on the stage was in Berlin.—[London letter in the New York Clipper.

DEATH COMES TO COL. STONE

Had Long Been a Sufferer From Diabetes.

Once State Auditor and Later Candidate For Governor.

Notable Record As Student At German Universities.

MASON OF HIGH DEGREE.

The long illness of Col. Samuel H. Stone came to an end at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he passed peacefully away, surrounded by the members of his immediate family, at his residence, 815 South Third avenue. The end followed long months of patient suffering, caused by diabetes and bladder trouble, with their attendant complications. Though the news came as a shock to those who knew him, it had been known for several weeks that he could not recover and that his death was a question merely of time.

* * *

Made Success of Life.

By Col. Stone's death Kentucky loses one of her foremost citizens, who was for many years a leader in the State's social, business and political life, a man of wide acquaintance and warm friendships. As a farmer of the Bluegrass, a State officer at Frankfort and as a business man of the State's metropolis, Col. Stone took high rank, making a success of whatever he undertook. Combining the attainments of a scholar with the keen judgment of the practical man of business, Col. Stone amassed a comfortable fortune, but he was not the type of man to make the pursuit of wealth his sole object in life. His career was full and broad and he welded the enjoyment of his home, his friends and his business into one harmonious whole.

* * *

Distinguished Looking Man.

Col. Stone was a man of distinguished appearance, tall and of splendid physique. His personality was engaging, his manner uniformly affable and courteous. A delightful conversationalist, he brought a thoroughly educated mind and an illuminating view to any subject under discussion. He never lost his youthful interest in what was going on about him and counted many of the younger men of Louisville and Kentucky as his warm friends. His club was the Tavern Club, whose membership list is chiefly recruited from among the younger men of the city.

* * *

Long Sufferer From Diabetes.

For the past several years Col. Stone had been suffering from diabetes and bladder disease. Last summer he grew worse and on June 3 his physicians found it necessary to perform an operation. At first it was thought that the operation would prove successful, and after twelve or fifteen weeks spent in the infirmary Col. Stone grew strong enough to leave his bed. For a week or two he was able to be out and attend to his affairs, and his physicians hoped that he was on the high road to recovery. The wound made during the operation refused to heal, however, because of the diabetic complications, and Col. Stone, early in

COL. SAMUEL H. STONE.

December was again forced to his bed. Since then, though stronger at times, his strength gradually failed him.

Tentative arrangements only for the funeral have been made. The honorary pallbearers will be chosen from among Col. Stone's friends in Louisville, and the active pallbearers will be selected from his native county of Madison. On Tuesday morning the body will be taken to Richmond, where the services will be held that afternoon.

* * *

Native of Madison County.

Samuel H. Stone was born at Richmond, Madison county, December 4, 1849, being therefore a little more than 59 years of age. He was a son of Gen. J. C. Stone, at that time a large land owner of Madison county and a man of much prominence and influence in the community. When Samuel Stone was but 9 years of age his father removed to Leavenworth, Kan. Two years later the boy was sent to school at Lee, Mass., where he was a pupil for six years. At the age of seventeen he was pronounced by his instructors ready for college and his father offered him the choice of entering Harvard University, an appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point or taking a course in a European university.

* * *

Student At Heidelberg.

The young man chose to go abroad and in 1866 he matriculated at the University of Heidelberg, where he studied for two years before completing his education at the University of Leipzig. The young Kentuckian not only made an enviable record in his studies, but distinguished himself in the sports and pastimes in which students at the German universities are wont to engage. On the Mensur he became expert and not among all the German youths could be found one who was more skilful than the young American in handling the sword in the unique fencing contests so popular then and now in the universities of that country. He became his fame as a swordsman that a few years ago a German correspondent of a New York newspaper, in speaking of an American student who excelled in the facial slashing student duels, said that he promised to become as noted as Sam Stone, of Kentucky.

* * *

A Twain Hero.

Mark Twain, in writing of his foreign travels in "Innocents Abroad," tells the story of one of Stone's exploits, though giving the hero of the story a fictitious name. During his four years abroad, Col. Stone entered thoroughly into the spirit of student life and made many warm friends among his fellows, keeping in touch with them more or less throughout his life. Only a few years ago, when Dr. Rudolph Leonardt, professor of Roman law at the University of Breslau, came to America to lecture at Columbia University, he took advantage of the opportunity to come with his wife to Louisville and pay a visit to Col. Stone and Mrs. Stone. Dr. Leonardt was a classmate and friend of Col. Stone and the distinguished German scholar was induced to remain here a week, and as Col. Stone's guest, visited the bluegrass region of the State.

* * *

Was An Early Banker.

Finishing his studies, Col. Stone returned from the old country in 1870, going to his father's home at Leavenworth. He began his career by entering the banking business in Kansas City, where his father was largely interested in a financial institution.

Two years later, in 1872, Col. Stone was married, his bride being Miss Pattie Harris, of Richmond, the daughter of John D. Harris. Col. and Mrs. Stone went through life together in unbroken harmony, sharing the inevitable sorrows, and finding in their home and their children constant sources of mutual enjoyment. Both of them being of a social disposition, their home was always one where friends were welcomed at any hour and where their guests were always accorded that hospitality and courtesy that has made Kentucky families of the old school famous.

Col. and Mrs. Stone were the parents of five children. The oldest, a daughter, died in infancy, and two sons, John H. Stone and William H. Stone, died in 1900 and 1901. Besides his wife, Mr. Stone is survived by two sons, James C. Stone, of the Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Company, and Samuel H. Stone, Jr.

* * *

Soon Returned To Kentucky.

After his marriage Col. Stone went West again, but not to remain long. Kentucky's attractions drew him to his native State, and in the latter part of that same year he purchased 1,000 acres of fine land in Madison county and began farming on a large scale. He devoted himself principally to the cultivation of Burley tobacco and the breeding of thoroughbred horses and Shorthorn cattle. In both he was successful, and accumulated a considerable fortune.

In politics Col. Stone was always a Republican, though never a politician in the sense that he constantly sought office or endeavored to wield influence with the party organization.

* * *

Once Candidate For Governor.

His standing in his own community and his wide circle of friends throughout the State made him a desirable candidate for his party to put forward, and he was induced to accept the nomination for Auditor of State in 1895, when he was elected on the ticket headed by former Gov. William O. Bradley. During his term Col. Stone inaugurated many reforms in the management of the State's financial affairs, and his successful administration of the duties of his office led his friends to urge his claims for the Republican nomination for Governor. His name was presented at the Republican State Convention, but the nomination was given to William S. Taylor.

After his retirement from office, early in the year 1900, Col. Stone came to Louisville with his family to make his home. With his sons he organized the Home Tobacco Warehouse Company, which he managed successfully for several years before combining with the Louisville Tobacco Warehouse Company. He was elected a member of the directorate of that corporation and continued to give its active management the benefit of his counsel. He was also financially interested in the Straight Creek Coal and Coke Company, holding the office of secretary. For several years Col. Stone has had the screen mail-wagon contract in Louisville, transporting the mail to and from the railroad stations. His business activities in recent years, however, were limited because of his desire to enjoy a greater amount of leisure.

* * *

Mason of High Degree.

For many years Col. Stone was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and was one of the most influential members. He was interested in all branches of the order, at one time being grand commander of the Knights Templar of Kentucky. In the Scottish Rite branch he took all of the thirty-two degrees, and while his health was good seldom missed a chance to enjoy the fellowship of the Mystic Shriners' ceremonials.

Col. Stone's last public service was as special Commissioner of the United States Court in the cases growing out of the readjustment of freight rates by the Kentucky Railroad Commission. Judge A. M. J. Cochran, of the Eastern district of Kentucky court, appointed Col. Stone for the purpose of hearing evidence and reporting to the court whether or not the new rates were confiscatory. After part of the testimony had been taken the proceedings before the Commissioner were stayed by further proceedings in the District Court and an appeal to the Supreme Court at Washington, where the case is now pending.

SMALL RIOT IN HOUSE

WHEN STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION IS DISCUSSED.

Missouri Legislature To Vote On Constitutional Amendment On April 8.

Jefferson City, Mo., April 3.—The proposed constitutional amendment, establishing State-wide prohibition, was to-day made a special order for April 8 by the House of Representatives of the Missouri Legislature. The matter was brought up in the afternoon session. The Committee on Constitutional Amendments reported the measure to-day, without recommendation. The Democrats tried to force its immediate consideration, but by a strict party vote, the Republicans defeated the effort, 57 to 56. It is claimed the measure will receive 77 vote in the House and 22 in the Senate, and thus pass both branches of the General Assembly.

There was a small-sized riot in the House before the final vote was taken. The Democrats complained that no opportunity had been given to present a minority report on the proposed amendment, and left their seats.

Immediately there was a rush for the door, the Republicans seeking to block the exits. U. G. Crandall, Republican, and H. L. Johnson, Democrats, came to blows, but were separated before any damage had been done. Most of the Democrats left the hall, but later returned.

J. T. Barker, leader of the minority, charged that much of the trouble had been caused by the presence of non-members, who had been brought in to prevent the exodus of the Democrats.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND RETURNS FROM ITALY.

Says the One American Question Now Interesting Europeans Is the Tariff.

New York, April 3.—Archbishop Ireland arrived in New York to-night on La Lorraine, after a five months' stay in France and Italy. He will remain here only a day or two, for he is anxious to reach St. Paul and take up the work of his diocese before Easter.

"The only American question which interest Europe nowadays is the question of tariff," he said. "Every manufacturer and every newspaper abroad is watching the progress of the tariff discussion in Washington with the greatest interest. They hope for material reductions in many lines, which will make possible a considerable broadening of their trade here."

The archbishop declined to discuss the reported illness of the Pope.

NOTED SPANISH ADMIRAL DEAD

End Comes To Pascual Cervera At Real, Spain.

Had Been In Failing Health For Several Months.

Kept Alive In Recent Weeks by Use of Oxygen.

HIS NOTABLE NAVAL CAREER.

Puerto Real, Spain, April 3.—Vice Admiral Pascual Cervera, who commanded the Spanish fleet in the battle of Santiago de Cuba, died here this afternoon.

Vice Admiral Cervera was retired from the active list of the Spanish navy on December 14 last at his own request on account of failing health. Shortly afterward he proceeded to Puerto Real in the hope of improving his health, but during the last month he was in a critical condition, being kept alive only by the use of oxygen and hypodermic injections. He suffered from an affection of the heart.

His Naval Service.

Admiral Cervera was born on February 18, 1839. He was graduated from the Naval Academy of San Fernandino and was commissioned to foreign service in 1859. He served in Morocco and in the Cuban rebellion 1868-78, and was recalled from Cuba to hold the office of Minister of Marine. On the outbreak of the war with the United States he sailed from the Cape Verde Islands with four cruisers and three torpedo boat destroyers on April 29, 1898, entered the harbor of Santiago de Cuba May 19 and lost his entire fleet off that port July 3 in an attempt to force his way through Admiral Sampson's blockading squadron.

Describes His Defeat.

In his own description of the destruction of his flagship and his own rescue from death at that time, Admiral Cervera said:

"The enemy's fire produced terrible damage on board the Infanta Maria Teresa, destroying the elements of defense—among others the net for protection against fire. In this critical moment the captain of the ship, Senor Concas, fell wounded, and it was necessary to withdraw him, I taking command of the vessel because it was impossible to find the second commandant. Immediately afterward they reported to me that my cabin was burning in consequence of an explosion. The fire soon became very great and ignited other parts of the ship. I gave orders to my aide to flood the after magazines, but it was impossible. Dense clouds of smoke impeded walking in the passages and practically any kind of operation. In this situation I could only think of beaching the ship and did so, running aground on Punta Cabrera.

"The contest was impossible on our side, and there was nothing more to be done but to save as much as we could. I thought to lower the flag, but that was not possible on account of the fire, which prevented all operations. In these anxious moments two boats came to the aid of the Maria Teresa, into which a number of us jumped. Those that were not dying were saved with nothing. The Maria Teresa lowered a small boat, which sank before it could be of any service.

"Subsequently the men on this ship succeeded in launching a steam launch, but this also sank after making one voyage to the beach. I succeeded in saving myself, with the aid of two sailors, all of us arriving on board the American ship Gloucester naked."

WITH GREAT REGRET.

News of Admiral Cervera's Death Is Heard In Portsmouth.

Portsmouth, N. H., April 3.—News of the death of Vice Admiral Cervera was received with great regret at Portsmouth, because of his bravery and courtesy. He and other Spanish prisoners of war arrived in Portsmouth on the steamers Yale and Harvard, formerly the St. Louis and St. Paul, in July, 1898. The Admiral and his surviving officers came on the Harvard July 15. After remaining a week they were sent to Annapolis, where they were quartered until arrangements were made to send them to Spain at the close of the war. The Admiral returned to Portsmouth early in September and rejoined the sailors who had been held here. All the Spaniards, except fifteen, who died in camp and were buried on Seavey's Island, sailed for home on the steamer City of Rome on September 12.

Admiral Cervera made many friends while in this country. On one occasion when passing through Boston he was enthusiastically cheered by the crowds who assembled at the railroad stations. During his last visit to Portsmouth he was tendered a complimentary banquet by the citizens. On the eve of his departure for Spain Admiral Cervera thanked the Americans for their kindness in the following letter:

"Portsmouth, N. H., September 11, 1898—To the President of the Associated Press:—My Dear Sir—To-morrow I sail for Spain and I wish to say to you as the representative of the greatest news association in the United States that I sail with my heart full of gratitude for the sympathy shown me by the people of this country. My farewell takes with it every assurance that the memory of this sympathy I shall warmly, actively conserve during the rest of my life.

"I take advantage of this occasion to subscribe myself as your faithful and obedient servant, who kisses your hand. PASCUAL CERVERA."

At the time of the sinking of the Merrimac and the capture of Hobson and his men Admiral Cervera offered to exchange them. This generous action was greatly appreciated by the army and navy officers in Washington, and it laid the foundation for Cervera's popularity in America.

SCHLEY'S TRIBUTE.

Admiral Schley Says Cervera Was a Grand Old Man.

Washington, April 3.—Rear Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, U. S. N., retired, who participated in the capture of Admiral Cervera and his fleet outside Santiago harbor during the Spanish-American War, which provided one of the most thrilling chapters in modern naval history, to-night appeared deeply touched when told of the Spanish Admiral's death, and he took occasion to pay a warm tribute to the chivalrous conduct and splendid character of Cervera when the latter was taken prisoner.

"Well, I am very, very sorry to hear that Cervera is dead," said Admiral Schley. "He was a grand old man, a brave and gallant naval officer, and in his death Spain loses one of her most heroic naval figures. When he attempted to sail out of the harbor on that July 3d morning, Cervera understood the only course left to him, and he acted as wisely as any other could have done under those conditions. It was a case of measuring his strength with that of the enemy, and he lost, losing all save his honor. He was a man of great courage and fortitude. After his capture he resigned himself to the situation, and he was deeply moved by the gentleness which marked his treatment by the officers of our fleet. The hostility which before had been manifested toward him was transformed into charity and kindness, and everything was done to comfort the old man in his sorrowful moments."

FITZGERALD COMES BACK AT BRYAN

SAYS HIS DEMOCRACY IS OF A DIFFERENT BRAND FROM THE COMMONER'S.

Washington, April 3.—Representative John J. Fitzgerald, of New York, who gained considerable prominence by the adoption of his amendments to the House rules, and who at the same time brought down upon himself and twenty-two followers, the wrath of the so-called regular Democrats, issued to-day the following peppery reply to William J. Bryan's criticism for his action, which recently appeared in The Commoner:

"With his usual rashness, Mr. Bryan rushes in where angels might well fear to tread. His statement that I am not a representative of my party would have come with better grace if made when my speeches were being selected as Democratic campaign documents in the last two national campaigns. It would be more convincing if he had marshaled incidents in my ten years' service in the House of Representatives to justify his assertion.

"If Mr. Bryan means that I am not a representative of the Democratic party as Democracy has been understood and professed by himself, I shall not challenge his statement. My political convictions and beliefs are more in accord with the Democracy of those men who twice made possible Mr. Cleveland's election as President, than with the latter-day radicalism of the West.

"As to the personal references in Mr. Bryan's statement to my sense of propriety and respect for my party I have only to say that if the Democratic party had given me three opportunities to become President and I had failed as dismally as Mr. Bryan has, even if I did not have the sense to do so, yet the obligation of gratitude to my party would compel me to remain silent about matters of which I was grossly ignorant."

GOVERNOR PROHIBITS EXPORTATION OF ARMS.

Port of Spain, April 3.—The Governor of Trinidad to-day issued a proclamation prohibiting the exportation of arms, ammunition, gunpowder and military and naval stores. This action was taken, it is believed, in view of the probable arrival here at an early date of former President Castro, of Venezuela.

MANY CHANGES IN PAYNE BILL

Ways and Means Committee Prepares Amendments.

Standard Oil Company's Interests Protected.

Special Rule To Be Brought In Monday.

STANDPATTERS NOT SATISFIED

Washington, April 3.—[Special.]—By a strict party vote the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee to-day retained in the Payne bill the countervailing duty on petroleum in the interest of the Standard Oil Company. Also by a party vote the schedule in the Payne bill on boots and shoes will stand. The tea and coffee taxes were unanimously stricken out as was also the countervailing duty "joker" in the lumber schedule.

The minor committee amendments were generally increases over the bill as it was reported to the House. For instance, collars and cuffs per dozen are raised from 30 to 40 cents. Wire under 16 guage from 1½ cents a pound to 1¾ cents. Fluorspar goes from 50 cents a ton to $1.50; Swedish (charcoal) iron is raised from $6 to $10 a ton. The paragraph prohibiting prizes in the tobacco schedule was stricken out and the present law reinstated.

The committee meeting was attended by the full committee, Republicans and Democrats alike. The Democrats offered numerous amendments seeking to make a Democratic measure out of the tariff bill, but to no purpose.

* * *

Bill May Pass This Week.

The rule will be brought in Monday and the bill may pass the House one week from to-day. The Republicans have not yet decided exactly what their bill will contain. As the committee has stood by its original Standard Oil proposition as well as that on boots and shoes it is unlikely that a vote can be obtained upon these propositions. There will be votes on lumber and hides as well as all the changes which the committee has made. The insurgent Republicans are meeting several times daily trying to perfect an agreement between the lumber and coal people. If they are outvoted on the lumber proposition and lumber is placed on the free list they are threatening to vote against the Payne bill on final passage. This is especially true of the Southern Republicans from North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky and West Virginia and a few scattering.

Should the rule permit, the Democratic members of the Ways and Means, when the motion to recommit is made, will advocate the reduction of the schedules to a revenue rate, strike out the duty on petroleum and ask that the rates in the Payne bill be the maximum instead of the minimum of the measure must stand. Until the Rules Committee shows its hand, however, the course of the minority cannot be foretold except in the three proposition enumerated above.

* * *

Republicans Revolt.

Fearing that the demands which they have made for an opportunity to vote on some of the principal schedules in the Payne tariff bill might result in changes which they consider more disadvantageous than the provisions now in the bill, nearly thirty Republican members of the House met to-day and agreed upon the changes which they desire to have submitted in the form of committee amendments.

At the same time the meeting of all the members of the Ways and Means committee was in progress to pass upon the amendments which the subcommittee of Republican members had submitted.

Intimating that they would vote against any rule to restrict amendments to the Payne bill unless the changes they desire are provided for by the Ways and Means Committee, the Republicans who met to-day decided to send the following petition to Chairman Payne:

* * *

The Insurgents' Petition.

"To the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee:

"The undersigned request your committee to present the following committee amendments to the Payne tariff bill:

"An amendment providing for a duty of 45 cents a ton of 2000 pounds on coal and striking out the provision for reciprocity.

"For a duty of 25 cents a ton on iron ore.

"For a duty of $3 a ton on pig iron and scrap iron.

"For a duty of 10 per cent. on hides.

"The amendment to the lumber schedule to be confined to the proviso.

"A rule which will provide for the above will receive our support."

It was claimed by the leaders of the movement that fully fifty signatures of Republican members would be subscribed to the petition by Monday. Representative Hughes, of West Virginia, presided over the meeting of Republicans, which was attended by three of the members of the Ways and Means Committee—Representatives Fordney, of Michigan; Cushman, of Washington, and Gaines, of West Virginia. Those present have been most prominent in advocating certain changes in the bill. Their opposition is largely responsible for the delay in taking up the measure under the five-minute rule.

Want To Offer Amendments.

A number of these members contended that their desire was merely to permit the offering of amendments to the lumber, hides, iron ore and coal schedules in order that there might be a vote on them. That such a vote might result in placing lumber on the free list and that the other changes sought might be defeated, became evident during the past few days. It was, therefore, decided that the best way in which to bring about the changes desired was to have the rule which is to be brought in on Monday restrict amendments to those which the Ways and Means Committee will report, and have that committee include the five amendments asked for in the petition.

Besides the three members of the committee, the following Republicans were present at the meeting:

Representatives Hughes, Woodyard and Sturgis, of West Virginia; Keifer, Kennedy, Johnson and Thomas, of Ohio; Ellis and Hawley, of Oregon; Loud and Young, of Michigan; Moorehead, Cowles and Grant, of North Carolina; Focht, Barclay and Wheeler, of Pennsylvania; Howland, of Utah; Mondell, of Wyoming; Langley, of Kentucky, and Humphreys, of Washington.

* * *

Change In Lumber.

The Ways and Means Committee to-day, upon motion of Mr. Fordney, of Michigan, decided to report an amendment striking out the countervailing duty proviso on lumber and in their petition the opposition express the desire that the rule for considering the tariff bill will limit amendments in the lumber schedule to the proviso. This would make it impossible to have a vote on the question of free lumber or to raise the duties to what they are under the Dingley law.

It had been the impression that the Ways and Means Committee would report an amendment placing the same duty on scrap iron as the bill provides for pig iron, it having been contended that no pig iron would be imported under the provisions of the Payne bill, which places a duty of 50 cents per ton on scrap iron and a duty of $2.50 per ton on pig iron. Under the Dingley law both articles pay a duty of $4 a ton. The petition seeks to have the duty fixed at $3 a ton on both.

* * *

To Vote Against Rule.

All the Republican members except four who were present at the meeting which decided on the petition expressed their intention of voting against the rule to be reported on Monday unless the committee offers their amendments. The West Virginia members are particularly determined to have the reciprocity provision, permitting the free entry of coal from countries which impose no duty on coal from the United States, stricken out, and the duty on bituminous coal, including culm and slack, fixed at 45 cents per ton of 2,000 pounds.

The Payne bill, as reported, makes the duty the same as in the Dingley law, with the exception that slack and culm are included under the same rate. The Dingley law provides a duty of 15 cents per ton of twenty-eight bushels on coal slack or culm.

Besides taking off the duty on tea and the countervailing clause for coffee, the Ways and Means Committee to-day decided to report numerous other amendments reducing the duties in the original bill. The duty on peas was reduced to 25 cents per bushel, 15 cents less than at present. Evergreen seedlings and clove stems were placed on the free list. The phraseology of the paragraph defining the term "cotton cloth," and the method of determining the count of threads to the square inch, which would have increased the duty on cotton cloth 200 or 300 per cent., was amended to read the same as in the Dingley law.

* * *

Patent Section Stricken.

Finding that Section 41 of the Payne bill, which provides that a patent issued by the United States to a citizen or subject of a foreign country shall be subject to the same conditions imposed by that country on a citizen of the United States, was in violation of an international convention which precludes any discrimination against foreign citizens in the patent laws, the committee decided to strike out that section.

The section which prescribes that no packages of tobacco or cigarettes shall be permitted to have packed in, attached to or connected with them any article other than the manufacturer's wrappers and labels, the internal revenue stamp and the tobacco or cigarettes was amended to conform with an amendment that was made to the Dingley law. The object of this section is to prevent the use of coupons or other premiums, but it was claimed that the Payne bill would prevent the use of union labels.

* * *

Duty On Rice.

On motion of Mr. Broussard, of Louisiana, an amendment was agreed to making dutiable all rice coming from the Philippine Islands. It was contended that the Philippines, which do not raise sufficient rice for their own consumption, would take advantage of the free trade provisions of the Payne bill to send their rice to this country and import the cheaper rice of Japan and China for their home consumption.

Specific duties are provided by the amendments for dulcia and saccharine, on which the duty was changed from 25 per cent. ad valorem to 50 cents a pound. Minor changes were made in the paragraphs covering linoleum, horsehair goods, wood pulp and print paper, cutlery and wire. The duty on charcoal iron is increased to $10 a ton, while all glues are assessed at 25 per cent. ad valorem. Guernsey ware, jacquered figure curtains and table covers are especially provided for.

The Dingley rates on collars and cuffs are restored, while shoestrings have a special duty of 50 cents per gross pairs and 10 per cent. ad valorem added. A reduction of 10 per cent. ad valorem is made on the duty of photographic papers. Several crude gums for making varnish are placed on the free list. A duty of fifteen-hundredths of a cent per pound is imposed on nitrate, or sulphate of iron, which was on the free list. The duty on crude and manufactured fluorspar is fixed at $1.50 per ton. Net and netting machinery is included in the paragraph which permits the free entry of all embroidery and lace-making machinery until July 1, 1911. An increase of 50 per cent. ad valorem is made in the duty on briar root and briarwood, while the duty on carbon electrodes used for manufacturing is lowered 15 per cent. ad valorem.

Representative Harrison, of New York, moved that wool, lumber, refined sugar, coal, zinc ore and the entire steel and iron schedule be placed on the free list, and the duties on gloves and hosiery be retained as in the Dingley law. No one else voted for the motion. An amendment proposed by Mr. Underwood to strike out the countervailing clause on petroleum and a motion offered by Mr. Clark, of Missouri, that leather and leather goods be placed on the free list also failed. The Ways and Means Committee will have another meeting before the Payne bill is considered for amendment.

GERMANS CHARGE MISREPRESENTATION

COST OF MANUFACTURE OF HOSE GIVEN INCORRECTLY.

AMERICANS GIVE BIASED FIGURES TO INFLUENCE TARIFF.

STATEMENT SENT TO SENATE.

Washington, April 3.—Statements made before the Ways and Means Committee of the House by the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers touching the relative cost of production in their lines of manufacture in Germany and this country are controverted strongly in the reports furnished to Ambassador Hill by the German Foreign Office, which made it a point to secure information on this subject at the request of this Government.

The data gathered in Germany under official auspices is now before the Senate Committee on Finance, which is looking into it carefully during the consideration of the House tariff bill. A member of the committee to-day pointed out from the information furnished by Germany some of the inconsistencies in the statements made on the respective sides. He called particular attention to the statement of the Association of Knit Goods Manufacturers of Chemnitz, which took up in detail four classes of men's and women's lisle and cotton hose, showing in each case the amount of protection which the Germans assert the American manufacturer now enjoys over the landing cost of imports.

The German association asserts that the figures presented by the American association regarding German costs of production are wrong in every particular and partly misrepresented in a grossly unscrupulous manner. The selling prices, quoted for every one of the four specimens, the German association says, are too low, and consequently the ad valorem duties levied upon them are stated much too low also. The Germans say absolutely wrong and lacking all foundation are the quotations of Saxon wages. They have simply been entered at 30 per cent. of the American rates. A procedure so entirely lacking any kind of foundation cannot be taken seriously and condemns itself. The German association says:

"The four examples put forward by the national association have, of course, been intentionally chosen so as to make the American product appear as dear as possible. They refer to goods, the manufacture of which on that side can only be domesticated with difficulty, and that are produced on especially fine complicated machines for the operation of which it is that skilled hands are at present not forthcoming."

The Chemnitz Association combats various statements made before the committee, saying among other things that the cost of living has risen at least to the same extent for the Saxon as for the American workman, if anything to a greater extent. It is years since any cottage labor has existed in the knitting trade in Germany. Manufacturing is only carried on in factories, some larger, some smaller, and stories of starvation wages, unlimited working hours and the cooperation of all the members of a family belonging entirely to the past. It asserts:

"The Saxon wages have been taken at much too low a figure. Doubtless wages reports sent in by the American consul here are assumed. There are one sided, apply only to a few single, especially selected, cheap lines and originate from a few non-representative small manufacturers. On the part of Chemnitz manufacturers, information was declined to the consul. The statement of German wages, it should be said, only quotes the mere knitting wages, whereas the American rates comprise also the wages for seaming, subsequent to the knitting process; this circumstance renders a comparison difficult, and for the above reason the comparative statement is incorrect. The knitting wages for the same article differ in this market also because old and new machines of entirely differing efficiency are employed. The American statement of Saxon wages considers the lowest rates, which only apply to the very latest machines.

"The American wages and weekly earnings that are quoted apply in nearly every case only to lines that are only manufactured in America to a small extent."

PALM SUNDAY

To Be Elaborately Observed By Louisville Churches.

BLESSING OF THE PALM AT THE CATHEDRAL OF ASSUMPTION.

FIRST COMMUNICANTS AT THE CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL.

MUSIC AT OTHER CHURCHES.

Palm Sunday will be observed in all the Roman Catholic and Episcopal churches of Louisville to-day with impressive services to commemorate the triumphal entry of Christ into Jerusalem. Fair skies and warm weather were indicated for this section by the Weather Bureau yesterday, and if the promise does not go amiss the attendance at all the churches where special services and exercises are held will be large.

The musical programmes in all the churches where Palm Sunday will be observed are to be elaborate.

At the Cathedral of the Assumption, on Fifth street, near Walnut street, the solemn blessing of the palm has been arranged to take place at 10 o'clock this morning, a half hour in advance of the custom. The Passion will be sung and the mass will follow at 10:30 o'clock. The singing of the Passion is only arranged for in churches where there are a number of priests stationed. It is nearly always read, but at the Cathedral to-day it will be given by vocalists, which will make the final morning services among the most impressive arranged in commemoration of the day.

Elaborate preparations have about been completed for the holy week services at the Cathedral of the Assumption. Services will be held Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday. Thursday and Friday mornings they are scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock and on Saturday at 6:30 o'clock. The services to be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday will be evening services.

Bishop Maas Blesses the Oils.

Not once during the past five years has the custom of blessing the oils for the sacraments in the cathedrals been observed here. It is said that Bishop McCloskey has been unable to stand the strain of these services during the past five years, and consequently Bishop Maas, at Covington, has been taking care of this most essential part of the holy week exercises for this diocese. Father Melody has been commissioned special envoy to bring the oils here from Covington, and it is likely he will be called on to perform the mission this year.

At St. Patrick's church, at Thirteenth and Market streets, four masses will be held this morning at the usual hours. The first will begin at 6:30 o'clock, the second at 8 o'clock, the third at 9 o'clock, and the final mass at 10:30 o'clock. During the final morning exercises the palms will be distributed while the mass is being sung by the Rev. Father J. B. Ford. All the exercises will be conducted by the Rev. Father J. P. Cronin.

* * *

Services At St. Frances.

The services at St. Frances church of Louisville on Cavewood avenue, near Frankfort, in East Louisville, are to begin at 7:30 and 10 o'clock this morning, respectively. Vespers will be held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Special efforts have been put forth at St. Frances church this year to make the celebration of Palm Sunday a memorable success. The Rev. Father Thomas C. White, who will conduct the two services in the morning, has arranged for the distribution of the palms at the 10 o'clock service. Rosewige masses will be sung.

The solemn blessing of the palm will take place at 10 o'clock this morning at St. Boniface church on Green street, near Jackson street. Solemn levitical mass and the singing of the passion will be the impressive features. The last English sermon of the Lenten series will be given at this church to-night. During Holy Week the Tenebrae will be sung at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon the first three days of the week. The Way of the Cross will be made on Wednesday night at 7:30 o'clock. Solemn levitical high mass in conjunction with procession to repository has been arranged for Thursday morning. Devotion to the blessed sacrament has been arranged for Thursday night. At 5:30 o'clock Friday morning there will be services with the singing of the passion and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Way of the Cross will be observed with all the members of the Franciscan community following. At 7:30 o'clock Friday night the last German sermon of the Lenten season will be given. WITH THE MOVING PICTURE SHOWS

At the Casino.

One of the most spectacular and sensational racing films ever shown in a moving picture theater will be the headliner at the Casino for the first half of this week. The picture is called "The Jockey's Reformation," and the climax is exciting in the extreme. "The Settlement Workers" is the title of an interesting film which will show how this organized charity conducts its work in many of the world's great cities. All of the views were taken from life instead of being posed by actors for the film makers. "Every Lass a Queen" is a beautiful colored Pathe picture, showing subjects that are exquisite examples of the motion picture industry. The things which happen in a household when the master is away will be amusing pictures in the comedy film, "Martin Leaves Home for a Week." Cary Taylor will sing a new illustrated song.

* * *

Princess Theater.

The old story of "The Preacher and the Bear" will be given in a new guise at the Princess Theater for the first half of this week on the Cameraphone. This is one of the best subjects, it is said, that the Cameraphone people have ever put out, and the incidental music and talking form a comedy which is decidedly entertaining. The Andalusian dancers, La Sirenita and Senorita Arriaza, who made such a big hit last week on the Cameraphone, will be seen again with another dancer added. The languorous Spanish music which is incidental to the subject adds very much to the attractiveness of the picture as a whole. A German comedy sketch, a la Weber and Fields, called "The Red and the Green Light," is another selection which should please the Princess' patrons. There will be four new first-run films and a new illustrated song.

* * *

Hopkins' Theater.

Comedy pictures are in the foreground on the bill at the Hopkins today. They are "The Smoking Lamp," a subject portraying "snake" dreams of a man who has been "boozing;" "The Irresolute Man," humorously depicting a man who continually changes his mind; "The Bunco Steerer," a clever "sise-up" of the "confidence" game, and "Need of Gold," dealing with the vexatious money question.

Lovers of strong dramatic action will find in the subject, "The Voice of the Violin," a worthy demonstration of this class of entertainment. Anarchism plays a vital part in the plot, in which the central figures are a poor music master and a wealthy pupil, whom the musician loves. "Snowstorm Aftermath in Paris" presents a series of beautiful views of a section where snowstorms are infrequent.

Bert Williams' popular song hit, "You're in the Right Church, but in the Wrong Pew," will be given by Harry Browne. It should easily prove a splendid vehicle for the well-known singing powers of the Hopkins' soloist.

* * *

At the Majestic.

One of the greatest Western pictures ever seen in Louisville will be a feature of to-day's programme at the Majestic Theater. It is one of Edison's latest and best productions and carries the title of "The Western Frontier." To-day will be the first time this picture has ever been thrown on canvas outside the great Edison studio.

Another splendid picture, and one that all should see, especially the young, is Pathe's "Evil Companions." This picture has a great moral lesson and every mother and father in Louisville should see to it that the children have the opportunity of enjoying the picture.

An array of comic pictures is included in the Majestic programme for to-day. There will be four of them and every one is a scream.

The Majestic orchestra—four pieces—will play new music to-day. The big musical festival held at the Majestic last evening was a grand success and hundreds of people enjoyed it to the fullest.

PRESIDENT ABANDONS TARIFF FOR GOLF LINKS.

With Sherman As Partner, Taft Defeats Army Officers In Good Game.

Washington, April 3.—After having a brief conference in the red room of the White House with Speaker Cannon and Chairman Payne, of the House Committee on Ways and Means, President Taft decided this afternoon to forget tariff for a while, and went out to the Chevy Chase links for the second game of golf since his inauguration.

Accompanying the President were Vice President Sherman, Gen. Edwards, Chief of the Insular Bureau, and Capt. Archibald Butt, the President's aide. The President and Vice President played against Gen. Edwards and Capt. Butt, as they did on Saturday last, when the army officers ungallantly defeated their distinguished opponents. The President declared that he and Mr. Sherman would get even to-day.

The President made good his threat, and with Mr. Sherman won out against the army officers 2 up and 1 to play at the seventeenth hole. The President displayed great skill throughout the game and led his fellow-knights of the brassey by a good margin in the list of individual scores.

VINCENZO GERACI IS PLACED UNDER ARREST.

Threatening letters were sent to the physician and Geraci's arrest followed when he called for the money.

STORY OF LIFE.

James H. Parrish On Stand In His Own Behalf.

TELLS STRUGGLE TO ASCENDENCY—THEN CRASH.

ENDURES GRILLING CROSS-EXAMINATION BY STATE.

LETTER CAUSES SENSATION.

Owensboro, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—For more than a year the nerve of Jas. H. Parrish, president of the defunct Owensboro Savings Bank and Trust Company, that failed with deposits of $1,0?0,09?, sweeping away the savings of a lifetime of many depositors, has caused scores of his fellow-townsmen to wonder. His step has never ceased to be light, and he continued to whistle and appear as blithe and gay as he was when he was regarded as the most successful banker in Kentucky. To-day at Owensboro, where he is on trial for receiving deposits when he knew his bank to be insolvent, he appeared to lose his nerve. He was driven to bay by County Attorney C. M. Finn, of Owensboro.

* * *

Story of His Life.

Parrish told the jury the story of his life from the time he was born, fifty-three years ago, at Mt. Washington, in Bullitt county, until the Owensboro Savings Bank and Trust Company, of which he was the president, failed. It was a graphic story of leaving Bullitt county when he was 10 years of age and coming to Owensboro. He attended the public schools for six years, and then went to work in a newspaper office in Owensboro and learned to be a printer. After a few years' work in the newspaper office he was employed by T. S. Anderson in the Owensboro Savings Bank as a messenger boy. His aspirations were higher. He was ambitious. He was soon promoted. By frugalness, he accumulated enough money to become a stockholder in the bank. Anderson decided to leave Owensboro, and it was then that Parrish and others bought the savings bank. He told the jury how the capital stock of the institution was raised and how the deposits increased. He got down to the days preceding the failure. He denied emphatically that the bank was insolvent, and said he told every depositor that came for his money that the bank was perfectly solvent. He denied that he told H. H. Howey, of Central City, that the bank was "gutted." He said that he thought T. S. Anderson owned enough property in Detroit to make good his (Anderson's) indebtedness to the bank.

Went Over Bank.

Parrish went over the notes of the bank and gave his opinion as to their value. He admitted that he did not know of his own personal indebtedness to the bank at the time of its failure, but said that he knew he was good for all of it. Parrish went at length into the details of various transactions of the bank. When asked the reason for the failure of the bank, he said that the panic of last year had drained the institution of its currency. Parrish's direct examination continued for four hours, and it was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when he was turned over to the prosecution.

* * *

Bitter Cross-Examination.

Mr. Finn conducted the cross-examination and went along in an easy manner for quite a while. Finally he handed Mr. Parrish a letter from his brother concerning a coal land deal and asked him if it was from his brother, A. L. Parrish, now of Buffalo, N. Y. The witness admitted that it was from his brother, and Mr. Finn asked that it be filed as evidence and read to the jury. Counsel for the defense read the contents of the letter and offered no objection to it going before the jury, saying that it was unimportant. So it went until Parrish had the defense was not prepared for the next move. Mr. Finn pulled another letter from his pocket and showed the witness the signature and asked him if his brother's signature was attached to it. Witness admitted that it was. He also admitted that the letter was addressed to and received by him.

"I offer this letter as testimony and ask that it be read to the jury," said Mr. Finn.

* * *

Had Damaging Effect.

Attorneys for the defendant secured the letter and read it. They were dumbfounded. They began a vigorous objection against the admission of the letter. Chief Counsel Slack went so far as to tell Judge Kelley time and again, saying that it was incompetent and would have a very damaging effect upon his client if allowed to be read. The court agreed with Mr. Slack as to the effect the letter might have upon the jury, but disagreed with him as to its competency.

Judge Kelley called Mr. Slack's attention to the fact that Mr. Parrish had testified that no one had ever suggested to him or talked to him about the insolvency of Mr. Anderson and the various Seven Hills manufacturing institutions, and that this letter contradicted Mr. Parrish' statements upon these questions and that it was clearly competent to go to the jury.

* * *

Letter Read To Jury.

The letter was ready to the jury. It discussed a consolidation of the Owensboro Savings Bank and Trust Company with the Daviess County Bank and Trust Company. One paragraph of the letter is as follows:

"I am a little afraid you are going to overlook 'cleaning up' the weak paper we are discounting such as Seven Hills Brick Company, Price Manufacturing Company, Chamber Suite Company notes, and notes on said stock and Deane's. This is enough at present to show what I refer to. If we are full handed it is liable to make you forgetful concerning the weak spots."

The letter further warns James H. Parrish to be sure to "clean up" the weak paper in the Daviess County Bank and Trust Company before we get under it. I refer to T. S. Anderson and T. S. Venable.

He also warns his brother to get out of all other business and devote his time to "your problem there at corner of Main and Allen."

The Commonwealth will continue the cross-examination of Parrish on Monday morning. It is believed that the defense will conclude by Tuesday at noon. The case will probably go to the jury by Thursday.

HORSE SCHOOL

Remount Depot Furnishes Steeds For Army.

ABANDONED OKLAHOMA FORT USED FOR WORK.

NOTHING BUT KINDNESS SHOWN UNTRAINED COLTS.

NO "BREAKING" IS ALLOWED.

When Gen. J. B. Aleshire, quartermaster general of the United States army, was regularly attached to the cavalry service he believed the usefulness and longevity of army horses could be greatly increased by the establishment of a remount depot service similar to that of a number of European countries.

Largely because of Gen. Aleshire's recommendation a remount depot was established at this abandoned military garrison last year, writes a Ft. Reno (Okla.) correspondent of the Kansas City Star. It is the only remount depot in the United States. If it proves a success others will be established.

In the United States army, especially in the cavalry branch, the problem of getting the best results at the least cost has always been troublesome. The average farmer is reluctant to part with a horse before it is 7 or 8 years old. The average length of service of a cavalry horse is about eight years, which brings him to the age of 14 or 15 years, when he is condemned and sold. At the remount depot it is estimated that 50 per cent. is added to the length of a horse's service if he can be acquired as a 4-year-old.

The remount service is buying horses as young as 2½ years. These colts are carefully tended and trained, until at 4 years they are ready for the cavalry or the artillery.

The present capacity of the remount depot is 1,200 horses, which may be largely increased by the building of additional stables. The depot is situated on almost 10,000 acres of beautiful prairie land. The old barracks buildings have been changed into stables, and in addition two new stables have been built. Because of his knowledge of horses the command of the depot was given to Capt. L. Hardeman, of the quartermaster general's department, with Lieut. W. P. Ennis, of the First Field Artillery, as assistant.

The spectacular feats of the broncho "buster" on Western ranches and in Wild West shows have no place in the work that is being done at the remount depot. If possible, no horse is ever permitted to know that there is such a thing as bucking or pitching, the idea being to train him, not break him. Gentleness is employed at all times.

The belief is common that the Western horse is naturally wild and vicious, but it is not accepted by Capt. Hardeman, who points to Montana range horses at the remount depot that have been made as gentle and reliable as the driving horse of a farmer.

At Fort Reno a young horse is first haltered, and a gentle effort made to lead him. He is petted and caressed, to gain his confidence. He soon grows accustomed to the halter, and finally the bridle. His legs are stroked, and in time his trainer is able to handle the horse's feet. Then a blanket is placed on his back, and this gives way to the saddle, and the horse is taken to his stall, where he stands saddled for hours at a time. Next comes the mounting. Unaccustomed to weight in the stirrup, or a man on his back, the horse is inclined to shy. The trainer, however, puts his foot into the stirrup many times before mounting. Once in the saddle the rider then teaches obedience to the bridle, and the three gaits required of every army horse—walking, trotting and galloping.

The requirement that army horses be bought by contract has been lifted for the remount depot, and Capt. Hardeman authorized to buy in the open market. Every horse for the army must be at least fifteen hands high and weigh 850 pounds. A total of 900 horses has been bought, of which 600 are now at the depot, the others having been shipped to the different garrisons. The horses come from Montana, Kentucky, Missouri, Colorado, Texas and Oklahoma. The Oklahoma horse is seldom desirable, because of his small size, due to breeding the old time range ponies.

For sick and injured horses, a hospital is maintained at the remount depot in charge of an experienced veterinarian. Distemper is a common disease, and is resisted by the Pasteur treatment. All horses are treated immediately upon their arrival at the depot, to make them immune.

Civilians are employed as riders and trainers, and are given $30 a month, together with board, lodging and medical attendance. These "woollies," as they are called, are each assigned ten horses to train.

DIES WHILE CHATTING WITH FRIENDS IN ROOM.

Death Comes Suddenly to Emile J. Monnier, Who Succumbs to Heart Disease.

Emile J. Monnier, who resided at 318 Twelfth street, died suddenly between 11 and 12 o'clock last night while on a social call in the room of his friend, Thomas Sharp, over the Bluegrass exchange on Fifth street, between Market and Jefferson streets. Monnier had gone to Sharp's room early in the evening, where several others had congregated to spend a few hours chatting. While seated, and without warning, Monnier fell from his chair. He died before a physician could get to him. It is believed that heart failure, superinduced by acute indigestion, caused his death.

The Coroner was notified of Monnier's death, but he will not view the body until this morning. The body was removed to Neurath's undertaking establishment. Monnier was 40 years of age and had been employed at the store of the Kaufman-Straus Company for many years. He leaves no family.

SPENCER COUNTY GOES "DRY" BY 564 VOTES.

"Wets" Put Up a Good Contest In Goodwin Springs Precinct; Losing By One.

Taylorsville, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—The local-option election was quiet in every part of the county. Both "wets" and "drys" worked diligently and detectively through the entire day. Every precinct gave the "drys" a majority, while their total majority in the county was 564. The Goodwin Springs precinct was the closest, the "drys" winning there by one vote. Mt. Eden was the banner local-option precinct, giving the "drys" 183 majority. Camp Branch gave the "drys" 101 majority. The remaining four precincts gave good majorities for prohibition.

Miss Irma Dinkelspiel will play a piano solo and William Frost and Miss Annie Bierman will sing a duet. Charles Dobbs will make an address on "How To Judge and Appreciate a Play."

JACKSON COUNTY, IND., WANTS OPTION ELECTION.

Seymour, Ind., April 3.—[Special.]—A petition was filed at Brownstown today calling for a local-option election to be held in Jackson county. The petition contained the names of one-third the voters of the county, although the law requires but 20 per cent. to call an election. The County Commissioners, who meet next Monday, will be asked to name Monday, April 26, as the date for holding the election.

The first postal card was sped on its way in 1870.

FROM FAR AWAY

Icebergs Come From Near Ends of the Earth.

MAY HAVE BEEN AFLOAT A YEAR WHEN SIGHTED.

SOME EXTEND OVER HALF MILE BENEATH WATER.

It is an interesting fact that the actual iceberg always comes from near the ends of the earth. Becoming detached from the immense ice masses of the north or the south polar regions, the huge pinnacles and mounds and other formations too often in the path of vessels crossing the Grand Banks of Newfoundland have made a long journey before reaching this locality, for they have come the length of that interesting river in the ocean, the Labrador current, besides floating hundreds of miles in the waters about Greenland.

The distance covered by an iceberg of the north Atlantic from the time it is formed until it reaches the Banks is fully 2,500 miles. It may have been afloat for a year, exposed to wide changes of temperature, battered by ice floes, possibly other bergs and ceaselessly washed by the waves. Yet some of those seen 2,000 miles south of their starting point are nearly 300 feet in height and truly of majestic proportions, often a thousand or more feet in length, while it is an established scientific fact that so much more of the bulk is under water than is visible that the largest bergs may extend into the ocean to a depth of over half a mile.

Their enormous size when they become detached from the glaciers is proved by the observations of explorers along the Greenland coast. A few years ago a berg was measured as nearly as possible around the edges. This distance was about five miles. It had several peaks estimated to range from 300 to 500 feet high. Judging from its appearance, writes Day Allen Willey in the Scientific American, it was a solid mass that had separated in its entirety from the glacial edge of Greenland.

As Arctic navigators who venture far north often see a score or more of great bergs in a day the tremendous glacial activity in this region can be appreciated. The majority of these that drift to the Grand Banks come from Melville Bay. Some of the distinct glaciers that terminate the Greenland ice cap on this coast extend along it a distance of fully twenty-five miles. Their thickness or height can only be estimated, but in places near the open sea it is believed to be several hundred feet.

Recent examinations of this coast show that during the short summer the formation of bergs in the bay is almost continuous. The glacial movement keeps pressing the ice forward until a thick stratum often projects many feet beyond that beneath. After a time the great weight overcomes the tensile strength of a mass and it falls into the sea and a berg is created.

The warmer temperature of summer may also widen crevasses on the fringe of the glacier and wave action loosens another mass. The explorers in this sheet of water say that enormous force is displayed by these ice falls and that the sound of the great body striking the water is so deep and loud that it resembles heavy thunder. The many reports that may be heard in a day indicate the rapidity with which the glaciers disintegrate in summer.

Probably the natives of Newfoundland and Labrador are more expert in the knowledge of marine ice and ice forms than any others. This might be expected since the shores of the island and the long, bare peninsula are encased in ice in some form so many months in the year while the berg laden current flows past them on its southerly course. The seal hunter or fisherman of this region can tell the character of a piece of floating ice or an ice pack merely at a glance.

When searching for seal on the ice fields in winter if he becomes thirsty he looks for ice having a bluish or grayish tint—not the white or transparent variety. He knocks off a lump of the darker hue and tests it with his tongue. The field may consist of a pack of pan or floe ice which though dazzling in its whiteness and clearness is unfit to quench the thirst owing to its salt. So it is that much suffering is endured by these fur hunters unless they chance upon a fragment of a berg which may have gone to pieces and been wedged in the pack.

If an iceberg moving down with the Labrador current is swayed by an eastern storm or eddy too near shore owing to its "draft" as the sailors would say, it is liable to ground. Thus an opportunity to study the changes which occur is given. It has been discovered that while the summer temperature of Newfoundland is high enough to reduce the surface considerably by melting, it goes to pieces much more rapidly by the weakening of the lower portions.

MADAME MODJESKA SINKING RAPIDLY

FAMOUS ACTRESS UNCONSCIOUS AND LIFE IS SUSTAINED BY ARTIFICIAL MEANS.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 3.—Mme. Helena Modjeska, the famous actress, lies unconscious at her home at Bay Island, near Newport, Orange county. Late this afternoon Father Steeters, of St. Joseph church, Santa Ana, was called to the bedside to administer extreme unction in case the patient regained consciousness.

All hope of the recovery of the actress has been abandoned and the end is not far off. The change for the worse came last night and to-night she has been sinking rapidly. For many hours life has been sustained by artificial means.

POISONED ROLLS GIVEN TO BRIGHT LITTLE BOY.

Police Working On Theory That Attempt Was Made To End the Child's Life.

Detectives Meyers and Cooper, of the Fifth district police station, are investigating what they believe was an attempt Friday afternoon to poison the small son of Saul Rodde, an optician, who lives at 432 East Gray street.

While the boy was standing at the corner near his home a wagon, which the child said looked like that of a baker, drove up and the man driving called the boy to him. After asking the little fellow his name, the man handed the youngster a bag of delicious looking rolls, telling him to eat them.

Delighted with his present, the Rodde child went home and showed the edibles to his mother and told her the man had been given to him by an unknown man in a baker's wagon.

Mrs. Rodde refused to allow her child to eat them, but told him he might give them to a colored family living in the rear of the Rodde home. The colored woman, on learning how and where the Rodde boy had received the rolls, told her children to feed one to a chicken and await results.

Yesterday morning the chicken which had eaten of the food was found dead. Mr. Rodde was notified of the case and he called in the police. The detectives obtained the remaining rolls and the bag which contained them. They will give the rolls to the city chemist to-morrow, that it may be learned whether the food contains poison.

HOT WATER FOR THE INSANE.

[Philadelphia Record.]

The Kraepelin system of hot-water treatment has been tried with success in the New Jersey Hospital for the Insane at Trenton, by Dr. Henry A. Cotton, medical director. It quiets the most violent of mad women. The treatment has been modernized in the Trenton hospital by the adoption of all the most approved methods, to which have been added some additional safeguards suggested by Dr. Cotton and his associates. Specially constructed tubs, six feet four inches in length, have been installed, and are fed by a continual stream of water entering at five points in the tub to produce a uniform temperature. The patients are swung in canvas hammocks and are left in the tubs absolutely without restraint, all restraint at the institution having been abolished more than a year ago.

The aim of the hot-water treatment is to keep the patient in a uniform temperature of 95 degrees, and to insure this electric thermometers are installed in the tubs, which ring a bell when the temperature rises above or goes below 90 degrees Fahrenheit. In addition to this tests are continually made by the attendants, but in case of their failure is themostat sounds the warning bell. At Munich violent patients are sometimes kept in these hot-water baths for a month at a time, but in the few weeks that the system has been in operation at Trenton they have always been removed at night, although during the twelve-hour stretch in the water they frequently sleep and are sometimes fed.

The treatment has proved so successful in handling otherwise unmanageable patients that one attendant, or at most two, has been able to care for four of the most irrational in the Trenton asylum. The system has been introduced only in the women's wards, but is being installed in the male wards. It is especially effective in cases of melancholia or depression.

CRAZY SNAKE MOVES HIS HIDING PLACE.

Posse of Officers From Henryetta Puts Party of Old Chief's Scouts To Flight.

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 3.—That Crazy Snake, the Creek leader, has changed his hiding place, and in so doing ended the State troops, was made practically certain to-day when a posse of officers from Henryetta accosted a party of the leader's scouts near Hoffman. The Indians were ordered to surrender, but they fled. The officers fired and about a dozen shots were exchanged. The Indians escaping uninjured into the hills to the west. They are believed to have returned to Crazy Snake's new retreat. Officers who have been in the field with the militia for several days have returned to Henryetta to-day. A new posse probably will go to-morrow.

Camp Hickory has again been garrisoned with a majority of the State troops.

PARISIAN DELICACIES.

[Paris Cor. of the London Telegraph.]

French epicures, like French cooks, have long been known as having the gift of originality. From them we learn that fried lizards must be very appetizing. So are young crocodiles and snakes. A writer in the Gil Blas has discovered that these are articles of current consumption here. According to his statistics, 5,000 common lizards are sold here every year, and the man who can make a special calling to supply his commodity find it very profitable. But there is a far greater demand for salamanders, which are a special kind of lizard. Some 8,000 of these are disposed of every year. Young and therefore tender lizards frequently fetch as much as a small chicken—about 4 francs (80 cents) apiece. Old and dry lizards are not got rid of for 50 centimes. Snakes fetch a good prize, too, and good ones are worth as much as a turkey. Adders, it seems, are considered a special delicacy and are most in demand. Young crocodiles also find a good market. They are nearly as dear as a good-sized calf, and when very small they fetch fancy prices. Not many of them, however, the writer says, are sold in a year—perhaps a hundred or thereabouts. Legs of frogs, of course, are very vulgar in comparison. The taste for them seems to be on the wane. Only some 20,000, we are told, are now sold in a year. Snails, however, hold their own, especially the Burgundy snails, and millions of them are disposed of in the small popular restaurants.

CATCH BIG SHARK.

[New York Sun.]

The steamship Grangewood, in from Havana, had a slight collision with the steamship Ramieh at the entrance of Havana harbor, but Capt. Hatswell has something on his log more interesting than that. At Cay Frances he saw several sharks and suggested to the engineer that they try to catch one. A hook was baited with pork and the largest one seen was caught. It was hauled aboard with the assistance of a steam windlass and killed with an axe as it hung suspended from the rigging. It was 10 feet 6 inches long and had jaws 1 foot 9 inches wide. The jaws were brought to this port and the ships news reporter at quarantine stuck his head through them and passed them downward over his body until he could step out of them.

WINTERGREEN, a bay colt, by Dick Welles—Winter, and owned by Rome Respess, is, at this time, top choice in the future book on the Kentucky Derby. Warfield, a chestnut colt by Nasturtium—Detection, owned by W. J. Young, is second choice, and T. M. Green, a brown gelding by G. W. Johnson—Evergreen, and belonging to "Uncle Davy" Prewitt, is third choice.

While Respess, Young and Prewitt are confident that they will each send to the post the winner of Kentucky's classic, there are at present twenty-one other owners who feel that they, too, have more than a chance to win the $6,000, which is the estimated value of the race, and the accompanying honor and glory.

Thus the 1909 Kentucky Derby is styled by capable judges to be the most open race since its establishment in 1875. Not a day passes that a report of a sensational trial by some Derby eligible is not made. Warfield had been accorded chief distinction in this connection until the clockers caught Wintergreen's bit-eling mile over Montgomery Park course in better time than that made by Warfield—1:34. He stepped the distance so handily and was pulling up at the end, showing that it was possible for him to have cut off at least two seconds without an effort. Respess, according to reports, was himself surprised over the performance, although he had contended all along that he had a colt of exceptional class.

Respess' stable will arrive next Tuesday at Churchill Downs. Because of the superior condition of that course he will be able to train to better advantage, and the chances are that Wintergreen will show more speed there for the reason that the course is not so sandy that it is cuppy.

* * *

Private advices from Montgomery Park are to the effect that Young's Derby eligibles, Warfield and Direct, are training on in splendid style and that Warfield is able to negotiate a mile in 1:43. Direct has not shown the speed of his stable companion, but Young has not, by any means, lost faith in the colt's ability to do much better. All of Young's horses will be at the Downs by next Tuesday, perhaps before. By April 7 all thoroughbreds in training at Memphis must be off Montgomery Park course, as it is to be resodded. One hundred and sixty-five racers have been wintered there. All are healthy and far advanced.

The Derby eligible in training in Louisville showing the greatest flight of speed to date is Sir Catesby, from the barn of Tom P. Hayes, at Douglas Park. The son of Sir Dixon can reel off a mile in 1:41 and like either a fast or slow track. Hayes thinks well of the colt's chances. Campeon, George J. Long's Derby starter, stepped three-quarters of a mile over the Downs track in 1:20. When Long's trainer, Pete Coyne, was told of the sensational trials of other Derby horses he said:

"The Derby is about a month away."

This is almost a speech for the sphinx of the Long stable. He is one of the best trainers in America.

Campeon is a grand piece of horse flesh and resembles Long's Sir Huon with the exception that he is not quite as large.

Jake Greenberg's Derby horse, Louis Greenberg, by Fabulous—Miss Mickens, is a good looker, powerfully built and is breaking a mile in 1:46.

From Lexington news comes that J. C. Milam's Ada Meade, which is eligible to both the Kentucky Derby and Kentucky Oaks, worked five-eighths in a fraction less than 1:08. Milam does not hesitate to say that this filly may win the big race.

J. N. Camden, president of the Kentucky Racing Association, has a Derby eligible in Miami, by Count Schomberg—Rochelle II, which is able to go five-eighths in 1:07 2-5 without any exertion. This one seems to be improving right along.

From this time on there will be decided activity in getting the Derby horses ready. The track at Churchill Downs is in perfect condition—better, it is said, than ever before. With the prospect of fast horses going miles over it in 1:38 it is a sure thing that this year's Derby, if the track is fast, will be run faster than in many years. This prediction is based on the high class of the field and the trials shown up to this date.

One of the best stables to be raced at Churchill Downs is that owned by L. A. Cella. The list includes Arionette, Marse Abe, Sea Swell, Rustle, All Red, Hyperion, Tod, Miss Strome, Von Buelow, Console, Broadside, Irrigator, Menthor, La Suer and Conville.

Lon Johnson has this band in charge and began preparing the horses months ago at Douglas Park in anticipation of a spring meeting at Hot Springs. Had racing opened at the spa the Cella stable would have cut a big figure.

Johnson is working hard with his charges now. Arionette looks good. Marse Abe is stepping quarters in :24. Sea Swell is good again. He is a compact piece of machinery, fast for three-quarters, but cannot go much beyond that distance. Last year Sea Swell ran a rattling race with Wintergreen, being beaten by the narrowest of margins. Hyperion is going halves in :52. All Red has spread out. This one is good and game, but if the weight exceeds 108 pounds there is nothing doing. Rustle is a nice little mare and is stepping three-quarters in 1:17. Tod is recovering from sickness and will not be raced until June. Von Buelow is wind-touched and is not held in high regard. Console is a Sir Dixon and is fair. Broadside was bought for $1,500 at a sale in New York and is a maiden. He is bad-footed, like Beau Brummel and Lens.

The star of the Cella outfit is Menthor, which is bred like Colin, and has every appearance of being a $10,000 horse. He stands sixteen hands, weighs 1,050 pounds and is chestnut in color. He bowed a tendon in New York while being trained last season. From this he has entirely recovered.

Trainers at Benning who expect to have easy picking at Pimlico this spring will do well to pay a little attention to the horses that are being made ready for the same meeting at the Long Island tracks. The shipments from Gravesend, Sheepshead Bay and Belmont Park will be larger this year than ever before, and it is probable that seven races a day will be necessary if all the horses are to be accommodated. The horses that have been galloping over the New York tracks are very close to racing fix and many of them are of a class that will keep the folk from Benning hustling to get an even break in the division of the spoils.

The list that has been made up to go to Pimlico from Sheepshead Bay comprises:

George Odom—Trance, Nimbus, Bonnie Kelso, Traveler, Mazuma and Constellation.

Frank Frisbie—Rosimiro and Effendi.

Frank Gardner—Statesman, Queen of the Hills, Racine II, and four 2-year-olds.

Tully Coulter—Hoffman, Trash, Brother Jonathan and a 2-year-old.

Marshall—Grapple, Masquerade, Nedlim and Watersped.

James Fitzsimmons—Rye, King Sol, Summer Night and a 2-year-old.

Frank Starlitz—Queen Marguerite.

From Gravesend there will go:

D. Delissa—Coat of Arms, Billie Burke and Miss Laurie.

Julius Bauer—Zethus, Perkeo and Florinel.

J. H. Warren—Markham and five 2-year-olds.

A. Molinelli—Royal Onyx, Glorio and Muck Rake.

John Bynes—Columbia Lad, Imitator, Rostrum, Pinares and two 2-year-old fillies.

John Rogers—Raquel.

George Cornell—Obadiah and Golconda.

Arthur Carter—Bigot.

Richard Watkins—Lad of Langden and Ida D.

W. C. Daly—Albertinus, Grace Cameron and Killiecrankie.

G. B. Morris—Farondale.

James McLaughlin—Lally, Campaigner, Personal, Arondack, Great Jubilee, Fauntelroy, Brookline and Dress Parade II.

William Lakeland—Question Mark, Bob Evans and three Goldcrest 2-year-olds.

George Kraus—The Gardener, Witching Hour, Indomitable, Sans Souci, Mombassa, Mascarada, Felix Isman, Our Nugget, Miss Knickerbocker and Our Hannah.

J. L. McGinnis—Watervilet.

This list will be considerably increased before shipping time, but these have already been definitely booked for the trip. Some of the horses of Richard T. Wilson, Jr., will be sent from Belmont Park, and it is intimated that James R. Keene will show his colors. August Belmont will shortly ship a lot from Garnet, S. C.

With the opening of the racing at Pimlico only about three weeks away, not two dozen applications for trainers' licenses have been made to the Jockey Club. Each season both the trainers and the jockeys wait until the eleventh hour before making application, but this season they are even slower than ever before. For the past few days some applications have come in, and early next week the license committee will take action on the applications. The stewards of the Jockey Club will meet next Thursday, when the final seal of approval will be affixed to those who are to train.

Many of the trainers long since decided upon a campaign at the Pimlico meeting, but they have always been slow to take out licenses, and it would not be surprising if a bit of confusion resulted from the procrastination. All the licenses have to be passed on first by the license committee and then by the stewards of the Jockey Club, so that it behooves the delinquents to become busy.

There has been the same dearth of applications for jockey licenses, and the registering of colors is being done very slowly this season. The jockey licenses naturally are only issued after a close scrutiny of the applicants and the same committee that passes on the trainers have to pass on the riders. The matter of racing colors is a small one, but it is important, and under the rules the colors mgust be registered before a horse is permitted to start.

Of the 1,060 colors registered with the Jockey Club only 160 of them are life colors and the other owners have to renew the registration each year. Thus far few indeed of these colors have been renewed for 1909, though there will be few breaks in the ranks of the horsemen. It is just another case of putting off the inevitable until all is sure to be rush and hurry for the opening at Pimlico April 24.

George Saportas has broken the ice with his stable of cross-country horses in France. Braggart won a race for the American horseman at St. Quen on Tuesday, and if Braggart can win there should be some chance for those in the string who have shown to advantage through the field in this country.

Braggart wasn't much of a racehorse over here on the flat. Last season he raced in the colors of F. W. Healey, a Western owner, who won a purse or two with Import. Braggart is a 4-year-old gelding by Boanerges—Gelida. Saportas picked him up cheaply enough last fall and set about making him into a jumper.

Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., scored recently with Stokes for the second time since the season in France opened, and this is a fair beginning, though the events won have not been by any means distinguished.

* * *

Tommy Burns expects to do the season in the saddle around New York as usual. Burns has never grown very heavy and last Tuesday he began galloping horses for George Odom to get into condition for the Pimlico meeting. Unlike many riders, Burns is thrifty and the money he has made in many seasons is well invested.

* * *

Tom P. Hayes expressed the belief last night that he believed Sir Catesby, which is training at Douglas Park, will win the Kentucky Derby in record-breaking time if the track is fast on May 7.

Hayes has arrived at this conclusion by reason of the fact that the colt is in such good condition and is breezing miles in such fast, easy style.

In the lobby of The Seelbach last night several good judges of horses discussed Derby possibilities with Hayes, and at the end it was the consensus of opinion that the contenders would be Sir Catesby, Wintergreen, Warfield, T. M. Campeon and Miami.

* * *

It is probable that Judge Charles F. Price, who always presides in the stand at Churchill Downs, will act in that capacity at the San Antonio, Tex., meeting, which opens Saturday, April 10, and closes about May 1. Of course, Judge Price will officiate when the Downs racing starts on May 3, but it is probable that he will not be in the stand at Lexington. Judge Price spent several weeks at Magnolia Springs, Ala., and is now sojourning at Hot Springs, Ark.

Silvia Heimann will be secretary at the San Antonio meeting and Ed Duke will be starter.

* * *

The starter at the spring meeting at Churchill Downs will be Jake Holtman, now officiating in that capacity at Oakland, and who has alternated throughout the season with Starter Dick Dwyer, who is at present at Santa Anita. Holtman will also do the starting at Lexington. He will arrive from the coast April 22.

* * *

Col. M. J. Winn, general manager of the New Louisville Jockey Club, received a message last evening from Eugene Elrod, who has charge of the betting ring at Santa Anita, saying he will reach Louisville April 24. He will be one of the officials at the Lexington meeting and also at Churchill Downs.

* * *

Churchill Downs will to-day attract hundreds of persons who admire the thoroughbred. If the weather is nice the track will be alive with breezing racers. The course is so fast that trainers are sending their charges along as if the meeting was at hand.

With every indication of miles being reeled off at the coming meeting faster than at any time heretofore followers of the turf who come here from California may find themselves in a perplexed position. Here it is going to take the best to win, for nearly 400 horses have been trained in Louisville, Lexington and Memphis and all of them are fresh and far advanced.

Judge R. F. Leighton will have charge of the sixty-day meeting at Victoria, B. C., which will open on May 24.

Jack McAuliffe In Clover.

Jack McAuliffe, the retired lightweight champion, who is managing the Marathon A. C., of Brooklyn, has scored a big success with the club. The arena is in the old Clement-avenue rink, where many of the old-time bouts were held. It was there Jim Corbett proved to Easterners nineteen years ago that he was a classy man. Along back in 1890 he left the West for New Orleans. This was before he had met Peter Jackson. Arriving in the Crescent City a comparative stranger, he boxed and defeated Jake Kilrain. Then he went to New York and sparred an exhibition with Mike Donaven. Three weeks later he signed with Dominick McCaffery. The wise ones thought it was a cinch for McCaffery and a big crowd went from New York over to Brooklyn to see it. When the men shook hands the rink was packed to the doors. Dominick had a hard time laying a glove on the tall young fellow with the pompadour hair. Corbett fairly smothered him in four rounds. This gave him confidence because McCaffery was considered one of the very cleverest men of that day. Corbett hopped back to San Francisco and the following May went the sixty-one rounds with Jackson. From that time on his rise was rapid and in 1892 he defeated the mighty John L. Sullivan. Those who afterward bet on Corbett against Sullivan secured their real line on him through the McCaffery and Jackson bouts. They figured that any unknown kid who could jump East unheralded and thrash McCaffery, then hurry back to the coast and carry along the great Jackson for over four hours without getting any the worst of it, was worth a bet against any many in the world. And so it proved.

Has Bowker Gone Back?

The American career of Joey Bowker was not a very long or successful one. Hearing about the large sums Driscoll, Welsh, Moran and Robson made in this country, it didn't take much coaxing to bring Joey over. Billy Pierce, the matchmaker of the Armory Club, Boston, sent for him and he hopped on a boat in a hurry. Pierce put him on for twelve rounds with Al Delmont and the latter beat decisively. Then he took Bowker over to Philadelphia and Tommy O'Toole put him away in a couple of rounds. Passing through New York after the bout, en route from Philadelphia to Boston, Pierce said: "Bowker isn't fighting today as well as he did three years ago, when he was beating Pinkie Evans, Frankie Nell, Owen Moran, Spike Robson and Pedlar Palmer. Either the climate affected him or else the parade has passed him. He's a nice, quiet little chap and I would have liked to see him do well over here, but he won't do in his present form against the fast American boys. I had him matched with Attell, but when he was defeated by Delmont and O'Toole I called the bout off. He is going back to England in a few days, where he is in the restaurant business. He makes good money, so if he should retire he'll never want for anything."

According to Ty Cobb, his brother, Paul, was not turned down by St. Louis, but quit because he was only offered a $1,200 contract. The youngster will remain on the farm in Georgia this season.

CENTRAL LEAGUE PLAYERS GET DOWN TO HARD PRACTICE

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 3.—[Special.]—All around the Central League circuit the last days of the week from eighteen to thirty players were in practice work, with each manager trying to pick about half his team, the other half having been decided upon. Most of the holdout stars of last season's teams reported, but the unsigned contracts were still in their possession. The managers were even less willing to grant the increase demanded in salaries after seeing some of the new players perform.

Despite the bad weather of the week enough work was done, with the addition of a few exhibition games, to reassure managers and fans alike that should the holdouts be out of the game when the pennant season starts their places can be filled satisfactorily. Smythe, the O-P outfielder, trying for a place in Terre Haute, did such good work in the games with Indiana University that the fans began to say they didn't care if Collins never came back. And so it was in the other cities. The fans are anxious about the staying quality of their patience in waiting for the opening of the season, more than three weeks off. There will be exhibition games with the clubs from the big leagues, which, returning from the South, do their scoring for their start in their respective schedule seasons in Central League territory, but these clubs will begin the season in their leagues two weeks before the opening of the Central's pennant season.

At Evansville Manager Knoll is picking over a lot of new ones in search of fit successors to the stars who left his pennant-winning team at the end of last season to go higher. Beckett, from the Indiana mining field, which is producing great numbers of aspirants for professional ball honors since Mordecai Brown quit mining and began as a professional pitcher on the Terre Haute team at about half as much money as he could make digging coal, and Charles Strader, from Lexington, Ky., are trying for Kastler place in the outfield. Spangler at first, Crowder at short and Sazer at third are fixtures and perhaps have no superiors in their respective positions in the league. Porkoney, the second baseman bought from Toledo, has not reported, but he seems to be assured of a job. He has a poisoned eye and will be late in reporting. Ferriass and Pearson, of the old pitching staff, will have seven new flingers trying with them for regular employment after the real work begin April 29. Friede, a semi-professional from St. Louis, is the most touted of the seven.

In the games with the Indiana University Manager Groeschow used about all of the more than twenty men reporting to Terre Haute. Playing without an error in the first game and slugging the ball always, the squad looked very good to the spectators. Lashbrook, a Terre Haute amateur, was hit for six safeties in the first inning and the only runs of the visitors were in that inning. Rudy Summers, from Louisville, and Douthett, the Rose Polytechnic student who was with the team last year, held the university men down in the remaining innings and each of these two pitchers seemed to confirm common impression that they are sure of places on the staff. Eckstone, a Chicago semi-professional, has been acclaimed as a sure winner.

President Carson will have his umpires before him shortly to emphasize the necessity for preventing rowdyism. For two seasons the only rock which threatened to sink the Central was rowdyism and frequent changes of umpires. The league president learned by that experience the need of good men and also how to pick that quality of umpire. Chili and Cohen come over from last year with the respect of players and fans. Gardner and Jacobs are new to the circuit as umpires, the former coming from the Western Association and the latter once played with Evansville in the Central league.

About Welsh and Nelson.

Freddie Welsh, the lightweight champion of England, has finally done what he threatened to do three weeks ago—claimed the lightweight championship by default. Freddie has been after Nelson for a battle for the past four months, but the Battler has given him little encouragement. Now that there is talk of Nelson meeting Dick Hyland and then going to Australia to meet Jimmy Britt for the championship, Welsh has come out openly and claims the championship. He says he does this with regret, as he would much prefer to meet Nelson in a battle and let the best man have the title. But he claims that Nelson is trying to dodge the issue by arranging a match in faraway Australia with a man whom he has beaten before. Welsh, to show his sincerity, has posted a forfeit of $5,000 in New York to go as a side bet or any way that Nelson wants. He offers to let Nelson dictate all the terms as long as they are within reason. The boy is certainly fair, and it is up to Nelson to give him a battle for the championship, as Welsh has certainly shown enough class during the past six months to entitle him to that consideration. If Nelson insists upon avoiding Welsh, it is up to the Battler to take on Packy McFarland for a battle for the championship that the fans would take some genuine interest in. However, Nelson has reconsidered his stand and announces now that he will meet Welsh for the championship, but insists that the latter must get a club that will offer a suitable purse for such a battle, as otherwise he (Nelson) will not get into training for such a fight. It is understood that Jimmy Coffroth is willing to offer proper inducements at San Francisco for the contest, so it will probably be arranged.

Papke Uses Poor Judgment.

Billy Papke, the former middleweight champion, made the same mistake the other night that a great many other fighters have made; he tried to give away a lot of weight to a tough fellow like Jim Flynn, and the result was a beating for his trouble. Flynn has been defeated by Jack Johnson, Al Kaufmann and some of the topnotchers, but he has always been looked upon as a dangerous man in a fight because he carried a good punch. He was altogether too big for Papke, and although Billy was game to the core, even more clever than Flynn, the odds were too much against him. It may be that Papke has gone back since his defeat by Ketchel. But even if he were at his best he could hardly expect to give away a lot of weight to a man like Flynn and beat him. In the future Billy will doubtless stick to the middleweight division, where he belongs. If Ketchel gets out of the middleweight division it will put Papke in position to once more get a chance at the middleweight championship. Hugo Kelly is the man that has the greatest claim to it, and a fight between Kelly and Papke would be most interesting, even if they have met two or three times before.

Dates of Indiana Trots.

Terre Haute, Ind., April 3.—[Special.]—The dates for harness racing in Indiana as now made up are as follows: Goshen, July 4; Terre Haute, July 13-16; Montpelier, July 20-23; Hagerstown, August 3-6; Lebanon, August 10-13; Newcastle, August 10-12; Fairmount, August 10-13; Frankfort, August 17-20; Muncie, August 17-21; Elwood, August 24-27; Warren, August 24-27; Crawfordsville, August 24-27; Marion, August 31; Portland, August 31; Lafayette, August 31-September 2; Indianapolis, September 6-10; Rushville, September 13-17; Goshen, September 14-17; Hagerstown, October 12-15; Goshen, October 11.

J. W. Nash has sent Vendetta, 2:13½, and The Northern Man to Dick Wilson at Rushville.

Trainer Fred Ellis, of the Dougherty Stock Farm, at Wabash, took a string of horses to Marion this week and will give them their preparation for the season's racing on the Marion track.

Harris Jones, at Rushville, received from Kansas Bill Bryan, 2:19¾; Axceline, 2:12½; Chestnut Girl, 2:29; Swedish Boy, 2:17¾.

There isn't any of Manager McGraw's workers going along better than Fred Tenney. The veteran reported several pounds overweight, but he has raced the extra flesh off and is showing power as a clean-up hitter.

EIGHT OF THE MOST PROMINENT CANDIDATES FOR THE COMING KENTUCKY DERBY.

The Claim That Can't Be Backed.

If, as clothing manufacturers claim, ready-mades are as good as tailor-mades, why is it that every factory maintains a special order department?

If, as the ready-maker asserts, there is no advantage in buying clothes tailored to measure, why is it that when you ask him to measure you for a suit, similar to something he has in stock, he charges you more than he asks for the goods on his counter? Neither of them can take the place of the merchant tailor, and every time either attempts to do so he intensifies his own misstatements by his prices. Anything a little bit better always costs a little bit more. Merchant tailoring is so far ahead of factory tailoring in so many ways, and each way means such a distinct advantage, that only the price counter belongs at the clothing counter.

The Tailor's Half a Year Ahead.

Ready-made clothes are designed at least six months before they are shipped to the seller. The manufacturer creates his styles, makes up sample garments, waits until he receives his orders from all over the country, then proceeds to produce. When a clothier places his newest styles on sale, they are already half a year old. The merchant tailor is always one season ahead of the clothing stores. He decides upon his fashions one hundred and eighty days later than the manufacturer and finishes each order within a fortnight after he receives it. Men who wish to dress properly cannot afford to wear garments already out of date the moment they make their appearance.

CHICAGO CUBS PLAY COLONELS

Manager Chance and His World's Champions To Be Here To-day.

JOE STANLEY IS WITH TEAM.

Too Early To Make Predictions Regarding Finish of Teams In the American Association.

SEASON OPENS IN TEN DAYS.

FRANK CHANCE, the peerless baseball leader, with his colony of star players, the Chicago Cubs, will play a game with Manager Peitz's Colonels this afternoon at Eclipse Park. The contest will be called at 3 o'clock.

The three-time pennant winners and twice in succession victors in the world's championship will arrive here this morning. The National Leaguers have been in training in the South for almost a month. They are reported to be in good shape. It is reasonably sure that the locals will have to travel at a fast clip in order to conquer the Windy City chaps.

Besides Manager Chance, Mordecai Brown, Ruelback, Pfeister, Lundgren, big Jeff Overall, who is more than six feet above the sea level; Joe Tinker, Joe Stanley, the former Colonel; Steinfeldt, Sheckard, Haggerman, who pitched last season on the same team, the Topekas, as did Selby and other diamond actors, will likely show in the ring during the short engagement. There is little doubt but that the Colonels will give the strangers a stiff argument for supremacy in the exhibition games.

Johnny Evers, the peer of Second sackers, and Johnny Kling, who is in a class by himself as a backstop, are not with the world's champions. It is claimed by some of the prominent critics that the absence of these two players will surely weaken the chances of the Chicago Cubs to win the National League flag this year. However, it remains to be seen. Manager Chance is not saying much, but it is almost certain that he will experience a rough journey without the two men and that it is causing him some worry. As Chance is a resourceful fellow, it is reasonably sure that he will double his efforts to capture the 1909 banner minus the services of Kling and Evers.

It is hoped that Manager Chance will elect Stanley to guard the right garden in this afternoon's contest. The local rooters are anxious to see Joe play with the Colonels' opponents. The struggle for the regular job to hold center field has narrowed down to Stanley and Browne. George Browne was secured from the New York Giants. Slagle and Kane are practically out of the fight. Chick Fraser, who is a brother-in-law of Fred Clarke, the manager of the Pittsburg Pirates, is well known here and popular among the older fans. There was some talk about Fraser becoming a Colonel. If waivers can be secured it is likely that Chick will join the locals or one of the American Association clubs. The batting order for to-day's game will be as follows:

Louisville.	Chicago.
Dunleavy, c. f.	Browne, c. f.
Delehanty, l. f.	Sheckard, l. f.
Tate, r. f.	Stanley, r. f.
Sullivan, 1b.	Chance, 1b.
Kunkle, 3b.	Steinfeldt, 3b.
Olson, 2b.	Zimmerman, 2b.
Quinlan, ss.	Tinker, ss.
Miller, c.	P. Moran, c.
Halla, p.	Overall, p.
Packard, p.	Pfeister, p.

* * *

Johnny McGraw to date has not appointed anyone to act as field captain of the New York Giants. The chances are he will not make a selection until the team lands at the Polo Grounds in Gotham. Tenney is the logical man for the position and it is likely he will be given the post of honor.

* * *

In ten days the eighth year of the American Association baseball clubs will start its schedule for 1909. The opening day, April 14, is drawing near. After six months of watching the actions of the magnates the spotlight will be turned on the diamond performers. The doings of the balltossers will be chronicled throughout the broad land. In almost every nook and corner the national pastime will be played. As racing is slowly taking the count on account of solar plexus blows delivered by persons antagonistic to the game, baseball is now the foremost sport of this country.

In a little over a week the bell will ring and the arbitrator of diamond arguments will yell "Play ball!" Then the coming campaign between eight teams in this league will be inaugurated. Everything will be in readiness for another struggle for baseball superiority by teams belonging to the A. A. circuit. The start promises to be interesting, as it will be the East against the East and the West against West. This is the first time the schedule has been so arranged.

There is no way to forecast the ultimate result of the stubborn engagement this season between the eight competitors for the A. A. banner. There has been too many changes in the line-ups of the teams in this league. It is impossible at present to foretell which team has the best chance for the championship honors. The team now figured to be the strongest is liable to finish in the ruck. The bunch considered a good candidate for a cellar position is likely to upset the calculations of the wise critics by landing in the favored class.

There is a tendency, of course, by cranks of the cities represented in the A. A. circuit to claim for their respective teams a topnotch position. This is natural. Every bug toots for his team, believing it is the best ever. However, these opinions do not affect the result. The fact of the matter is all of the entrants have a chance. A good one at that. One need not be misled by the flourishing reports concerning the new world beaters coming from the different training camps. The untried youngster who is causing the fans to sit up and take notice by doing phenomenal work now will likely explode before this season is a month old. It is the real test that counts. Not the performance in exhibition or practice games.

Judging from the work of some of the new recruits of the different A. A. teams, the clubs will be strengthened materially. It is a long and tedious route and many are liable to fall by the wayside. The veterans will be the mainstays. Some of them, however, especially those who were shipped back from the big arena, will find the going a trifle too speedy. This is the situation. One could dope out the race according to the records of the teams in 1908. But sales, trades or drafts of players make it difficult to hazard a prediction. The team which gets a running start and has staying qualities is almost certain to finish in the first division. When the ax falls within the next two or three weeks and the teams present their regular line-ups one will be better able to judge the chances of the candidate for supremacy in this league.

* * *

Are the Colonels stronger or weaker than last year? Will they have a good chance to grab the flag? Will they do as well under the leadership of Heine Peitz as the locals did last season? These and other questions concerning the Louisville ball team are asked by the bugs in and around the Falls Cities. No one seems to know. No one can tell. It is all a matter of conjecture. The Colonels' chances, like the other teams in this league, to land in front, are problematical. The Kentuckians are going to be in the thick of the battle. How strong or how long remains to be seen.

The Colonels in charge of the veteran Heine Peitz will certainly try hard to capture the honors this season. That goes without the saying. It is true that with each day's practice the local players are showing some improvement in their work. The youngsters are gradually developing into promising balltossers. To what extent one is unable to say. It takes time. It is too early to say whether they are A. A. timber. They have not been tested. In the exhibition affairs with the Philadelphia Athletics and New York Giants some of the juveniles acquitted themselves in the classiest sort of fashion. If the weather permits the youths will have another opportunity to-day to show their future value as ballplayers.

* * *

However, ten days remain for practice, and much can be done by the men to get into tiptop shape during this period. The local baseball critics can then figure for themselves regarding the Colonels' position in the sprint for the bunting when the curtain falls on the 1909 season. There is little doubt but that when the real fray begins Manager Peitz will in a measure be able to tell who is fit to stick in fast company. Much depends on how the regulars will play together. Also how the twirlers round into form. The slabmen are the pivot on which the balance of the team revolves. The men on the firing line can improve or destroy the chances of their teammates earning victories. General Manager Chivington is confident that he has gathered a bunch of promising material. From these youngsters he hopes that Peitz will be able to pick two or three live wires.

* * *

There are thirty-six people in the Chicago Cubs' company. They will arrive here this morning from Atlanta, Ga.

* * *

President Charles W. Murphy is traveling with his team.

* * *

Several of the Chicago Nationals are unable to take part in the game on account of bad colds and sore arms.

* * *

Andy Coakley is expected to join the Cubs here to-day. He is a right-handed pitcher and was one of the holdouts.

* * *

Pitchers have much harder sledding in the small minor league towns than in the big major league cities, writes Horace S. Fogel. The fans down here in the South are especially hard on their pitchers. Whenever a couple of hits are bunched in one inning off their pitchers, they begin to shout, in chorus: "Take him out! Take him out!" That's very discouraging to a pitcher, and ruins many a one by knocking not only the confidence, but the ambition out of him.

The loyal supporter of a club is never guilty of offering such an insult to a player or shouting such advice from the stands to the manager of the team. Ballplayers always try their best. Some days things break badly for them, and they can't help it. They feel badly enough about their poor luck on such days without the gratuitous insults offered them by would-be friends of the club, but who are in reality the club's worst enemies.

Spectators at a ball game should never lose sight of the fact that there is a manager on the bench to run the team, decide how to play his men and determine when to take out a pitcher or make other changes. He knows more about the business of running a team than they do, and is in a position to judge better what move next to make at all stages of the game. If the manager keeps a pitcher in when he is not, in the opinion of the spectators, "delivering the goods," that manager has a good reason for doing so. The spectators have no way of finding out what that reason is, but they can take it for granted that it's for the best interests of the club.

It may be because the catcher is using poor judgment in coaching the pitcher and is the one to blame for his poor work. Or it may be because the fielders are giving him poor support. And, again, it may be that the manager realizes that his side cannot hit the opposing twirler, who is in extraordinary fine fettle that day, and, with his side behind, a change of pitchers would not improve matters, as there is no chance of winning that game.

Anyhow, the loyal supporter and real friend of the club keeps quiet and does not shout advice from the stands to the manager on the bench. Neither will he take the heart out of a player and make him feel dissatisfied or humiliated by yelling such insults as "Take him out!" across the field at him. Some cities can never get a winning team together because their fans do not encourage the players properly by treating them decently.

The way to spur a player on to try extra hard to do his best is to encourage him in his efforts at all times. He will either lose his nerve or become grouchy and vindictive and anxious to get away to some other club if the home club's supporters do not treat him right, for he is like the rest of us—only human. A manager's success in building up a winning team depends largely upon the aid given him by the club's supporters. If they treat the player considerately his task is a comparatively easy one. But they can break up his team in short order if they make the players dissatisfied by "roasting" them.

In nine cases out of ten trouble of this kind is made by the hoodlums and boneheads who only attend games occasionally. The regular patrons know better and are willing to concede that the manager on the bench is more capable of running his own team than they are. The real friends of a club do not offer advice to the manager, but keep quiet during the progress of a game and mind their own business. They never yell across the field "Take him out!"

* * *

Manager Mack is not going to be caught this year with a shortage of material by thinning out his ranks as early and as much as in former years. Since the reports have gone abroad that Connie has a great bunch of youngsters, he has been flooded with offers from managers all over the country to purchase some of his surplus material. To all these offers Mr. Mack has replied that he will not part with a single man in his squad for the present. Ultimately some of them will have to go, as a matter of course, for he cannot carry them all during the entire season. Kocher and probably Blue, of the catchers, will perhaps be the first to go, followed by a couple of infielders, at least one outfielder and several pitchers. But the chances are that Connie will attach a string to every one he sends away, so that he can pull them back again, if not during the coming season, at least next fall.

* * *

The fan colony will remember the turmoil attending the Cub-Giant duel of last October which settled the National League title. After that battle Manager Chance of the Cubs had a close call from being mobbed, which Bill Bailey, of the Chicago American, thus sets forth in detail:

"Manager Chance to-day for the first time told the real story of his exit from the Polo Grounds in New York following the game that decided the pennant race in the National League in the fall and gave the Cubs the right to fight for another world's championship.

"The story of the manager being struck in the neck has often been told. But that Chance was in danger of his life and that he was beaten all way from the first base to the clubhouse never had been.

The New York game is often the subject at a fanning bee.

"'If I live to be 100 years old I'll never forget how I got to the clubhouse,' said the manager. 'And to this day I do not know who saved my life.

"'The moment the last Giant was out and the game was ours I turned to run to the clubhouse. Just as I started some fellow ran up and soaked me in the neck with his fist. It drove my Adam's apple from the center of my throat to the left side and left me speechless.

"'I had a baseball in my hand. I aimed as carefully as if the world's championship depended on that throw. I followed with my eye the retreating figure of the fellow that struck me. I caught him as I dodged from one crowd to another. Then I struck him squarely in the back with the ball. He went down like he had been shot.

"'In an instant I was surrounded by a mob. At the same moment two men stepped by my side. One was to my right and the other to my left.

"'We're your friends and we're from Chicago,' said one. 'Your life isn't worth a penny right now and the only way you can save it is for you to keep absolutely quiet and do as we say.

"'Now, come on!'

"'One held my right arm and the other my left. As I took the first step some fellow kicked me. It was an awful kick. I tugged with the men.

"'Don't turn around. If you do you're a goner, for they'll kill you,' said the leader.

"Never in my life did I want to take a poke at anybody as badly as I did at the fellow who kicked me.

"'Don't say a word. By all means don't swear,' cautioned the leader.

"'Just then I received another kick, a vicious one.

"'When I reached the clubhouse the fellows disappeared. I have never seen them since. I haven't the remotest idea who they were. But undoubtedly they saved my life.'"

Just another chapter in that famous game.

Sports at South Bend, Ind., have made up a purse of $5,000 to bet that Johnny Kling will be with the Chicago Cubs again this year. The bet as yet has had no takers.

* * *

And now comes the "Salome Twist." The latest wrinkle in the bender line has been invented by Billy Campbell, of the Cincinnati Reds.

* * *

Manager Roger Bresnahan has decided that the "squeeze" play is no good and has cut it from the Cardinals' repertory of inside baseball.

* * *

Outfielder Pat Dougherty is having a lot of trouble with his ankles this spring and as yet has developed little speed in the outfield of the White Sox.

* * *

There is hardly a major league club that doesn't require its players to have four uniforms, two for the road and two suits of white for the home grounds.

* * *

Busheiman, a young pitcher, sold just a few days ago by Bill Armour for $300, once was wanted by the Red Sox, who offered $5,000 for him, but would not pay $7,000, the price Armour put on the player.

* * *

At the close of the American League season last fall Hughey Jennings gave every Detroit player a $50 bill to buy a suit of clothes. Bill Rossman is reported as the only man who used the money for this end.

* * *

The veteran Tommy McCarthy has been engaged by the Cincinnati Reds to watch the development of the stars at Holy Cross College, which has turned out some of the best in the business.

It's hard lines on the drama, but next fall that institution is due to be swamped with ballplayer-humorists. With Harry Bay, Mike Donlin, Jimmy Callahan and Grover Land as bellwethers, ballplayers are hearing the calls of Thespis, and the comedians and humorists discovered this early promise fat business to booking agents when the world's championship is again settled.

An All-American ball club, picked from 1871 to the present, that would be hard to improve on, would be made up from the following great players:

Player and position.	Fielding.	Batting.
A. G. Spalding, p.	.858	.318
John Kling, c.	.982	.312
A. C. Anson, 1b.	.975	.399
Ross Barnes, 2b.	.865	.462
H. Steinfeldt, 3b.	.954	.327
H. Jennings, ss.	.943	.386
Joe Kelley, lf.	.951	.391
Hugh Duffy, cf.	.958	.378
Wm. Keeler, rf.	.973	.392

The averages are taken from the best year in each man's career.

Hans Wagner receives a $15,000 salary this year, it is said, upon more or less good authority. If this is true, the big German is the highest salaried player that ever gripped a wagon tongue, but at that he is probably worth the money. Pittsburg is in the race every year, chiefly through Wagner's efforts, and wherever the Pirates play they draw like a traction engine, because the folks want to see Hans perform.

Pitcher Miller, a southpaw picked up by Cleveland in Mobile, is said to possess the characteristics of Rube Waddell. This statement has not been qualified to indicate whether the characteristics are those of Rube in the box or Rube when the hopples are off. If the former is meant, Cleveland has picked up a wonder, but if the latter, trouble with a big T seems to be in store for the Naps.

In 1877 James A. Devlin, George Hall, W. H. Craver and A. H. Nichols, of the old Louisville club, were expelled from the National League for selling a game, and despite repeated efforts to secure reinstatement they were never again permitted to play in organized baseball. This is the only case on record of baseball dishonesty, a record no other professional sport can boast of.

* * *

Kicking always has been a disagreeable feature of ball games. Although the rules expressly provide that no player shall dispute a decision, it is seldom a game is played that is not marred by protests. If the $5 fine for a first violation and ejection from the game for a repetition of the offense were imposed rigidly, games would be faster and far more interesting to the public.

But three pitchers have pitched ten innings without allowing a hit in the history of baseball. They are:

1890—King, Chicago vs. Brooklyn, score 0—2, Brooklyn winning on errors.
1906—McIntyre, Brooklyn vs. Pittsburg; Pittsburg won in eleventh.
1908—Wiltse, New York vs. Philadelphia.

ABOUT THE COLUMBUS TEAM.

Clymer After Hulswitt and O'Rourke May Be Shifted To Second Base.

Columbus, O., April 3.—[Special.]—Old faces on the Columbus infield are in great danger of being missing from the lineup when the regular season opens. George Kihm and Zeke Wrigley may both be displaced by younger talent before May 1. Manager Clymer reported here Thursday and began to look over the squad after the men had been practicing a week. It is hinted that a shift bringing Fred Odwell to first base and placing Alex Reilley permanently in center will add to the hitting qualities of the club and surely to the speed of the team. If Hulswitt can be secured from Cincinnati for a big offer, O'Rourke will be shifted over to second base, his natural position. Clymer is a manager who is loth to let old men go, but there will very likely be a partial consummation of this plan if not all of it.

* * *

Columbus talent this year is found to be devoid of anything real green in the line of recruits. The catchers all look sweet and a good young first baseman has been discovered in Ray Miller, the McKeesport, Pa., man who swatted out twenty-two home runs last season. Kaler, the Newark, O., State League slabman, has also shown great speed and curves. He comes nearer to being a second Heinie Berger than any player who has shown at this lot since the German flinger left for Cleveland.

* * *

There was some misgiving as to the pitching wing Bill Milligan, of Buffalo, might bring here. His pitching in exhibitions has been great. He has speed and uses the freest kind of motion of his arm, showing that he is right. This same thing is true of George Upp, who had a bad side the greater part of last season. He is throwing splendidly and showing form. With these men right the left-handers of the club are in trim.

* * *

Fans here have taken great delight in the work of Ossie Schreck, the great one-mit artist recruited from the American League. He is in fine form and makes that department airtight.

* * *

Columbus has discarded the ugly blue road uniform. There will be a pearl-gray suit in evidence when the former champions begin to swing around the circuit.

Lebanon, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—St. Mary's College defeated Lindsey Wilson School, of Columbia, this afternoon in the first game of baseball to be seen here this season by the score of 10 to 6. Detroit Beats St. Louis.

Dallas, Tex., April 3.—Bad fielding when men were on bases and failure to hit Detroit pitchers enabled Detroit to defeat the St. Louis American League team this afternoon by a score of 2 to 0 in the first of the two exhibition games between these teams at Dallas.

AMATEUR CHAT.

The University of Louisville team has been working hard for several weeks. From the large squad of candidates Coach Ray has now selected twelve men who will represent the collegeans on the baseball field this season. Coach Ray judged the men according to their showing in fielding, batting, base running and general knowledge of the game. From the form they have displayed it looks like they will be strong contenders for the State collegiate championship.

The collegians are strong at the slab this season. Twelve men showed up well in the tryouts and from these three were selected to do the twirling. Emmet O'Neal, formerly at Central University; Bruce, said to be the best pitcher ever at Emery and Henry College, Va., and Caruth, last year's mainstay at the University of Mississippi, make up the selected list of mound artists. The other positions on the team are filled by fast and experienced men.

The line-up will be as follows: Corbett and Griggs, catchers; Eggers, first base; Walker, second base; Jenkins, shortstop; Blair, third base; Johnson, left field; Nash, center field; Rutledge, right field. These men will train every day this week at their grounds at Twenty-sixth and Broadway, and Coach Ray hopes to have them in fine condition when they open their season April 10 at Glenwood Park.

The Hirsch Bros. and Evers Indians will play at the Hirsch Bros.' Park, at Twenty-sixth street and Broadway, this afternoon. The Evers Indians are composed of semi-professional players who have not as yet left the city to join their respective teams. The line-up:

Vetter	Catcher	Kelly
Crutcher or Sadler	Pitcher	Brock or Jones

FAVORITE IN FEATURE RACE

Flying Squirrel Gains a Neck Victory In Oakland Handicap.

LEADS FROM START TO FINISH.

Royal Tourist Beats Stanley Fay and Don Enrique In the Harper Handicap.

RESULTS ON OTHER TRACKS.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 3.—Flying Squirrel, the fast son of Caesarion, gained a neck victory over Glennadean in Gebhard Handicap at Emeryville to-day. The winner carried top weight and was favorite throughout the betting. Shilling, who came up from Arcadia to ride the colt, got him away flying and he and Glennadean made most of the running. At the finish Shilling was forced to ride hard to win. Waldo was third. The race was worth $4,280 to the winner.

RESULTS AT JACKSONVILLE.

Separator, Heavily Played, the Only Favorite To Reward Talent in the South.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 3.—Separator, heavily played in the fifth race at odds of 7 to 5, was the only winning favorite to-day. The public won heavily on more than one long shot, however, giving the bookies a most unsatisfactory day. A number of legislators, en route to Tallahassee, where the Legislature convenes Tuesday, attended the races this afternoon, and their presence created discussion as to whether legislative action upon racing might be expected. No such contemplated action has been announced. Summaries:

This Line of Suits is Exclusive

These suits are made right—they are made for men with a discriminating eye for style, pattern and material.

Kling Men's Garments are not manufactured by the multi-million dollars' worth, as many custom lines are.

If you were going to a tailor for a suit, you would rather select one who produces a few high-class suits exclusively, than one who rushes his work through in quantity with small attention to details.

Kling Men's Apparel
KLING BROS. & CO. CHICAGO.

There's just the same advantage in Kling Men's Garments. The Kling suit looks as if it was made for you. It has the stylish individual merchant tailored effect known to no other line.

Kling Men's Garments are hand-tailored. Each and every part of the making of a Kling suit, from the cutting to the finishing, is supervised by an expert in that part.

It takes from ten days to two weeks to complete one of these suits at the Kling Tailor Shops with all their modern equipment, because they are made with so much care.

Every Kling garment is cut separately by shears instead of by machines which cut a quantity at a time. All cloth is London shrunk. This, known as the "cold water" process, takes longer than the quick "steam" process, more generally used, but it secures the maximum shrinkage. Then each suit is subjected to rigid inspection—it has to be perfect in every respect before it can leave the shops.

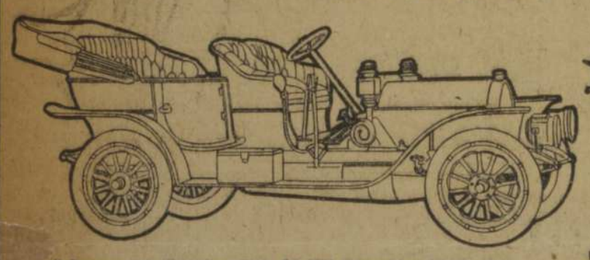

The suits shown above represent two of the exclusive Kling novelties that are highly popular. They only indicate the line, however.

See Kling garments before buying.

BEGIN WORK ON THE SPEEDWAY

Speed of 100 Miles An Hour Expected On Indianapolis Course.

MUCH GOOD-ROADS ACTIVITY.

Demand For Second-hand Automobiles Causes a Scarcity In the Markets Of Big Cities.

OTHER CHAT OF THE MOTOR.

ACTIVE work of building the Indianapolis motor speedway was begun last week, when C. C. King, the contractor in charge, began operations. Road machines which gather and dump a wagonload of dirt every half minutes, scrapers, scoops, rollers and a traction engine are included in the outlay of implements that will speedily shape a fifty-foot course in the straightaway and sixty feet on the curves.

Activity is not confined to the track gang alone, as a large squad of carpenters are kept busy on the several buildings necessary to an automobile racing course which will be known as the Brooklands of America. A uniform color scheme for the eight-foot board fence which will inclose the grounds and the various buildings has been decided upon. A view of white trimmed with green will greet visitors to the events at the track during the coming summer.

At the time the company was formed to build the speedway it was thought that a five-mile course arranged with two miles of outside and three miles of inside track would be most practical. A second survey of the 328 acres owned by the speedway company, however, demonstrated that it would be possible to make the curves much longer than first contemplated by lengthening the outside and shortening the inside course.

The outside course is now two and one-half miles in length, with curves such that it will be possible for racing cars to travel at as high a speed as 100 miles an hour around them. By making the outside course longer it was possible to eliminate the W shape of the inside course by cutting one-half mile off the original plan. In this way sharp curves were done away with. Under the present arrangement the track passes the main grandstand three times and it is possible to see the cars on any part of the five-mile track.

Within a short time pipe from the gas plant of the Indianapolis Gas Company will have been laid to the filling space at the grounds and aeronauts entered in the national championship balloon race of the Aero Club of America, which will start at the speedway grounds on June 5, will be able to make trial trips.

June will be motor touring month for automobile clubs within a radius of 1,000 miles of Chicago, and the Western stock chassis race for the Cobe trophy, under the direction of the Chicago Automobile Club, will furnish the cause of this widespread activity.

The course over which the race will be run, on June 18 and 19—a small car race preceding the main event—is forty-two miles distant from Chicago, and is approached from every point of the compass by ideal highways. It lies in the northwest corner of Indiana, a State which has been unusually active in roadbuilding during the past eighteen months. The new highways are of macadam and even at this season are in prime condition.

That the event will attract a tremendous throng is conceded by every one, and a number of clubs have already requested information as to the possibility of securing grandstand seats in a body. The date chosen is as sure as future weather conditions ever can be sure, to fall in ideal touring weather, and the organization of touring parties from all cities within a wide area is under progress.

Under the direction of the bureau of tours of the Chicago Automobile Club data is being compiled showing the best routes from all directions. The services of the bureau, which possesses the largest touring files covering Western territory in existence, and which is only excelled in scope by the bureau of tours of the Automobile Club of America, has been placed at the disposal of all clubs which desire to utilize it.

Routine details of preparation of the course, as well as details of entry, policing and all other essentials to the proper conduct of the race, are progressing swimmingly. The contests committee of the Chicago Automobile Club—J. F. Gunther, A. J. Banta and C. G. Sinsabaugh—are neck deep in their labors. Their plans are being administered through Frank H. Trego, general executive, and so thoroughly has the field been covered even at this early date, that it is predicted that the conduct of the race will be more nearly perfect than any other ever held in this land.

Weekly runs to the scene of the course are being made by Chicago motorists, and the experts who have visited it have been unanimous in their praise. They unite in declaring that there is no other limit than that of motor possibilities to the speed which may be attained on the three straightaways.

Residents of Indiana towns along the prospective Crown Point-Lowell route for the Cobe trophy contest, to be held in June, are enthusiastic boosters for the event, and all kinds of inducements are being offered to influence members of the committee to approve of this or that location for the grandstand. Evidently the people of that district regard the affair as a two-day carnival, and they expect thousands of visitors to witness the great series of automobile contests.

Pending the formalities of the rules a number of motor car makers and dealers are preparing to enter cars for the contests, and the meeting promises to be the most comprehensive ever held in the Central West.

Suggestions as to the engine limitations in the two road races of the Chicago Automobile Club, scheduled for June 18-19, as made by the contest board are under consideration.

It is those rules for which the Chicago promoters are clamoring, because until they know just what cars will be eligible for the Western chassis races for the Cobe trophy and the light car event, which will be the curtain-raiser, nothing can be done in the way of soliciting entries.

As to the engine sizes that will be permitted, the Chicago Automobile Club is uncertain. When Chairman Hower of the contest board of the American Automobile Association was in Chicago recently he conferred with General Executive Trego as to the desires of the promoters and conveyed to H. E. Coffin, chairman of the rules committee of the Manufacturers' Contest Association, the information that Chicago believed that for the big cars to be one for the Cobe trophy, 525 inches piston displacement should be the limit, while in the light car event it should not be more than 275.

Chairman Coffin, after considering these, wrote Mr. Hower that he believed it would be better to reduce the limit in the light-car event and increase it in the Cobe trophy. He stated that a 4 by 4½ engine giving 226 inches of piston displacement, or a 4 by 5 giving 251 inches, would be about right for the little chaps, while in the Cobe trophy the limit could safely be increased to 575 inches, which would let in certain cars that are almost certain to be nominated if they are eligible. However, he added, if the club wished to stick to the 275 and 525 sizes he would favor a weight limit of 1,600 pounds in the light-car race and 2,400 in the Cobe trophy.

Just what action will be taken by the manufacturers remains to be seen, but it is believed they will give Chicago every consideration and do everything possible to make the Western meet a big success. They realize there may be conditions out this way that are different from those existing in the other parts of the country and for that reason they may heed the suggestions of the Chicago Club.

It is highly probable that a number of followers of the motoring game are asking the question: "Who wins in an endurance run?" and a very sane query it is at that. The point was raised in a discussion of a coming run, but the discussion terminated there and apparently has not been resived. It is one which should interest every entrant in an endurance test who is out with the idea of definitely demonstrating the efficiency of his car in actual competition with other models, in hard road driving particularly.

It hardly seems worth while to undertake a run such as the New York-to-Boston race and when it is all over find that fourteen cars have finished with perfect scores and the winner is found by drawing lots or any such option of fortune. It is sportsmanlike, of course, but with the trade interests involved in every endurance run, you might say, the buying public would really like to know not only where their favorite car finished, but in what condition. The management of any endurance run of any consequence would have no difficulty in securing the services of at least three capable engineers, who would not go far wrong in picking the car finishing the test in the best condition, and the final try-out for efficiency would prove of added interest to the event. A number of good sportsmen, who are also manufacturers, have said that they would welcome a technical committee, and it is logical to suppose that they would.

Indications point to a national good roads campaign as an outcome of the ocean-to-ocean automobile race to take place in June, for which the pathfinding is now in progress.

Already the Legislature of the State of Washington has appropriated $120,000 for the making of roads in the eastern part of the State, and Gov. Brady, of Idaho, has succeeded in getting his State to set aside $50,000 for the same purpose.

Only a fortnight ago the Staff of Kansas took action on good roads matters, and the Legislatures of several Southern States have asked for information relative to the best material for the making of roads.

Much of the enthusiasm for good highways has been inspired by automobile runs and contests, and it is but a short span from State to national action in the good roads cause.

Efforts will be made by Mr. Guggenheim to continue the good work, and the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition Commissioners from the various States have been asked to take the matter up with their respective Governors to the end that a transcontinental highway be built which will be a lasting motoring memorial to the exposition.

As examples of the craze to own an automobile Al Froehlich, of Chicago, shows hundreds of letters from all over the country telling of various valuable and almost valueless possessions which the owners are anxious to swap for some kind of a motor car. Among the offerings to Mr. Froehlich were seven cases of gingham, a pair of mules, several pieces of real estate, including clear lots in Texas and improved property in Omaha; a ferry boat, ten or a dozen mortgages, a small bottling works and two motor boats.

One farmer in Nebraska stated that he owned a splendid electric motor which had been used in churning and pumping water for the cattle, but his wife was so determined to own an automobile that she was willing to do the churning and pumping by hand, provided they could exchange the motor for a motor car.

Most of these traders want second-hand cars, according to Mr. Froehlich, with the result that the used car business is flourishing as it never has been before.

"As a matter of fact," said Mr. Froehlich, who has been familiar with the details of the motor car industry since its inception, "there is a scarcity of good second-hand cars. This condition of the market is due largely to the fact that owners no longer are victims of unscrupulous chauffeurs, for of recent years the owner learns every part and accessory of his machine, and its value and use, and is not victimized by co-operative fraud between the chauffeur and the dealer in sundries.

"A few years back a dishonest chauffeur was accustomed to criticise his employer's car until the latter concluded it must be no good, and of course disposed of it for the purpose of buying one which the driver recommended. The chauffeur made a fat commission on the purchase, and some dealer in used cars generally secured a good bargain, for in many cases there was absolutely nothing the matter with the car.

"To-day the owner is wiser, knows the prices of cars and accessories, and keeps himself informed about the accomplishments of all cars. The result is that now chauffeurs are willing to work for reasonable salaries, without banking on big commissions.

"Many of the used cars go to farmers who have learned that the modern automobile is not a mere toy for city people, but that well-made American cars are adapted to all kinds of roads and to all manner of purposes. The farmer realizes that it is cheaper for him to own a car than to be without one, and being familiar with gasoline and electric motors, he is about the wisest buyer on the automobile market."

"CY" LANDRETH JOINS LOUISVILLE TEAM.

CY LANDRETH is here. He arrived last night from his home in Kansas. In spite of his recent illness he looks splendid. He claims to be fifteen pounds lighter in weight than he was last year. Landreth, although enjoying fair health, is still weak. However, he hopes that he will regain his health with a few days' practice.

Landreth is almost certain to cover right field for the Colonels this year. He is a slugger. In sixteen games last season he ranked second in batting with a percentage of .377. It is believed that had he not met with an injury while sliding toward second base in a game at Toledo he would have landed the locals in first place by his heavy hitting. For a newcomer in fast company he proved to be the sensation of this league a week after he joined the Colonels. The moment he got hurt the Kentuckians' chances for the pennant were weakened.

The local fans will be pleased to learn that "Cy" is on deck. He will report to Manager Peitz for duty to-day. It is doubtful if he will don a uniform. Besides being a corking good hitter he is also very fast on his feet. In the few games he played he stole six bases. For a youngster who weighed 200 pounds this is going some. He is a fine fielder, covering lots of ground, and has a strong throwing arm. When seen last night he said:

"I am glad to be back in Louisville, as I am anxious to start training. I had a severe spell of illness, but I am glad to say that I have fully regained my health. I am still weak, but I expect to get stronger when I begin to practice with the boys. I have lost fifteen pounds in flesh, but this won't affect me; in fact, I think the loss in flesh will do me good."

PROGRAMME FOR NATIONAL RIFLE MATCHES.

Elaborate Arrangements Made For Contests Which Will Be Held At Camp Perry, O., This Summer.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Official announcement is made of the programme for the national rifle matches under the auspices of the National Board for Promotion of Rifle Practice and those of the National Rifle Association of America, which will be held on the Ohio State range at Camp Perry, Ohio, in August next.

The preparations for these matches are of the more elaborate scale than ever before and it is believed that the attendance will exceed that of any previous match. Lieut. Col. R. K. Evans of the United States Cavalry, who is on duty with the general staff and who has been executive officer of the national matches for the past two years, has been detailed by the War Department for this duty in connection with the coming national matches and this year will also act as executive officer for the National Rifle Association matches. He will have an enlarged personal staff and approximately one hundred regular officers of the army will be assigned to duty in connection with the match.

About one thousand enlisted men will be on duty at the range. It is expected that at least fifty teams representing the States and Territories, the Infantry, Cavalry, Navy and Marine Corps, and the Naval Academy, will be entered in the national match. Each team is entitled to twelve shooting members and three alternates, an aggregate of nine hundred. They are also entitled to three officers and are usually accompanied by more. In addition there will be a large attendance of unattached members of the National Guard and civilians who will participate in the individual matches, as well as teams from regiments, companies and rifle and revolver clubs drawn to the range by matches above mentioned and those of the Ohio State Rifle Association and Department of the Lakes Rifle Association and of the Ohio National Guard, which will immediately precede the national team match.

Congress has appropriated $12,000 for messing the competitors in the national team match, which will be done in the magnificent new concrete mess hall erected by the State of Ohio, in which 1,000 men can be fed at one sitting. Congress has also very materially increased the amount of money for prizes in the national team match, the national individual match and the national pistol match. The National Rifle Association has adopted the policy of returning to the competitors the entire amount of the entrance fees less the actual expenses either in the form of medals or cash prizes. The Ohio State Rifle Association will have a prize list far in excess of previous years and there will be the new matches of the department of the Lakes Rifle Association, which will be shot for the first time. The amount of prize money will thus be increased by from $6,000 to $10,000 and the whole programme is the most attractive ever offered for military rifle shooting in this country. The State of Ohio has generously placed at the disposal of the various organizations its thoroughly equipped and extensive range, with more than two hundred targets, without further cost than the necessary expense of operation. It will also furnish tentage and camp equipment to competitors.

A most striking change has been made in the programme for the national team match. Heretofore the teams have been entered as one class, with six prizes offered of $300, $200, $150, $100, $75 and $50. This year the teams will be divided into three classes to be known as A, B and C, respectively. This classification will be made on the standing of the teams in the last national match, the first fifteen teams constituting Class A, the next fifteen Class B and the remainder Class C. States and territories entitled to representation but not so represented in 1908, will be added to Class C. There will be four cash prizes in each class, as follows: Class A—First, the national trophy, given by the Congress of the United States, $450; second, $350; third, $300, and fourth, $250.

Class B—First, the Henry A. Hilton trophy and $350; second, $250; third, $225, and fourth, $200.

Class C—First, the bronze soldier of Marathon, presented by the Commander-in-Chief in behalf of the State of New York, and $300; second, $200, third, $175, and fourth, $150.

Every member of the prize-winning team will receive a bronze medal, the design for the three classes being different. The total prize money in the national match is thus increased from $875 to $3,200 and the number of prize-winning teams is increased from six to twelve. It will be noticed that the first prize for Class B is equal to the second prize in Class A and the first prize in Class C is more than the second prize in Class B, the second prize in Class B being equal to the fourth prize in Class A, and the second prize in Class C being the same as the fourth prize in Class B.

It might be expected that occasion would arise when a team in Class A might try a little jockeying in order to land a better prize in Class B than it could in Class A or in Class C than it could in Class B. This has been provided for by the adoption of a rule that no team shall be eligible to win a prize in a class lower than the one in which it shall have been rated for the year. Thus a team classified in C can win any prize in the match; those in Class B are eligible to the prizes in Classes A and B, while those teams which stood among the first fifteen at Camp Perry last year can shoot only for the prize in Class A. Teams in Classes B and C, making a total score sufficient to win any prize in a higher class must take the place and prize in the higher class to which such total score entitles them. No team shall be eligible to win more than one prize in the same national match. Hereafter each year the teams competing in the national match will be reclassified upon the basis of their standing in the national match immediately preceding.

Four territorial changes in national association leagues have been officially promulgated by Secretary Farrell as follows: Guthrie has been added to the Western Association; Duluth has been added to the new Minnesota-Wisconsin League; the Brinkley franchise in the Arkansas League has been transferred to Texarkana, and the Vicksburg franchise in the Cotton-States League has been shifted to Alexandria, La.

The veteran "Cy" Young is the most tireless worker in the Cleveland team so far as spring training is concerned.

JEFF GIVES UP ROAD WORK

Boston Critics Believe Big Fellow Will Not Train Any More.

CANNOT GET INTO CONDITION.

Sharkey, Corbett and Other Has-been Heavyweights Now After the Negro Champion.

OTHER GOSSIP OF THE RING.

JUST because James J. Jeffries has cut out road work for a few days, Boston fight critics declare the big fellow has given up all hope of ever getting into proper condition for a fight with Jack Johnson. Jeffries, however, does not confirm these reports. Jeff says the work he does each afternoon on the stage in his exhibition is enough to get him into shape.

Those who know Jeffries well, however, argue that Jim just hates the idea of training. He has had so much of it in his life that he has sickened at the very thought of going all over it again. If there was someone who could manage to get on a match with Johnson and beat the burly black, Jeff would not think of getting back into fighting harness again.

Since Tuesday night, when Tom Sharkey announced his desire for one fight with Johnson, Jeffries has seen fit to cut out his daily road work. Perhaps Jeffries believes that the sailor would stand a better chance of getting into condition for a match with the present holder of the title than he would.

Jim Corbett has made good and covered the $5,000 forfeit posted by Jack Johnson in New York. Corbett also declares he will proceed to brand the chocolate drop a big case of bluff if Johnson does not make good his recent promise to give Corbett the first chance after Jeffries.

Corbett is of the opinion that Jeff is not anxious to fight for some time to come and is anxious for Johnson to sign articles with him. Gentleman Jim also intimates that Johnson is a bluffer, first, last and all the time, but will give him a few more days to make good his promises.

Cyclone Johnny Thompson's manager, Larney Lichtenstein, is still hopeful that Battling Nelson and Packey McFarland will listen to public sentiment and give his man a battle. "All of the Eastern clubs stood ready to make good bids for a battle against Johnny, but both McFarland and the Dane seemed to have a big yellow streak concealed somewhere."

DOUBLE-HANGING

GREEN AND CARTER TO BE EXECUTED APRIL 16.

Gov. Willson Refuses To Interfere In Green Case—Pay Extreme Penalty At Louisville Jail.

Frankfort, Ky., April 3.—[Special.]—William Green, convicted of murder in Louisville, must hang on the same scaffold with William Carter on April 16. Gov. Willson this afternoon declined to interfere in the Green case, refusing an application for a commutation of the sentence. Green wrote to Gov. Willson, asking that his sentence be changed to life imprisonment, and the letter made so great an impression on the Governor that he sent to Louisville for the record. This he read, but he reached the conclusion that the verdict of the jury was right and proper, and the commutation is refused. The Governor gives the following reasons for refusing to interfere in the case:

"I have carefully read William Green's letter and it impressed me so that I sent to my Louisville office to investigate. I have read all of the testimony and record. It clearly justifies the verdict. While it was conflicting, as set out in the opinion affirming, the jury saw the parties and it was for the jury to decide. The verdict shows that the jury had no doubt, and the reading of the testimony gives me the same impression that hearing it gave the jury. I cannot say on the evidence, that I am convinced that the verdict was wrong or excessive, and I am constrained by my duty, after careful inquiry, to refuse the petition for pardon or for commutation of the sentence. The law is for the protection of society. It is my duty to uphold the law and the judgments of the courts unless later information makes it clear that a faithful officer should set them aside or modify them, and this is not clear nor even probable in this case. The application must be and is therefore denied."

No application for the commutation of Carter's sentence has been made to the Governor, and the double hanging will take place, according to the programme which has been arranged.

HIGH SCHOOL'S EVEN BREAK.

Louisville Boys Play Good Ball In Double Header At Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., April 3.—(Special.)—The Louisville High School baseball team played a double-header here this afternoon, taking on State University and Transylvania University in succession, with only an interval of thirty minutes. Each of the games was only seven innings, and in the game with State the Louisville boys did not seem to get settled down and lost by a score of 5 to 1.

In the contest, however, with Transylvania, which is considered here a better team than State's, the Falls City nine warmed up to their work and smothered their opponents by a score of 20 to 13, the game being a swatfest on both sides from start to finish. The game with State was good, clean ball on both sides, and the teams seemed to be pretty evenly matched, but High School at first did not seem to get on to Vivian, State's new pitcher. There was a high wind, which made the game a chancy one. The lineup in this game was as follows:

State.	Positions.	Louisville.
Johnson	Shortstop	Deffart
Plummer	Right field	Green
Hillenmeyer	Third base	Reiser, capt.
Gilmer	Centerfield	Ward
Ellis	Left field	Coleman
Bennett	Second base	Deaker
Wagilotts	First base	Tropey
Gower	Catcher	Stiles
Vivian	Pitcher	Abbett

The score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	—T.
State	0	0	3	2	0	0	0	—5

Abbett did some good pitching, the State scores being made through High School's fielding flaws.

In the game with Transylvania, High School substituted Roth for Green in right field. Green going to center and Wynood relieving. Green played the best fielding game that has been seen here in a long time. This game was a slugging match, the visitors piling up five runs in the first inning and Transylvania four. The final score was High School 20, Transylvania 13.

OXFORD FIRST IN GREAT BOAT RACE

Course Covered In Less Than Twenty Minutes and Result Startles the British Sport-Loving Public.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND PEOPLE SEE CONTEST.

PUTNEY, April 3.—In a nerve-racking struggle to-day Oxford won the sixty-sixth annual boat race from Cambridge, on the Thames, by three and one-half lengths, in the fast time of 19 minutes and 50 seconds. Ten days ago the Oxonians were not thought to have a chance, but to-day, under the leadership of a freshman, R. C. Bourne, who was rowing his first 'varsity race, they defeated a crew whose stroke, D. C. R. Stuart, thrice had brought his eight to victory. At the crack of the pistol, Bourne, the Oxford stroke, caught the water first and immediately showed his veteran opponent that Oxford was really to fight it out from start to finish. The crews quickly settled down to the most thrilling race of years, first the one and then the other forging ahead, until two-thirds of the course had been covered, when the dark blue's superior weight and stamina began to tell, and slowly they crept to the front.

By this time Barnes Bridge had been reached, clear water was visible between the boats and thereafter it was only a question of how badly Cambridge was to be beaten. Stuart called upon his men for a final desperate spurt, but, although the tired crew answered pluckily, the rally was short lived and did not cut down their opponents' lead, which at the end was being gradually increased. By this time the enthusiasm of the spectators on the banks of the Thames had grown to a fever pitch, and deafening shouts of "Oxford, Oxford," showed that the victory was a popular one.

Before the struggle was half over it was apparent that Cambridge had been overrated. The bow half of the boat was already showing signs of the gruelling contest, while the Oxonians were pulling easily and strongly. When the eights were approaching Barnes Bridge it was seen that No. 3 in the Cambridge boat was almost in a state of collapse, and at the finish the entire eight, except Stuart, were utterly exhausted.

Oxford's improvement during the past ten days has been little short of marvelous. From a ragged, ungainly eight, it developed into one of the best crews that has represented the 'varsity in years. The crew was not pushed at the finish, or might have lowered the time made in the race considerably. Evidence of the eight's rapid rounding into form is given by the betting records, which dropped from 20 to 1 against Oxford two months ago to 5 to 4 just before the race.

It was an animated scene as the throng hurried from city and country, coming by train, trams, motor cars and carts. Hundreds of brightly decorated small craft elbowed one another as they made their way toward the course from miles up and down the river in the presence of 100,000 people.

The race was rowed on the Thames between Putney and Mortlake and was won by Oxford by three and one-half lengths.

The contest between the two universities is historic as a pageant as well as a contest of sportsmanship. While veteran rowers like Guy Nickalls proclaim the crews of 1899 as inferior to those of the nineties, the enthusiasts to-day were worked up to the extreme over the result. Cambridge undoubtedly was the favorite, but the dark blues, the heaviest crew that ever raced, had shown remarkable improvement in the last ten days.

The popular hero of the day was the Cambridge stroke, D. C. R. Stuart, who had stroked three victorious crews against Oxford. R. C. Bourne was the Oxford stroke.

CATCHER GROVER LAND IN FIGHT WITH DEXTER.

New Orleans, April 3.—As a result of an altercation between Catcher Land, of Cleveland, and First-baseman Dexter, of New Orleans, during the game this afternoon at Pelican Park both men were arrested and locked up at the Tenth precinct station. A short time later they were released for a hearing Monday. The clash came when Dexter was declared out at first on a bunt fielded by Land.

McLeod Leads At Golf.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 3.—National Open Champion Fred McLeod, of the Midlothian Golf Club, Chicago, led the field in to-day's 36-hole United North and South open-gold championship, with a fast card of 148.

Gilbert Nicholls, of the Wilmington Country Club, was second in 152, and former Open Champion Alexander Ross, one of the local professionals, third in 155.

William C. Fownes, Jr., of the Oakmont Golf Club, led the amateurs with 163. William T. West, of the Philadelphia Country Club, second in 166, and Walter Fairbanks, the Colorado champion, third in 168.

The concluding event on the Country Club's schedule is the first annual mid-April event, booked for April 15, 16 and 17.

The Chicago American club has secured Second Baseman Patterson, of the Western League, on whom Cincinnati asked for waivers. Four clubs refused to waive and in the draw Chicago won.

BASEBALL CHAT.

"Deacon" Phillippe, of the Pirates, took better care of his pitching arm during the past winter than at any time during his baseball career. He is making an earnest effort to get back into form.

Manager McGraw is quoted as saying that young Simon is a second Ed Delehanty as a batsman.

* * *

The Boston National League club has turned Cecil Ferguson's protege, Pitcher Barrett, over to the Augusta (South Atlantic League) club.

Pitcher George Wiltse maintains that he did not weaken on the salary question with the Giants, but that the club acceded to his demand. Christy Mathewson also has been satisfied.

* * *

Pitcher Liebhardt, of the "Naps," has decided to rely once more upon his first love, the "spit-ball," with which he had such good results in the Southern League three seasons back.

* * *

Pitcher Chester Milton Brandom, the Kansas City recruit, says "there is no question about his holding his berth with the Pirates."

* * *

The Topeka (Western League) club has traded Catcher Estel Bartley to the Terre Haute (Central League) club for the veteran catcher, Louis Drill.

The Giants have picked up two likely players in O'Ham, of Baltimore, and McCormick, of Jersey City, both of whom McGraw says are fit for fast company.

* * *

If Arthur Irwin gets the place as secretary and business manager of the New York club President Farrell will get a good press agent as well as a good man to watch the turn-stiles.

Jesse Tannehill, having seen the Giants in action, declares that Manager McGraw "has gotten together the best team New York ever had."

* * *

Leifield is now the only left-hand pitcher in line with the Pirates.

Pitcher George Winter, of the Tigers, says that Mullin, his heavy-hitting teammate, is the hardest man in the American League to pitch to.

PORTLAND TEAM DEFEATS COLONELS

Local Amateurs Score An Easy Victory Over Louisville On Account of Pitcher Kaufman's Lack of Control.

AMATEUR baseball in Louisville received a stimulant yesterday afternoon at Eclipse Park, when the newly-organized Portland team, composed entirely of local players, defeated the Louisville Colonels by the score of 7 to 2. Very few fans saw the engagement because the weather was too cold for baseball and those who merely read of the game are apt to believe that Pelt's men were not trying. This is far from the truth. The members of the Louisville club played just as earnestly against the Portland boys as they did against the great New York Giants the day before. It was merely a reversal of form which is liable to happen to any ball team at any time.

The youngsters from the western part of the city deserve full credit for defeating the Colonels. They secured the victory honestly by playing the best ball. Young Pitcher Doherty, who twirled several games for the Butchertown team last season, was the chief stumbling block for Peitz's men. Though he has had but little experience against first-class players he twirled a magnificent game of ball against men who are trying for places on the Louisville team and deserved the glory that was his. He was under fire on several occasions with Peitz, Woodruff, Sullivan and Tate trying to get him rattled from the coaching line, but he was as steady as a clock.

Luck, of course, figured largely in the result, as is the rule in baseball contests. Kaufman, the tall twirler of the Louisville club, was a large part of the Colonels' bad luck. The Portlands made four scores off his delivery in the second inning, mainly because of his lack of control. Besides, the youngsters made several nice hits off his delivery when they were needed. The weather was probably too cold for Kaufman to show his best form.

Capt. Howard Williams ran the Portland team in splendid shape and he certainly gave the small band of fans a taste of what they may expect from the West End team during the coming summer. As a matter of fact most of his men played as if they were familiar with contesting against big league clubs. Dugan, in left field, D. Lally in center, Williams at short and Deeken at third base were especially deserving of praise. Deeken, though he dropped an easy fly, because of over-confidence, displayed the earmarks of a first-class third baseman, capable of playing in almost any sort of company. Some of his stops and throws could not have been improved on. H. Lally, at second base, also performed well. Dunleavy led the Colonels in hitting, securing three hits out of five times up. Tate, who played right field, also lined out a couple of nice ones. The showing of the Portlands was certainly a surprise. The score:

ROOT DEFEATS WALTHOUR IN ATLANTA SIX-DAY RACE.

Atlanta, Ga., April 3.—Leading his only rival by a wheel's length, Eddie Root, of Boston, won the six-day bike race here to-night from Bobby Walthour, of Atlanta. The three teams that were on even terms at the close of the long grind covered 965 miles and two laps. In the final mile sprint the following riders took part:

Root, for the team of Root and Fogler.
Walthour, for Walthour and Collins.
Cameron, for Cameron and Milten.
Cameron was left in the final sprint.

Young Otto Doing Well.

Young Otto is doing well on the other side. Shortly before sailing Leach Cross stopped him at the Fairmont A. C., but he has taken a new lease on life and has been knocking out the britishers in three and four rounds each. Otto has been matched to box young Josephs on April 26 for a $2,000 purse. Unless the Englishman is pretty clever and a hard fighter he is liable to get his bumps. Otto can hit as hard with either hand as any lightweight in the business. If you stand off and try to box him cleverly you stand a good chance of stopping one with your chin that will take the rest out of you. The only way to box him is to slam him and rough it a bit like Cross and Johnny Allen did. They didn't give him a chance to set for a hard punch and consequently took the heart out of him. Reports from England say that Josephs is a good one. The dope reads that he will have to be or he'll take second money when it comes to count the receipts.

LANGFORD KNOCKS OUT WILLE IN SECOND ROUND.

Philadelphia, April 3.—Sam Langford, the negro middleweight of Boston, knocked out John Wille, of Chicago, to-night in the second round of what was to have been a six-round bout, at the National Athletic Club. The Boston man hit the Western fighter almost where he pleased. Near the end of the second round Langford landed a short right to the jaw and Wille fell in his face. He was on his knees at ten and the referee helped him back to his corner.

Gotch To Quit the Game.

Chicago, April 3.—Frank Gotch, the champion wrestler of the world, stated here to-day that next winter would be his last season on the mat. The only reason he remained in the game for that length of time, he said, was because he wished a final clash with Hackenschmidt. He expects to fill the offer of the Melbourne promoters for a $13,000 end of the purse as his share, to meet Hackenschmidt next November. Gotch expects to raise Poland China pigs for the market when he retires. He owns more than 1,000 acres of land in Iowa.

Frank Owen, of the Chicago White Sox, is coaching the University of Michigan squad at Ann Harbor. He has signed his contract, but will not report to the club until April 9.

SOMERS BID LARGE SUM FOR ELBERFELD.

Did Charley Somers, of the Cleveland ball club, offer $10,000 for Kid Elberfeld?

In all past deals Somers has always come across with the coin when the addition of a star promised to strengthen his team, and no doubt he recently made such an offer for the "Tabasco Kid."

The New York Mail prints the following story from Columbus, Ga., where the Highlanders have been playing several exhibition games:

"Kid Elberfeld has joined the $10,000 circle of baseball beauties.

"Quite a breeze stirred in the camp of the regulars this morning when it became known that Chief Stallings had refused to part with Elberfeld to the Cleveland club for $10,000. Elberfeld's classy work on the trip has placed him in the list of priceless gems.

"President Somers, of the Clevelands, is a worried man over the end outlook for a weak infield this season. Terry Turner, the little midget shortstop, who punctured his throwing wing with the Naps on their spring training trip last year, will never be seen in a big league uniform again, and Bill Bradley, Lajoie's star third baseman, is practically in the same boat. Bradley recently submitted to an operation for his afflicted leg, and the reports from the Naps' training camp say it is probable that he is out of the game for the season at least, if not for all the time.

"It's due to this double misfortune that Somers is scurrying around for infielders. Somers began negotiations for Elberfeld, but on Stallings' positive refusal to part with Elberfeld, and the turn down of the $10,000 offer, the Cleveland magnate turned his direction to secure Neal Ball, Joe Ward, Earl Gardner or Jimmy Austin. If it understood that Stallings has offered him any two of the above-named quartet.

"Somers likes Ball, but he is not willing to put up the $5,000 ante asked by Stallings, but it is expected that the Cleveland man will come to terms before the week is over. It wouldn't be at all surprising if Somers paid a visit to Macon when Stallings returns to the training camp on Thursday."

Clabby Knocks Out Barry.

New Orleans, April 3.—Jimmy Clabby, of Milwaukee, knocked out Dave Barry, of Chicago, two minutes after the opening of the bout scheduled to go ten rounds before the Royal Athletic Club here to-night. A right hook to the jaw did the work.

Manager Lajoie is reported as worrying over the light batting of the Cleveland team.

FITZPATRICK'S STATEMENT REGARDING JACK JOHNSON.

Sam Fitzpatrick, the former manager of Jack Johnson, who is in San Francisco, has issued a statement about his business affairs with the heavyweight champion. His remarks follow:

"When Jack Johnson came to me two years and a half ago he had been fighting fifteen years and did not have a cent to his name. When we split up he had $10,000, the heavyweight championship of the world and advertising that would net him $50,000 a year for at least two years. That's my answer to Johnson's statement from Chicago charging me with being weak and easily imposed upon and getting the worst of it from Tommy Burns when the match was made.

"When we had this chance to get Burns I figured it was a good proposition for Johnson to fight Burns, even if he had to fight for nothing. He agreed with me and we took the best terms we could secure. The management spent $50,000 before it opened the gate, and, while the receipts were large, they did not figure on much profit. I was sure Johnson would win, and Burns must have been, for he insisted on everything. That fight made Johnson. He is good for $50,000 a year for at least two years if he will nurse himself along.

"He has a swelled head and will have to go his way. There is one thing, however, that Johnson will never be able to accuse me of: I never told him he could lick Jeffries. Johnson hasn't any punch, and if Jeffries is right it will be a shame to say what will happen. That may sound as if I was sore. It isn't that. Johnson knows I never gave him that kind of advice, and he would do well not to drive Jim into a corner."

238 E. COLLEGE.
THE CHARMING HOME OF MR. HARRISON ROBERTSON.
This is the only really modern house in the central quarter. It is about 3 years old, a 2-story tile-roofed stone-trimmed pressed brick, that was a high-class house when Mr. Robertson bought it, but about all he left was the outside walls. It is beyond question the most elaborate small house in Louisville. The woodwork throughout the house is ivory white, hand-rubbed; the reception hall is wood, paneled with a forestry decoration above; the parlor, a large room, has a beautiful mantel, with handsome dull brass dog irons, and is papered in silk velour; the dining-room, opening off the parlor, is exquisite. The decoration in this room is a burlap base to a plate rail, also above which is a Walter Crane peacock frieze. The three chambers are of nice size, splendidly lighted and tastily decorated; the bathroom and toilet are tiled. There is a furnace, natural gas, Ruud hot-water heater, electric light, etc., and on the rear of the lot is a stone garage, built especially for the purpose; price $8,000. Can be seen only by engagement. GARDINER & CO., 241 Fifth, near Jefferson.

FOR SALE—
DR. WALTER H. MacCRACKEN,
Of the University of Louisville,
Formerly of Chicago,
Made it his business to buy a home as soon as he familiarized himself with the city, and selected Eastover, because he thought it "infinitely more desirable a place to live than any other place in Louisville."
The layout of Eastover is typical of those beautiful north shore suburban towns of Chicago, and several of the homes in Eastover are exact reproductions of houses found in those towns.
The suburban towns of Chicago—Evanston, Kenilworth, Winnetka and others—are the most beautiful in America, and Eastover, a miniature reproduction, certainly holds first place in Louisville suburban real estate—it is just as different from any other subdivision ever laid out in Louisville as one thing bearing the same name could be different from another.
Won't you come out and see? It's very pretty, and the prices are low, $22.50 to $30.

GIVIDEN & CO.
A beautiful tract of land containing 18 acres on the Preston-street road, 2½ miles from the city on the pike; 100 yards from the electric-car station; lies beautiful and in a perfect square; can be subdivided into lots or used as a garden tract or to build a suburban home; surrounded by elegant neighbors; close to school and in a growing community. It is useless for us to tell you about the progress that Preston st. is making because the transfers will show you that more land has been sold out the Preston-street road in the past year than all of the rest of the interurban roads leading out of Louisville combined. This tract of land lies a short distance from the new Country Club and within 500 yards of two tracts which have recently been sold for from $500 to $750 per acre. In order to wind up a partnership business we will sell this tract containing 18 acres for $4,500 or will exchange for some city property at fair valuation. Now, do not take our word for this, but consult the records and see which way the wealth is going on the interurban lines and you will find that the Preston-st. road is leading in every way.
See us quick if you want a bargain.

A COUNTRY HOME WITH AN INCOME OF $6,000.
Owned by business man in Detroit, who will sacrifice it, as he is obliged to go to California on account of sickness and has no one to look after the property. It consists of 85 acres, of which 75 acres are in Concord grapes that will be full-bearing next year. Vines set out in 1906, and poled with new cedar posts and wired; 2 acres apples; 7 acres nice grove; ground level; no waste; an old house, hewn timber frame, 6 rooms; $250 would put in good order. Good barn, 20x50, hewn timber frame; two wells, splendid water; farm tools; a lake mile and a half square within half mile of house, good fishing. Vineyard has half-mile frontage on main traveled road between Detroit and Chicago; has a road on each side of it, and backed by main line of Michigan Central railroad, and one mile from town. WANTED— ACTUAL BUSINESS TRAINING SCHOOL.

Young men, with us, are not students, plodding through theory—they actually KEEP books, from start to finish! They DO everything—draw up, negotiate and enter every single business paper—intelligently understand all the different forms of notes, acceptances, etc.—become skilled in modern, quick ways of making each entry a photograph of the transaction. No classes! Each one is a bookkeeper, separate and distinct, taught individually. The teacher has been an expert accountant for 44 years, doing work all over the State. We instruct the same as if we were directing 30 or 40 bookkeepers in the same room, each for a different firm, and different line of business. The teacher claims to have the natural ability to make a young man a PRACTICAL bookkeeper all around. No theory! No textbooks! No copying! When you get through with us the Main-st. business men will take OUR certificate, without a word! Ask ANY of them—they know me! Just a certain number, and no more, will be received. Ask Mr. Oscar Fenley, president Bank of Kentucky, or anyone of 100 other men you chance to meet on the street. Address THOS. A. ALVEY, 518 W. Jefferson st., second floor.

WANTED—Make $30 to $45 a week; easy, quick; men, women, all or spare time, showing, taking orders, appointing agents; experience unnecessary; B. H. Huested, of Mich., writes: "Sold 11 one day." Geo. Two sales a day make $4.00 to $40 profit weekly; most wonderful, low-priced, valveless, wickless, oil, gas and air-burning stove ever invented; consumes 395 barrels of air to one gallon kerosene oil; saves 1-3 to ½ on fuel bills; not like those sold in stores; burns like gas, blue flame; no wick; no valve; no more dirty kitchens. Wm. Stevens, of Mass., writes: "Best stove out; no smoke, easily operated, perfectly safe." Not dangerous like gasoline; enormous demand; where operated causes excitement; people stop, look, 10 see, 8 buy; 30-day trial offer; all sizes; price $3.25 and up; get in early for territory; write to-day; this won't appear again. PUT ON TRIAL UNDER UNUSUAL CIRCUMSTANCES.

Chicago, April 3.—Robert E. Cantwell, a lawyer, who is under indictment in the Criminal Court for conspiracy to defeat justice in connection with a Chinese murder case in which he represented the defense, was placed on trial here late to-day under unusual circumstances. Cantwell strolled into court after the noon adjournment and made a demand for a trial. He had previously made two similar demands and under the law he would have been free at midnight to-night unless his last demand was granted. This seemed an impossibility at first, as the jurors and the Judges had all gone home, but the State's Attorney requested Judge McEwen to hold a special session and sent out for a special venire. Court was soon in session and in two hours the jury was in the box.

FRENCH WAITER WINS WORLD'S GREATEST RACE

Henri St. Yves, Almost Unknown, Lands First Place In the Marathon Derby At the Polo Grounds, New York.

REMARKABLE SHOWING BEFORE 30,000 PEOPLE.

Dorando, the Italian, Is Second, and Hayes Is Third.

SHRUBB AND LONGBOAT QUIT.

MEN OF THE LATIN RACES MAINTAIN A WONDERFUL PACE ALL THE WAY.

FINE SPEED OF RUNNERS.

NEW YORK, April 3.—Henri St. Yves, of France, won the great international Marathon Derby for professional runners at National League baseball park here to-day. Dorando Pietri, of Italy, was second; John J. Hayes, of New York, third, and Matthew Maloney, of Yonkers, N. Y., fourth. Tom Longboat, the Canadian Indian, quit the track in the twentieth mile and Alfred Shrubb, of England, gave up in the twenty-fifth mile. Both were completely exhausted in trying to keep the terrific pace set by the Frenchman. Shrubb made a game struggle from the twentieth to the twenty-fifth mile, but the pace was too fast and the distance too far for him.

St. Yves, the almost unknown, who figured but little in the forecasts of the race, covered the Marathon distance, twenty-six miles, 385 yards in two hours forty minutes and fifty and three-fifths seconds, a remarkable performance under the conditions, and finished with a fast sprint in good condition. Dorando was four minutes, forty-seven and three-fifths seconds behind the Frenchman, while Hayes followed the Italian across the finish line three minutes and fifty seconds later. No time was taken on Maloney, the fourth man. St. Yves took $5,000 of the prize money, Dorando $2,500, Hayes $1,500 and Maloney $1,000. Shrubb and Longboat go unrewarded for their efforts.

These are the net results of the greatest Marathon race ever run in America, and in all except in point of numbers of contestants the greatest ever run anywhere. Six of the best distance runners in the world, competing for a small fortune in prizes, brought out a crowd that packed the newly-arranged stands of the Polo Grounds to the point of standing room. The day was not pleasant for an outdoor function, but the 30,000 spectators, or at least that large majority who sat on the bleachers, put up umbrellas for protection against the gentle April showers which fell during the first hour of the race, or took the moisture in good spirit and did not let it lessen their enthusiasm.

HENRI ST. YVES.
Winner of the great New York Marathon.

It was 2:30 o'clock before the showers which threatened earlier in the day to spoil the spectacle New York had been waiting for began to fall. The crowd had assembled, however, or was on the way by this hour, and the rain did not interfere with the attendance. When the six runners came upon the field at 3 o'clock, Dorando appearing first, the showers had still further softened up the already soft turf course and there was a prospect that it would be a track of mud. Earlier in the day the course had been changed from five laps to the mile to six laps, since the smaller one would afford better footing for the runners.

* * *

Dorando Takes Lead.

At 3:10 o'clock the men were sent away with a pistol shot by "Big Tim" Sullivan. Dorando at once leaped into the lead at a rapid pace, closely followed by St. Yves, Shrubb and Longboat. Maloney and Hayes fell behind several yards and took up a steady trot. In this order they ran for five laps, Hayes dropping behind. Then St. Yves passed Dorando and began a sprint that brought the crowd to its feet. He gained sixty yards and finished the first mile in 5 minutes 14 seconds. There were many Frenchmen present and the band stirred their enthusiasm with the "Marseillaise." The short, choppy strides of the Frenchman did not impress the crowd, and there were cries of "Oh, he'll come back, all right," but the "dark horse" went along at a furious pace, and on the second lap of the second mile he caught up with Hayes and thus gained his first lap on the American.

Shrubb increased his pace in the second mile, opening up a few yards between himself and Dorando. The Italian sprinted and overtook him, however, and the Englishman fell back into third place. Longboat was pegging along easily behind Shrubb, while Maloney ran at an even pace, half a lap in the rear. Hayes was losing ground. St. Yves covered the two miles in 10 minutes 44 seconds.

There was little change in the third mile and the crowd watched Shrubb's tactics with interest. He seemed to be trying to worry Dorando by sprinting for a few yards, then falling back behind the Italian, or running at his elbow and talking to him. He did not follow his custom in previous races of taking the lead and gaining as many laps as possible. He played a waiting game and most of the crowd picked him to win. St. Yves gained another lap on Hayes in the fourth mile, but the little American only smiled and plugged away at the same even pace.

* * *

Shrubb and St. Yves Sprint.

In the fifth mile there was a touch of the excitement the crowd had waited for. Shrubb, unable to stand the sight of the flying Frenchman so far ahead, set out to catch him. He passed Dorando and soon cut St. Yves' lead to fifty yards, finally coming on even terms with him in the sixth mile. St. Yves looked uneasy and sprinted desperately, soon leaving Shrubb far behind. Shrubb laughed and allowed him to go, dropping back with Dorando and Longboat. The Italian then started out to catch the Frenchman, cutting his lead to thirty-five yards at the end of the sixth mile, the time for which was 35 minutes 51 1-5 seconds. Longboat seemed to have difficulty holding the pace in the seventh mile, which showed relatively no change. Hayes was lapped again by the leaders, and, although the band played "The Star Spangled Banner," the crowd standing with heads bared to the rain, the Olympic winner refused to be enthused to the point of increasing his pace.

The ninth mile brought Longboat to the front of the pack that followed St. Yves. There was an immediate response from the Canadian contingent as the lanky Indian loped ahead of Shrubb and Dorando. He had drawn up to within fifty yards of St. Yves in the tenth mile, when Shrubb started a sprint that soon brought him on even terms with the Frenchman. He passed St. Yves and finished the ten miles in 57 minutes 16 1-5 seconds. There were shouts from the followers of the French and English runners as these two continued to gain on the others. As they circled the course time and again, St. Yves almost touching Shrubb's elbow so close were they running, the crowd began to wonder how long the Frenchman's short, jerky strides would carry him at such a pace. "He'll quit at fifteen," was a prediction heard frequently.

* * *

Dorando Makes a Gain.

Shrubb and St. Yves gained two-thirds of a lap on Dorando and Longboat in the eleventh, the Englishman's intention evidently being to run the Frenchman off his feet. The two passed Dorando and Longboat for the first gain of a lap on them in the thirteenth mile. The fourteenth mile saw some jockeying by them. The crowd could not quite figure out whether the Frenchman was trying to worry Shrubb or was simply impatient because running second. He would sprint wildly for a time, gain the lead and then drop back to second place.

Hayes was a full mile behind the leaders at the beginning of the fifteenth mile, but was showing signs of waking up. Shurbb took nourishment and slowed up a bit, while St. Yves kept right on, his stride being quite as quick and even as at the start.

Dorando gained some of his lost ground in the sixteenth mile and the thousands of Italians on the bleachers went wild as he passed Hayes again. Longboat here showed signs of weariness and was losing ground. In the seventeenth mile St. Yves carried Shrubb along in a furious sprint, while Longboat suddenly stopped in front of his training stand and was rubbed vigorously by his trainers. After three or four minutes he resumed, but he was plainly leg weary.

St. Yves suddenly started at a speedy clip in the eighteenth mile, which brought him half a lap ahead of Shrubb in less than a mile. This was the first indication of Shrubb's weakening and he appeared to be using his utmost strength to prevent the Frenchman gaining a lap. Longboat about this time dropped out of the race, thoroughly spent.

St. Yves gained the coveted distance on Shrubb in the twentieth mile and there was a great roar from the crowd, while the band again honored the leader by playing the French national anthem. St. Yves' times for twenty miles was 1 hour 57 minutes 24 4-5 seconds, more than two minutes ahead of the Marathon record for the distance.

* * *

Men Run In the Dark.

Hayes was running strongly in the twenty-first mile and was cutting down his lost distance rapidly, while Shrubb had slowed almost to a walk. Shrubb sat down for three minutes in the twenty-second mile and was plainly out of it so far as first place was concerned. He was making a game struggle to hold second place, but both Dorando and Hayes were coming up on his position, and even Maloney was running with spirit.

The standing of the leaders at the end of the twenty-second mile was: St. Yves, 22 miles; Shrubb, 21 miles 3 laps; Dorando, 21 miles 1 lap; Hayes, 20 miles 5 laps.

It was now so dark that the runners could hardly be made out on the opposite side of the field, but the drizzling rain had ceased. Shrubb staggered on, now walking, now trotting, with evident effort, while Hayes was gaining at every stride, even cutting down St. Yves' safe lead.

"They can't beat the Frenchman now, unless he falls dead," was the opinion of the crowd as it turned its attention to Hayes and urged him to "go on and get Dorando." It looked as if Hayes might yet get second place, for Shrubb was practically out of it and Dorando was very tired.

On the first lap of the twenty-fifth mile Dorando passed Shrubb, reaching second place. A few moments later Shrubb gave up and staggered toward his dressing room, done for. From this point to the finish the crowd watched only the struggle for the second position, conceding that St. Yves would not "drop dead," and therefore must win.

Hayes continued to gain but was tiring, and it was evident early in the twenty-sixth mile that he could not overcome Dorando's lead for second place. It was about dark when St. Yves, with a sensational sprint, crossed the line, winner of the race and the photographers turned loose flashlights to get his picture. Dorando, Hayes and Maloney kept on to the finish.

Princeton Students Bet On St. Yves.

Princeton, N. J., April 3.—Considerable money was won by Princeton students on St. Yves, the winner of the Marathon in New York. Al Copeland, trainer of the University track team, had the French runner at university field for the last three weeks and each day the students watched his work with considerable interest. Several of the university's long-distance runners occasionally paced St. Yves in short relays. The Princeton students secured big odds in the betting.

Princeton and Penn To Play Chess.

Princeton, N. J., April 3.—Capt. L. W. Stephens, of the Princeton University chess team, announced to-day that he had accepted the challenge of the University of Pennsylvania for a dual chess match to decide the intercollegiate championship. The match will be played some time after the Easter recess, the date to be decided upon next week. The moves will be transmitted between Philadelphia and Princeton by telephone. Pennsylvania won the championship in the triangular league, composed of Cornell, Brown and Pennsylvania, while Princeton was victorious in the quadrangular league, composed of Harvard, Yale, Princeton and Columbia.

Harvard Beats Princeton.

Princeton, N. J., April 3.—Harvard defeated Princeton in a dual gunshoot here to-day by the score of 226 to 203. Harvard's score broke the intercollegiate record of 225 birds, held by Yale.

VIOLENT RIOTING

IN STREETS OF CHICAGO DUE TO STRIKES.

"White Wings" Attack Sweepers and Union Pickets Threaten Factory Hands.

Chicago, April 3.—Violent demonstrations, which required the presence of the police to quell, marked two of the labor disturbances prevalent here to-day. The most serious trouble occurred in the downtown district when a force of striking "white wings" attacked the streetsweepers who had taken their places. Bricks were thrown through windows and broomhandles were wielded by the infuriated strikers. Several were injured.

The second riot grew out of the tile-layers' strike. Employes of Dawson Brothers Tile Flooring Company were besieged by a force of union pickets. J. G. Dawson, the head of the firm, with a drawn revolver, kept the pickets from entering the building until the police arrived.

A bitter fight in the courts is being prepared by the Associated Building Trades Council against the injunction applied for by the Chicago Mantel and Tile Dealers' Association. The Building trades will have the support of the Chicago Federation of Labor and the American Federation of Labor.

ARRESTED ON HIS WAY TO FATHER'S FUNERAL.

Yesterday Harry Harrison, of 1222 Eleventh street, says he received a message informing him of the death of his father, Newton Henderson, a farmer, living near Bowling Green. Henderson says he had planned to take a train to attend his father's funeral last night, but he is now a prisoner at the county jail charged with being drunk and disorderly.

Patrolman Camozzi charges that Henderson was using profane language and walking about outside the gate at the Tenth-street station in a drunken condition shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Henderson asserts that he went to the depot with his wife who had just left the station on an outbound train and denies that he had been drinking.

The dollar dinner to be given April 13 under the auspices of the Young Men's Democratic Club will take place at The Seelbach. The hotel committee made arrangements for the dinner yesterday. Allen E. Smith, chairman of the speakers' committee, will announce the list of speakers at the meeting of the club on Tuesday night. The members of the club desired that Mr. Smith act as toastmaster at the dinner, but Mr. Smith will select some other well-known Democrat for that honor. Tickets are being purchased for the dinner in a most encouraging manner to the members of the club.

FARMDALE ADDITION ACRES AT AUCTION

1¾ Miles from the City on the Preston-st. Road

MONDAY April 26, 1909

Twenty minutes' ride from Fourth and Jefferson streets, just the time it takes to reach Parkland or Crescent Hill, 46 acres of the best garden land in Jefferson county; Preston-street road, 1¾ miles from city. Has been used by same tenant as a truck farm over 40 years. Will be subdivided into acre tracts, the house with 3 or more acres.

The great number of calls for small places convenient to the city are what prompt this plan of division; practically a small farm in the city.

Laid Out As City Lots Because It Will Soon Be City Property, But We Sell As City Farms

—IN ACRES ONLY—

The property on two sides adjoins the magnificent Audubon Park property of over 800 acres, on which is now going on the greatest improvement ever undertaken in Jefferson county, with all city conveniences, handsome gateways, macadam roads, beautifully terraced lawns; what is said to be one of the finest of golf links, a country clubhouse, which now has 500 members; a number of elegant homes being planned at this time. Land right here, immediately adjoining Farmdale, is now selling in lots at a rate as high as $4,000 an acre.

FARMDALE SUBDIVISION fully equals in fertility the best lands on the Bardstown road, that requires longer time to get to, and that is selling for $2,000 an acre or over. FARMDALE has the Okolona line along its entire frontage of 1,000 feet.

Monday, April 26, at 2:30 P. M. We Will Sell At Public Auction On the Premises.

Why should not this place be attractive? Why won't it increase rapidly and largely in value? It is easy to buy, but what about selling? Consider the points: Farmdale is on one side of a road; Audubon Park on the other. One place is being handsomely improved by a large land company that has the money and knows its business. It is making its property the most beautiful home place in our suburbs, is spending money on improvements on a scale heretofore unheard of in Louisville, and is MAKING VALUES, but it is making values for Farmdale just as certainly as it is for Audubon Park. Look across the road from Farmdale, and the question answers itself—the high elevation, the fertility of the soil, the progress of Louisville southeast. Consider acre value in property southeast from the city; this is where the town is going, and this particular tract is the highest and the richest, the best part of the section. Can this be surpassed for truck farming or country home, with the street cars at your door and the city your next-door neighbor?

ANOTHER SLUMP

In the Movement of Tobacco On Auction Breaks.

SALES LESS THAN HALF THOSE A YEAR AGO.

PRICES IRREGULAR WITH AN EASY TENDENCY FOR DARK.

FIGURES FOR THE PAST WEEK.

Saturday Evening, April 3.—There was another sharp falling off in the movement of leaf tobacco on the local auction breaks during the past week. Selling by auction aggregated only 621 hogsheads, while private sales were only 348. Private sales included 217 hogsheads of old Burley sampled for the Society of Equity for delivery on previous sales, 5 new Burley, 23 old dark and 103 new dark. Farm work is well advanced, the weather having been very favorable.

The 238 hogsheads of new Burley offered on the local breaks were as a rule of very poor quality, containing only a sprinkling of colory goods, and were in unsatisfactory condition, a number of hogsheads being soft and funked. Last week's prices were realized for medium and good red leaf, but an easier market was in evidence for common red in poor condition. There was a steady demand at unchanged prices for colory smokers, strippers and natural leaf fillers. Red fillers made up most of the few hogsheads of old Burley offered. Prices a few bids higher ruled for good and sound red leaf, but an easier tone marked the transactions in leaf of poor condition. Firmness prevailed for colory grades.

The movement of dark tobacco was unusually light. The air-cured was of poor quality, being for the most part of a rehandling type. The market was firm for extra long leaf and manufacturing leaf of a decided character; slightly lower for other grades of leaf, and a few bids higher for trash and lugs. The small offerings of fired or export leaf showed no change either in quality or condition or prices realized. Lugs met with better competition and finished the week only ¼c higher.

Auction sales for the week were 621 hogsheads and private sales 348, the total of 969 comparing with 2,415 in the corresponding week last year, 3,504 in 1907 and 3,385 in 1906. Total sales since January 1 were 38,303 hogsheads, against 57,435 for the corresponding period last year, 53,893 in 1907 and 64,637 in 1906. The week's sales were composed of 243 new Burley, 304 old, 378 new dark and 44 old. Rejections were 29 per cent. of auction sales, against 14 per cent. in the same week last year and 18 per cent. in 1907. Receipts were 792 hogsheads, against 1,876 last year and 1,741 in 1907. Receipts since January 1 were 29,594, against 48,482 last year and 43,763 in 1907.

WEEKLY REVIEW.

Saturday Evening, April 3.—While business in Louisville is not at the high tide of 1906 and the greater part of 1907, it is considerably better than a year ago, and is improving all the time. Leading barometers bear out this statement. Bank clearings, for instance, for the first quarter of this year, were the largest in the history of the Louisville Clearing-house, and while their large volume was due in good measure to the tobacco sales, enlarged business was also a big factor. The situation in local pig iron is the same as that prevailing all over the country, the market being dull, with a lower tendency. The conditions of the provisions market are unchanged. China is taking the better qualities of shirtings and bleaching cloths and India more fancy printing cloths, while South America absorbed staples and fancy cloths in fair quantities. The near Eastern markets appear more in the [illegible] than they did recently. Yarns advanced ¼d in sympathy with cotton, but buyers are very unwilling to pay higher prices, and only a moderate turnover was recorded.

Examine This Map Carefully

We show you in this map just where Jacksonville Heights is located. This shows you this land lying eight miles from the center of Jacksonville, Florida—"The Chicago of the South."

Jacksonville Heights is right now less than three and one-half miles from the present city limits of Jacksonville.

Jacksonville Heights lies less than two miles from the end of the street car line, and this line will shortly be extended. Property on this car line is selling to-day at $1,020.00 per lot for lots 100x250 feet.

Jacksonville Heights is but one and one-half miles from the great United States Practice Range. This land was purchased by the United States Government for a practice range after examining hundreds of sites in all parts of the United States. This location was finally adjudged the very best for the purpose. The United States Government paid a great deal more money for this land than the price we are asking for the land in Jacksonville Heights.

Jacksonville Heights is two miles from the Florida State Millitary Permanent Camp—a beautiful park that comes up to the edge of our land.

Beautiful Orange Park—one of the most famous winter resorts in Florida—adjoins our land.

Green Cove Springs, famous for its curative mineral water—and a magnificent resort—is but one mile from Jacksonville Heights.

One portion of Jacksonville Heights fronts on beautiful Doctor's Lake, a navigable bay or inlet of the St. Johns River.

You never have had in your whole life, nor you never will have again, an opportunity to invest your money in a proposition that has the unlimited money-making possibilities that this one has.

You can't afford to wait one minute after reading this announcement before you sit down and fill out the coupon and send your remittance for first payment on either a ten, twenty or forty-acre tract in beautiful Jacksonville Heights.

You do not have to see this land in order to buy it. You have our guaranty—you have Senator George W. Deen's statement as to just what this land will do for you—you have read the indorsements on this page of the leading bankers and business men in Jacksonville as to the merit of this proposition—you have our written pledge to refund your money if you are not satisfied.

You should not hesitate—but fill out the coupon on this page to-day and mail it to us at once, with remittance for first payment in accordance with our prices and terms.

Act right now.

Do not be one of those who wait until the last moment and then be unable to secure one of these beautiful farms at the rock-bottom price and easiest terms.

Florida Soil Is Very Rich

Florida soil is the most prolific of any in the world and the soil in Jacksonville Heights is among the best to be found in the whole State.

This soil for the most part is a rich black, sandy loam, with clay subsoil. It requires no cultivation as the rainfall in Florida is abundant and the clay subsoil retains this moisture so as to nourish the growing crops.

On the soil three or more crops can be raised every year. The climate of Florida is such that growing crops mature magically and the produce comes onto the market at a time when the highest prices are realized.

On this land cabbages, Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, Bermuda onions, celery and all other vegetables thrive and flourish. All citrus fruits can be raised with little effort, and pecans make a staple and enormously profitable crop.

What This Soil Will Produce

The soil of Jacksonville Heights is especially adapted for the growing of fruit and vegetables.

Any earnest, intelligent, energetic and ambitious man can make anywhere from $150 to $1,000 clear profit out of this land, growing garden truck for market.

Irish potatoes, sweet potatoes, cabbage, lettuce, beets, beans, radishes, Bermuda onions, turnips and celery will thrive and flourish and bring sure returns for the time and trouble expended in cultivation.

Oranges, tangerines and grape fruit in many sections of Florida land that a few years ago was sold at very low price simply for the timber is now producing from $500 to $1,500 per acre clear profit.

Jacksonville Heights has outlet by water and rail to the markets of the world. The Atlantic Coast Line skirts the edge of this land and it is traversed by navigable streams that empty into the beautiful St. Johns River—a stream that in its course to the ocean carries magnificent passenger and freight steamers to all parts of the globe.

This direct steamship and railroad connection provides the cheapest possible freight rates to all sections of this and other countries.

Transportation to This Land

The Atlantic Coast Line R. R. is in close proximity to Jacksonville Heights and the Heber Turpentine R. R., which at present traverses the tract, should eventually be extended to connect with the Atlantic Coast Line R. R.

The Jacksonville electric road now runs within two miles of this land, and will, no doubt, be extended in the near future right through it. This will give direct, convenient and cheap transportation to the City of Jacksonville.

You can go by steamer by way of the beautiful St. Johns River from Jacksonville to Orange Park, adjoining our land, in forty-five minutes. This is a delightful trip through beautiful, tropical scenery and is a favorite journey of thousands of tourists who come to Florida to get away from the rigors of the Northern Winters.

Steamers will also be put into commission to make the trip to Jacksonville by way of the St. Johns River and Fishing Creek to the landing at Heber's Mill, and connecting with the tramroad to the heart of Jacksonville Heights.

JACKSONVILLE BOARD OF TRADE

Jacksonville, Fla., March 16, 1909.
Senator George W. Deen, President Jacksonville Heights Improvement Co., Chicago:

Dear Sir—In reference to the lands acquired by your company in this county for the purpose of developing into truck farms and suburban home sites, I have examined these lands quite thoroughly, and with the improvements which you propose I am satisfied these lands will sell readily at from $50 to $100 per acre.

I believe a great many of our own people will be glad to purchase these lands under the conditions set out by you in our verbal discussion of this matter. Several members of my committee who made the trip with you I understand have written letters of commendation and I desire to tender this for whatever service it may be to you. You may enter my application for 40 acres, as I desire to make one of the first selections. Yours very truly, WILLIAM BRESTON,
Chairman Immigration Com.

THE METROPOLIS
Carter & Russel Publishing Co.; W. R. Carter, Editor, Jacksonville, Fla.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 16, 1909.
Senator George W. Deen, President Jacksonville Heights Improvement Co., Jacksonville, Fla.:

My Dear Sir—I feel it a very pleasant duty to cordially commend you for the enterprise of yourself and associates in purchasing for development that large tract of land in Duval county, which I understand you are to cut up in ten, twenty and forty-acre farms to be known as Jacksonville Heights. What this county has long needed has been just exactly what you are now proposing to do, and it has been a wonder to me that enterprising men have not seen the great possibilities before. However, now that you have blazed the way, I trust that you and your associates will be as successful as you deserve. I was really surprised and delighted to see with my own eyes the magnitude of your purchase, and I know the land is well adapted to farming and trucking purposes, but in my opinion one of the greatest advantages is the fact of its proximity to Jacksonville, a city that is sure to become one of the leading cities of the South. Wishing you success, I am, yours truly,
W. R. CARTER, Editor.

WILLIAM A. BOURS & CO.
Wholesale Hay, Grain and Feed, Jacksonville, Fla.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 15, 1909.
Mr. George W. Deen, President Jacksonville Heights Improvement Co., Jacksonville, Fla.:

Dear Sir—I beg to say that in company with several of our prominent citizens I visited your body of land in close proximity to our city, and I am very much pleased with its location, quality of land, and the ease with which it can be tilled. It will be specially desirable and well adapted for farms and I do not hesitate to recommend it as a good thing for the purchaser, as well as being an important factor in developing our county and helping our city. Yours very truly,
W. A. BOURS.
(Mr. W. A. Bours is the president of the Jacksonville Board of Trade.)

WALTER HAWKINS
Packer and Shipper of Fancy Fruits and Vegetables, Jacksonville, Fla.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 13, 1909.
Senator George W. Deen, President Jacksonville Heights Improvement Co., Jacksonville, Fla.:

Dear Sir—I had the pleasure on yesterday of going over the lands recently purchased by your company, situated as they are almost at the very door of our beautiful and progressive city. I feel that its location is ideal, being located within about 5 miles of the courthouse and upon a splendid shell road and within a few minutes' drive to our city.

I must say in my opinion your lands are well suited for farming and garden purposes, as well as for summer property, and being in close touch to the beautiful St. Johns river, you have a great proposition to offer to the homeseeker. With our delightful climate and health conditions, under no country more desirable.

As evidence of my good faith in your proposition, you will please enter my order for the tract of land which I selected. Yours very truly,
WALTER HAWKINS.

(For sixteen years Mr. Walter Hawkins was Traveling Passenger Agent for the railroads of Florida and is thoroughly familiar with every portion of the State.)

RENFROE REALL ESTATE AGENCY
Jacksonville, Fla.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 12, 1909.
Senator George W. Deen, President Jacksonville Heights Improvement Company, City:

Dear Sir—I had the honor of being one of the members of the Immigration Committee from the Board of Trade of our city that went out yesterday to look over the land which you are offering for sale, and it is with great pleasure that I recommend this to any one who wishes to buy land for truck farming or any agricultural purpose. Having been a farmer myself some time, I feel that I know something about the value of land, and I can highly recommend yours. I think that within a short time this land will be worth several times what you are asking for it and will fully make good any statement you have made. Yours truly,
H. A. RENFROE.

Our Wonderful Offer!

We are going to give every man and woman in this broad land an opportunity to procure one of these ten, twenty or forty-acre tracts in Jacksonville Heights at a ridiculously low price and upon the easiest possible terms.

To all of those who failed to send in their applications in time to secure a farm in St. Johns Park we say—take advantage to-day of this chance to secure a farm in Florida that will yield $5,000 a year profit or more, according to the size of the tract purchased.

We are going to sell this land at exactly the same price and upon the same terms as we did the St. Johns Park lands, but—

This offer remains open for a short time only.

This gives you ample time to make up your mind whether you are going to toil for the rest of your days in the congested cities or on the barren farms of the North and West—or whether you are going to come to Florida and live in comparative ease on a tract of land that will make you independent for life.

We want earnest men and women to come to Florida and demonstrate what this land will do; and we are making it easy for you to acquire one of these wonderful tracts of land—upon which every known vegetable and fruit will thrive and flourish—and where you can raise three or more crops a year.

You have our ironclad money-back guarantee that this land is exactly as described; you have Senator George W. Deen's personal guarantee to refund your money—you have the indorsement of the leading business men, bankers and professional men of Jacksonville that this land is exactly as we represent it.

The time for you to act is right now.

A few cents a day will place you in a position where you can snap your fingers at Fate and live in a land of Prosperity and Plenty.

We urge you to fill out the coupon without delay—and thus be sure of getting one of the first tracts of land in beautiful Jacksonville Heights.

Read every word of this advertisement—take time by the forelock and do not put yourself in the class with those who will say later—when this land has doubled and trebled in value—when it is peopled by happy, prosperous inhabitants—living in luxury in this Land of Opportunity—"It might have been."

An Opportunity of a Lifetime

Do you remember the time not long ago when the far-sighted men who invested in property and lands in the Western cities were looked upon as dreamers? Haven't you often wished that you were one of these dreamers?

Cities of the West that less than fifteen years ago were nothing but small towns have grown to be cities of from 50,000 to 350,000 inhabitants; and the men who were wise enough to grasp the opportunities have become wealthy, and in hundreds of cases millionaires—simply by buying lands and property in these places and participating in the enormously increasing land values.

The situation in the South, and especially in Florida, is precisely the same to-day as it was in the West and Northwest some years ago.

Here is a land too long neglected that is just commencing to wake up to its possibilities. It has been endowed by Nature with everything necessary to make it an ideal section of God's Footstool. No climate in the world can compare with it. Its soil is rich and fruitful, and will produce almost three times as much in actual money crops as any other section in the world. Its outlets to the markets of the world by water and rail are unexcelled, and it is closer to these markets than most of the highly prosperous sections of the North.

Jacksonville, Florida, is destined to be the metropolis of the South, is the most favored of all the cities of this section.

The land and the soil immediately surrounding this city is the finest in the world, and will produce practically everything grown in any Northern State and many others that no other State can boast of.

Jacksonville Heights, the property now being placed on the market by the Jacksonville Heights Improvement Company in ten, twenty and forty-acre tracts, is but eight miles from the courthouse of Jacksonville and less than three miles from the present city limits. Part of this section is but two miles from an electric car line and but one and a half miles from a section of the city where lots are selling as high as $1,000 a lot—100x250 feet.

The City of Jacksonville is rapidly growing in this direction, and it will be but a few years when this whole tract will be within the confines of the city.

Now is the time for you to make up your mind to invest in land that will provide an income for life and make you independently rich. It is an opportunity that comes to you but once in a lifetime.

You can't afford to wait. This land will be snapped up eagerly, and you should take advantage of the once of this one great chance for you.

Read carefully our terms and prices and fill out the coupon on this page to-day and mail to us at once with remittance for the first payment. You will never regret it.

Remember 17c a day pays for a 10-acre tract, 34c a day pays for a 20-acre tract, and 68c a day pays for a 40-acre tract.

The Time to Buy Is Right Now

Right now is the time to make up your mind to buy land.

If you wait very much longer you will not be able to get an acre of good, tillable land in Florida—because it will all be sold.

The farmer of the North, discouraged over the poor returns for his labor and his pains, on his unproductive soil, has turned longing eyes toward Florida and is investing his money in Florida farm lands; the wage-earner of the North, tired of the oppression and machine-like servitude of latter-day business life, is investing his savings in Florida land, where he can live in a climate that is ideal the year around and be his own master.

We are giving you an opportunity to participate at the very start in the great industrial awakening of Florida.

We are making it easy for you to own a tract of land that under proper cultivation will yield you anywhere from five thousand to ten thousand dollars per year clear profit—according to the size of your tract.

We are making it possible for any man or woman who can save a few cents a day to provide him or herself with a sure income for the rest of their natural lives, and provide handsomely for the future of those depending upon them.

We are making it possible for you to procure rich farm lands at a ridiculously low price and upon the easiest possible terms.

We are the pioneers in the land development of Florida. We were among the very first to recognize the possibility in its rich, fertile soil and its magnificent climate.

We were among the first to give to the world the information that on Florida soil you could produce three or more crops a year—and that on ten acres of this land you could realize more profit than on 160 acres in the frozen North.

We point with pride to hundreds of happy, prosperous families who are now living contented on their own farms in this great State on land which we sold them.

We can refer you to hundreds of others who have purchased farms from us but a short time ago and who to-day would not take double what they paid for their land.

We know that this land we are offering you in Jacksonville Heights will, within five years, be populated with progressive and prosperous families.

We know that this land will increase wonderfully in value in that time.

We know that this is the opportunity for the poor man to become independent—for the wage-earner to throw off his shackles—for the man with small means who wants to invest his money in the safest and surest way.

Remember that the terms and prices we are offering you to-day on this land in Jacksonville Heights are for 60 days only. Land values are advancing in Florida by leaps and bounds.

Act at once!

Fifty Minutes From Jacksonville

You can go to Jacksonville Heights in an automobile from Jacksonville in less than fifty minutes. This trip takes you through the beautiful residence portion of the city over a magnificent shell road right up to the land. The roads about this land are among the best in the County of Duval, and many improvements in this line are in contemplation.

The County Commissioners of Duval County have just authorized an appropriation for a bond issue of one million dollars, all of which is to be spent in the building of good roads.

Jacksonville Heights will be the first section in this county to receive the benefits of this huge appropriation.

Already a beautiful shell road is being built from the City of Jacksonville to Orange Park, a magnificent winter resort which adjoins this land. Good roads are the harbingers of prosperity everywhere; the farmer needs good roads to carry his produce to market.

Senator George W. Deen

President, Jacksonville Heights Improvement Company.

I believe in FLORIDA.

I believe so much in the future of Florida—the RICHNESS of its soil—the ALLURING QUALITIES of its CLIMATE—that I have invested heavily in its land.

Some people say TOO heavily.

This may be so; but I wish I had a GREAT DEAL MORE than I have.

I am the man who sold about 40,000 acres of land in St. Johns County, Florida, in TEN, TWENTY and FORTY-ACRE TRACTS, in less than THIRTY-FIVE DAYS. I did this by advertising. Advertising in this day and age is the lever that moves the business world.

I have spent a lot of money advertising the resources and the possibilities of FLORIDA—I expect to spend a GREAT DEAL MORE. I have told the people of the North and West, the Northwest and the Southwest—and even the people of the different countries of the civilized world—just what could be done in Florida on TEN ACRES of LAND. I have never exaggerated one iota—I have never departed from the truth—because I DID NOT HAVE TO.

I know that some of my statements that were read by the conservative farmers and workingmen of the North were looked upon as exaggerated statements of conditions in the GLORIOUS STATE—but I have PROVED to hundreds of them that I was really CONSERVATIVE in all my statements regarding Florida.

I have proven it to them in the very BEST WAY POSSIBLE. They have come to Florida—have LOOKED at the land that they purchased through my advertising—and many of them have decided to STAY RIGHT HERE and start in early to CULTIVATE THEIR LAND. Many of them have come before—have been amazed and astounded at what they have seen in Florida and have gone back North to spread the gospel of the LAND of OPPORTUNITY—FLORIDA.

I have demonstrated to my own satisfaction and to many hundreds of people besides that TEN ACRES of FLORIDA LAND will produce more than 160 acres in the NORTH.

This is not a THEORY—it is an ACTUAL FACT!

It is being done to-day in many sections of Florida.

There are THOUSANDS of people all over the country that failed to make application for farms in St. Johns Park in time to secure one.

I had no idea myself that this land would go so fast. The wonderful success of this first allotment of Florida land, however, convinced me that the people at last were AWAKENING to the POSSIBILITIES of this great State. This being the fact, I have decided to give every man and woman in this broad land another opportunity to secure a FARM in FLORIDA for 17c A DAY that will yield $5,000 A YEAR.

I want you to read EVERY LINE of this announcement. I give my PERSONAL PLEDGE that the land I have placed on the market known as Jacksonville Heights is the called because it is eight and one-half miles from the heart of Jacksonville—the fastest growing city in America, is just as represented.

This is a tract of land that I intended to hold for ANOTHER YEAR at least—because it is going to INCREASE ENORMOUSLY in value. There were so many disappointed ones clamoring for a Florida farm, however, that I made up my mind that I would give the people of this country—the farmer, the wage earner and all who are dissatisfied with their condition in life—ONE MORE CHANCE to become independent in the LAND OF SUNSHINE.

I urge you to send in your application with MONEY FOR FIRST PAYMENT on one of these farms to-day. Don't wait! You are fully protected by our IRON-CLAD MONEY-BACK GUARANTY—if you wait too long this land will all be gone and you are going to miss an OPPORTUNITY of a LIFETIME.
